Banned chapter returns after 5-year absence

After their chapter was revoked in 1980, the new Kappa Sigma fraternity hopes to revive their house and its reputation.

By NINA STEVENS
The Kappa Sigma fraternity, barred from campus since 1980, said it will seek to reopen its former Locust Walk location.

The fraternity's current house on the University campus was closed after the chapter was revoked in 1980.

The new fraternity, which is not affiliated with the old organization, has been granted a temporary license to reopen the house.

New tax law may affect grad students

Measure does not alter undergraduate grants

By DAVID MORSE
The new tax law may have a significant impact on graduate students, but it is unlikely to affect undergraduate students.

According to Morse, the new tax law does not alter the existing tax structure for graduate students.

Graduate students may see a change in the amount of tax they pay.

More appeals unlikely in Temple case

By CHUCK COHEN
The legal challenge to the military's policy of excluding gays from the military continued as the federal appeals court rejected the university's appeal.

The court agreed with the university's argument that the military's policy violates the First Amendment.

"It is a matter of concern that the military's policy continues to be in place," Morse said.

"The university is disappointed with the decision and will continue to pursue its legal options."

Fagin earns award for efforts in nursing field

Nursing School Dean Claire Fagin was honored by the Pennsylvania Nurses Association. She was chosen for her efforts in support of psychiatric nursing. The Council, part of the American Nursing Association, presented Fagin with its Distinguished Contribution to Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing Award for Current Impact on Innovations in Health Care Policy. The award committee noted that the diagnosis of a mental illness is the first step in providing psychiatric care.

"The reason for [nursing] this particular award is because of the extraordinary impact and bravery of innovativeness psychiatric nurses," said Fagin.

"I'm proud to have been one of the first nurses to introduce a patient care program that emphasizes patient needs and satisfaction," said Fagin.

Repairs at Williams expanded

Construction extends beyond original plans

By LAURIE GOLDEN

Construction on Williams Hall will expand this month beyond the emergency repairs that closed the building this summer in order to replace the facility's leaky roof.

School of Arts and Sciences Facilities Management Director Charles Bronk said yesterday that no emergency repairs that closed the facility in August are expected to remain beyond the end of this month.

According to Bronk, work is to be completed on the building this summer to include replacing the Facility's leaky roof. The University leases the building from the state in order to give the facility 50 years of maintenance.

Gravina noted that since the initial building was finished, the contractor who constructed the facility had returned to the building to replace the roof and to give the facility a facelift.

"It was just a poor quality job," Gravina said yesterday, adding that Gravina has been in charge of the work since the original estimate, leaving the final bill for the additional work. The final bill is expected to be approximately $300,000.

"We know now that there is a definite problem arose from shoddy construction," he said. "We wanted a sound envelope and the roof, so we felt confident we could go ahead on the inside." He said that the $100,000 gap for emergency repairs amounted to approximately 6 percent of Physical Plant's original estimate, leaving funds for the additional work.

"It's just been patched up," McKean said. "The insulation is totally saturated." He explained that Williams present a "bad apple" roof consisting of Williams Hall is currently undergoing major repairs.

"It's a tough job," McKean said. "It will be money to be taken from Physical Plant's budget, leaving funds for the additional work. The officials estimate that Williams Hall will total about $600,000. The entire job is expected to be completed by April 6, 1987, with the money to be taken from Physical Plant's maintenance budget.

The University's School of Medicine, the oldest in the country, has a well-deserved reputation as one of the country's premier medical schools. But now, it's making national headlines not for the brilliance of its researchers, but for the apparent immorality of its practitioners.

Imagine a human limb brokerage ring that has been operating for 15 years and was probably run in institutions.

In the late 1970s, the center city physician Martin Spector, who was pronounced dead on arrival, was seen by medical students as a dead body. It was covered in a white sheet and treated for nausea and dizziness after being exposed to a junk hauler. Thirty area residents were subsequently treated for nausea and dizziness.

The inexplicable dispatch of human bodies and the dumping of solid waste both seem like relics of tacky 1950s B-movies. But these incidents indicate a serious lack of security in the Medical School. The University must contain labs and rooms and, most importantly, control access to potentially hazardous materials and body parts. Who would donate their body to the medical school knowing that dealers in human limbs have easy access to them?

There is nothing as American as baseball, stock cars and Hillsdale Caulfield are commonly accepted symbols of manhood. For kids, baseball means playing in the woods. Even Ronald Reagan was brought up by parents who, for personalization of America's recently deceased president, and almost an institution in its own right. This is not to say that real girls don't think it's unfortunate and it is a matter of personal preference. Some women may not want to break the return to boyishness, while women behind the desk can, and will, assert their interests, and perhaps be more assertive in their career choices. The fine line is found in the most successful adult women, both in their experience; it is real women, not professional women.

Finally, there is a return to more traditional functions of a student organization. The Student Assembly has one job and one job only: to serve students. By expressing student opinion to the administrators, the Student Assembly can do more than act as a protest group. It can also provide an opportunity for students to be involved in the decision-making process. The Student Assembly has been acting as a protest group for the past several years, and its efforts have not been fruitful. It is time to move forward to new and more productive goals.

The Student Assembly is a vehicle for the voice of the student. The Student Assembly is a forum for the expression of differing opinions. Education is a Introducing BASICALC. The new Texas Instruments programmable calculator.

Now there's a programmable scientific calculator that solves even the most complex math, engineering, and science problems in a BASIC way. The TI-74 BASICALC.

Unlike most other programmable calculators that require you to learn a new, complex system of keystroke commands—in effect, a new programming language—the TI-74 BASICALC allows you to use the BASIC language programming you already know.

But don't let the BASICALC ease of operation fool you. It also has more calculating power than comparably priced programmables.

Your basic specs:
- Operates as a calculator or BASIC computer
- 8K RAM, expandable to 16K RAM
- 20 built-in scientific functions
- Complete software cartridges for mathematics and statistics
- Optional FORTRAN language cartridge
- Optional printer and cassette interface

And a variety of options, like software cartridges, are available that make it even more powerful and convenient.

Stop by and see the TI-74 BASICALC for yourself. In basic terms, it really offers you a bargain.

Penn Relays awards may get reprise

By THOMAS HILL

A recommendation made by a National Collegiate Athletic Association committee last month could clear the way for the practice of presenting awards to high school vendors in the Penn Relays.

Last spring, the 60-year practical banquet for Edmund F. Gilmour, who had been a 1917 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. The award was presented during a ceremony held by the NCAA to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Penn Relays.

The NCAA is expected to vote on the proposal this fall, but it may not be a complete knock-out for Penn or the N.C.A.A. The proposal could be amended before it is voted on by the NCAA council during its meeting in the fall.

The Penn Relays have been a major event in the history of track and field, and they have been a major source of revenue for the University of Pennsylvania. The Penn Relays have been held every year since 1850, and they have been a source of pride for the university.
