Research proposal condemned
19 law professors sign protest letter
By ROBERT FANNAT
National law school professors condemned a faculty senate committee proposed to a public letter released last Friday, describing it as a "serious miscue" that was contrived with "false and misleading information.
The letter charges that the proposal, which would require faculty senate commitee members to sign a statement stating the proposal's impact on certain "national interests," is in response to a report by the Senate Committee's chairman, defending the proposal would act as "merely a guide for contributions flashing across the breathless testimonials of miracles faced singers praising the Lord, and the two young lovers

Every year more than 2000 foreign students come to the University and face a myriad of cultural differences. Saraogi, a Southeast Asian native, said this was noted by what he calls "a preoccupation with undergraduate and graduate, studying at the University."

"The first two weeks were tough," said the Bengal student. "Here I have to study all the time, and when I hear a plane it's not a scary feeling." According to the Saraogi, "the most difficult thing about being here is that I am away from home and my parents will not be able to give me support." He added that the only way to prevent the total secularization of American society was to get rid of the government into different hands, according to the New Right.

"Peace is a nice thing. There is no way I'm going to leave... unless they kick me out."

TV preachers: a new political force?

The New Right was looking for issues on which they could rally people's support, and social issues filled the bill. "While the Old Right had concentrated on economic and foreign policy issues, the New Right emphasized boring, attention-grabbing, pornography, and moral values and politics," said Stewart Hoover. "The New Right is seeing the support of conservative religious groups such as Catholics and Evangelicals, Radarley said.""The New Right is looking for issues on which people can rally."

But to University Games of Marina Del Ray, California, Spring Fling is the drama of promoting a tournament of the world's longest throwing ring. The rings, which are known as "aerobies," are used on college campuses and at universities in countries around the world.

According to Berman, "The aerobie is a fluorescent orange flying ring. It's easier to control and throw much farther. It's like a frisbee."

"I bought an aerobie in New England this summer," he continued. "I liked the idea and I saw a friend do it." He added that although many people think the aerobie is a Japanese import, it was actually developed by a French company in the United States. In addition to being adjustable, Berman said that many people find the aerobie easier to throw than a frisbee."

The aerobie is really a frisbee that's been designed so that it flies farther than a frisbee.

"I'm happy to have a Spring Fling promotion," he said. "It's easier to control and throw much farther."

19 Law Professors Urge Rejection of Senate Proposal

To the Editor:

The Senate Committee on Faculty Rights and Responsibilities, in its report on the current DP Board of Managers, did not act in good faith in the best interests of the university community. The committee's actions were, in our judgment, irresponsible and unethical, and should not be endorsed.

We urge the Senate to reject the committee's recommendations and to promote a more transparent, accountable, and democratic process for the selection of new board members.

Sincerely,

3. Respect sources. Ensure that the sources you cite are reliable and trustworthy.
4. Maintain integrity. Avoid conflicts of interest and disclose any personal connections that may affect your reporting.

We encourage our readers to hold us accountable and to demand the highest standards of journalism from all media outlets.

U. student first American to receive Eton award

By LESLIE KAYER

Wharton and College senior Armin Rusis will receive the 1986 Annenberg Fellowship from Eton College. The fellowship, which the University will provide the first time next year, is designed for American students to go beyond teaching.

The Annenberg Fellowship is available to students in their junior or senior year at a university and is designed to help students to pursue a degree in the liberal arts.

Wharton and College senior Armin Rusis, whose home is Franklin Square, will serve as the University's representative to Eton College out of 17 other applicants from the University. Rusis said his purpose at Eton will be to "pursue a career in teaching and coaching." He said another reason for his application was that he was looking for a new challenge that his new position will offer.

"I'm not sure if I will be a teacher—possibly assisting teaching, another part of it is assisting coaching," he said. "In my case it will be crew." Rusis said his purpose at Eton will go beyond teaching.

"The general responsibility is being Penn's representative and the American representative there," he added, saying that he feels the pod lion will be difficult but not impossible. He explained, "I don't think there will be any problem necessarily," he explained. "I'm not sure of some of the questions about American culture and sports." Rusis added that the University will not have the opportunity every year that Rusis will have other responsibilities in addition to teaching and coaching while in England.

"It was a church camp counselor for three summers and the boys I worked with were 14 years old," he added. "I'm going to take advantage of what they have after the term is finished.

"I had decided, either getting a job or going back to grad school, which is one of the best reasons for it," he said. "Who knows where my interests will lead to after that?"

Next summer, he will work with the boys in their residence halls and enjoy some of their questions about American culture and sports.

Rusis said that the new program has had a good response from the applicants from the University. According to Director of International Programs James Yarnall, the fellowship may not be open for another four years.

"It may not be a teacher but he will certainly assist in teaching with a special emphasis on American history, literature and culture," Rusis added. "I'm interested in younger people."

The Annenberg Fellowship to Eton is funded by former United States Ambassador to Great Britain Walter Annenberg, and this marks the first year any university will send a student to Eton.

To welcome potential new residents to the city, and dispel some myths about housing in New York, we have published a book called "Manhattan Moves." It's the ultimate insider's guide to apartment hunting in the Big Apple.

Manhattan Moves' helps you set your sights on the right type of apartment and location. It takes you on a tour of the city's neighborhoods, introduces you to the available housing, gives you vital facts about transportation, housing laws, renting, sharing, and much more. We also give you advice on actually finding the apartment you're looking for. It helps you find the hottest listings, tells you how to canvass, and how to select a broker.

Send for a free copy of "Manhattan Moves." Today. It wasn't written only a year ago, but it definitely is getting very "moving" in the right direction.

We welcome graduation parties and alumni reunions. In addition to our regular hours, we will be open for dinner on Sunday, May 18th.

Macintosh Plus

Macintosh SL2K

Now that you've made it through college, ask your parents for a graduation present to help you get through life.

A Macintosh personal computer.

If you're headed off into the business world, we highly recommend our new Macintosh Plus. Between its one megabyte of RAM, 128K of ROM and double-sided 800K internal disk drive, it lets you put all the power of a corner office on a single corner of your desk.

If your parents buy the idea of a Macintosh, but feel like maybe they've donated enough to your future the past four years, there's always our newly enhanced Macintosh 512K with its added 800K internal disk drive and 128K of ROM.

It's considerably more affordable, yet still has enough power to run hundreds of leading software programs. Besides, you can always upgrade your Macintosh 512K up to a Macintosh Plus later.

Of course, with either Macintosh, you get our advanced point-and-click mouse technology that makes using them easier than passing Pinball Theory 101. So you can immediately be productive without taking a course in remedial computing.

To learn more, visit your campus microcomputer center. Soon.

Because once you're out of school, you're out of luck.

Law School profs’ letter

"I haven’t heard anybody defend this [proposal],” Francione said yesterday. “Everybody I’ve talked to thinks this is just a travesty.”

He added, however, that the statement could still be passed in the Faculty Senate because of the large number of representatives from the Medical School who believe in the proposal.

But he said he was more concerned about the implications of the proposal itself, and the “repressive atmosphere on this campus.”

“I think that the Faculty Senate, under this current leadership and under its next leadership, is steering the University toward more repression and is becoming more reactionary,” he added.

Law School Professor C. Edwin Baker said last week that "virtually everybody" present in the Law School on Friday afternoon signed the letter. He said he feels the statement represents a mistaken notion about free speech.

"As a general matter, the view that along with freedom goes responsibilities — as a proposition — is a misconception," Baker said, adding that the professional training of lawyers may have made them more sensitive to this issue than people outside the legal profession.

The statement was also criticized by Law School Assistant Professor Gary Francione, a co-signer of the letter and an animal rights activist.

"I haven't heard anybody defend this [proposal],” Francione said yesterday. "Everybody I've talked to thinks this is just a travesty.”

He added, however, that the statement could still be passed in the Faculty Senate because of the large number of representatives from the Medical School who believe in the proposal.

M. Track does well at Georgetown
Bloomberg, Schatzle pick up firsts at Invitational tourney

By EVAN SPIEGEL
Perhaps pride was the main motivation for the Penn men's track team to take part in the Invitational tourney at Georgetown.

"It was not a very important meet as far as the team went," distance runner O. Michael French said. "This was because the meet was not important to the runners and the team. The Invitational tourney is a great opportunity for the runners to compete and continue with their training for the upcoming season.""The Invitational tourney is a great opportunity for the runners to compete and continue with their training for the upcoming season."

On Saturday, April 18, the team had a strong showing in the 5,000-meter run, with sophomore Gary Hippensteel finishing first, followed by senior Jeff Genev, who placed second. Hippensteel's time was 14:15.4, while Genev's was 14:16.3. Another strong performance came from junior Zachary Bubier, who placed third in the 800-meter run with a time of 1:50.2.

On Sunday, April 19, the team continued to excel, with senior John Foster placing third in the 800-meter run with a time of 1:49.8, and junior John Bubier placing fourth in the 1,500-meter run with a time of 3:43.2.

The Invitational tourney also featured a 4x100-meter relay, with the Penn team consisting of sophomore Michael Gibson, junior John Foster, senior Jeff Genev, and sophomore Gary Hippensteel. The team placed third with a time of 43.4.

Overall, the Invitational tourney was a success for the Penn men's track team, with several strong performances and a strong showing in the 5,000-meter run. The team was able to complete its training for the upcoming season and continue to excel in their training for the upcoming season. The Invitational tourney was a great opportunity for the runners to compete and continue with their training for the upcoming season. Crew gets past Princeton again for Chids Cup

By SNOOKER ARCHER
The Quakers would have to get motivated in order to pull off another victory over Princeton. That's because any win over a top-20 team is a win, no matter how small the margin of victory. The Quakers are currently ranked number-one in the Eastern Sprints, but they are in a three-way tie for second with Harvard and Dartmouth in the Ivies. Princeton is also ranked number-one in the Region, and they proved to be too tough of an opponent for the Quakers, shutting Penn out. 9-0.

The junior varsity rigging was a little bit ahead of schedule. This is the first year that the Quakers are presently ranked number-one in both Harvard and Dartmouth also in the Eastern Sprints, and Princeton is ranked number-one in the Region, proved to be too tough of an opponent for the Quakers, shutting Penn out. 9-0.

Penn's Karen McFadden gets checked in Saturday's win over Cornell

The rowing crew lost all five of its races to Yale on Saturday, although Penn did finish ahead of Columbia in four of those races.

W. Lacrosse battles Lehigh Quakers seek effort similar to Cornell win

By WAYNE SALIT
The Penn women's lacrosse team was in control of the game for almost the entire contest, but it was not until the 20th minute of the game that the Quakers finally managed to pull away from Lehigh. The final score was 10-6 in favor of the Quakers.

The Quakers will also be adjusting to the new rules that were implemented this season. The biggest change is the elimination of the face-off, which has been replaced by a ball that is dropped in the center of the field. The Quakers have had some success with this new rule, and they are looking forward to the rest of the season with confidence.

The Quakers are currently ranked number-three in the nation, and they are looking to continue their winning streak against Lehigh.

"The Quakers have played well against some tough competition this season," said head coach Stan Bergman. "We are looking forward to the rest of the season with confidence, and we believe that we can continue to improve and make a run at the national championship."
