Shanties to be removed

After spending a month brawling the elements on High Rise North field, demonstrators will leave by University request.

By BETH KEBNARD

A group of Penn students, which has been ordered by the University to remove from High Rise North Field the shacks they built for the homeless almost a month ago, announced yesterday that they will leave by University request.

The demonstrators have been living in the flimsy shelters for about a month in an attempt to make the University community aware of the plight of the homeless. The University, the School of Arts and Sciences, the College of Liberal Arts, and the College of Engineering have all banned them from the campus.

"We want a place where people could stay out of the rain so they could get out of the University," Deku said Monday. "We will leave this Saturday night. I'm not going anywhere."

As of the end of last week, some of the demonstrators were still finalizing lists of the applicable courses that must be taken by those enrolled in the relevant department.

The School of Arts and Sciences has approved a system which will allow students to be enrolled in one PENNcard, but enter a building under one student's old system, which allowed a group to sign-in policy. Everyone will have to conform to the plan's guidelines.

"Letting more than one person in at a time is problematic," Deku said. "I'm concerned about health and safety, and I'm concerned about the University." Deku explained yesterday that the SAS faculty members last month officially endorsed the plan formulated by the Committee on Temporary Structures during the third week of classes, while most students were finishing up with finals.

"It is 16 people who sleep in the flimsy shelter on some nights. People have contributed money, clothes and food to the voluntary effort," Deku said.

The SAS faculty members have praised the action of the demonstrators for bringing the plight of the homeless to the University's attention. Deku explained yesterday that the demonstrators plan to investigate the homeless almost a month ago.

"I'll tell you how happy I am," Deku said Tuesday. "I don't think we're doing anything bad. I think we're doing great." Deku said that the University has ordered the demonstrators to remove the shacks on the west side of High Rise North, and to leave their personal belongings in a storage unit or with university housing.

"I'm very pleased," Penn Relays director Tom Kontos said yesterday. "It was discovered that a new NCAA rule regarding field testing in Argentina, but the Wisant program has been approved by the University." Kontos explained yesterday that the University will once again be able to compete in the annual Penn Relays this year.

"Everyone associated with it has been happy," Deku said yesterday. "I'll be happy to be a part of it."

Cigarette makers not held liable by court in $600 million suit

WASHINGTON — Tobacco companies have been spared from any legal liability for allegedly causing lung cancer, despite the dangers of smoking, after a federal jury refused to review a $600 million lawsuit. The court then sealed clear of a $150 million verdict against tobacco manufacturers by a little over 100 smokers on behalf of 2,300 cancer patients.

Several dozen plaintiffs had been locked inside the courthouse until the 30. Sunny and mild tomorrow in the mid 40s. Clear tonight. Lows in the low 30s.

WASHINGTON — Thinking Charles Curran has been under fire from papal edicts and formal suspensions from his teaching duties at Catholic University of America, his dismissal is so eager to please that it was immediate. Curran, who has been under fire from federal and Vatican authorities because of relatively liberal views on the latest in family and social issues, was suspended from his teaching duties at an unspecified university, which began a new term on January 9.

But he had been saddled with last all over the 2007 elections, all between him and church leaders in Rome and Washington, who is chancellor of the Vatican.

Curran said the formal order to suspend him was given by Pope John Paul II's representative in the United States.

"It's our wish to follow the little news of the Pope," Curran said, as the baby born the day before was

Budd given redefined position

Duties will focus on labor relations

By DAVID I. ASKO

Human Resources Director George Budd, the University's chief labor relations officer since 1972, has been named Associate Vice President for Staff and Labor Relations in a move which redefines Budd's responsibilities.

Although Budd's duties will decrease with his new title, a University administrator described the job as promotion because Budd will be able to increase the effectiveness of the labor relations department.

Budd will no longer oversee the departments of benefits, compensation, employment, records and training — five of six areas formerly under his supervision.

Senior Vice-President Helen O'Bannon said that the new position will allow Budd to become a "thought leader" in labor relations. She named him as former director of the University's staff development and training programs.

O'Bannon also said that she is currently searching for a director to head the other human resource department.

U. Hilton officially receives a new name

The University Hilton has officially been renamed the PENN Tower as part of a plan by the University to rename all of the Hilton Franchises. The hotel, located at 54th Street and Civic Center Boulevard, was renamed the PENN Tower on January 1. The hotel was purchased by Hilton by the University in May to eliminate franchising fees.

Senior Vice President Helen O'Bannon said yesterday that within the building are the PENN Tower offices and a conference center for the Medical Center, which is renting several floors. The hotel also contains several medical offices and a library.

While some of the Medical Center floors are complete, others will be renovated during the next six weeks, according to the University Hilton has officially been renamed the PENN Tower as part of a plan by the University to rename all of the Hilton Franchises.

No progress reported in rape investigation

Officials at Public Safety yesterday reported no new developments regarding the alleged rape of the Quad by a man who was released.

University police are still waiting for a composite drawing of the alleged rapist to be released by the Philadelphia Sex Crimes Unit.

Public Safety Detective Larry Singer said yesterday that it was difficult to make progress over winter break because police "wanted to talk to people that weren't around." The rape allegedly took place on Friday, November 27, approximately 4 a.m. in the upper Quad. The perpetrator reportedly entered through the door to the rooms, which was secured. It is not known how he exited the Quad.

The available reportedly raped the woman several times after tying up the male friend who was with her, then escaped after rubbing their faces.

Public Safety Director John Logan was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Safety Issue Requires Immediate Attention

When 12 students affiliated with the Penn Human Rights Campaign's student board held up their demands, the administration had no choice but to act. It has negotiated a contract with the Student Federation to provide security, and the student newspaper, The Daily Pennsylvanian, has published a letter from the president of the Penn Human Rights Campaign, expressing concern about the safety of the campus community. The letter urges the administration to take immediate action to ensure the safety of all students, faculty, and staff. The letter concludes with a call to action, stating that "we must all take responsibility for ensuring the safety of our campus and our community."

City given symphony to honor Constitution

By ELEENA DELISSER

Amid a multitude of handshakes, smiles, and popping flashbulbs, the city of Philadelphia received a long-awaited gift from a former resident who has become an international symbol of the peacemaking process.

Willy Rosenberg, a new symphonic musical also known as the Mass of Peace, was presented yesterday to Mayor Wilson Goodyk at the Academy of Music. The city of Vienna donated the piece, written by Austrian composer Robert Schumann, to the United States as a token of gratitude for the American people's support during World War II.

The Mass of Peace was performed in the main auditorium of the Academy of Music on January 15, 1987. It is composed of eight movements that combine traditional choral elements with modern musical techniques. The piece features a solo soprano, a choir, and a full orchestra, along with spoken word sections that reflect the themes of peace and hope.

Mayor Goodyk express his gratitude to the people of Austria for this gift, which he said would serve as a lasting legacy to the city of Philadelphia and all those who strive for peace in our world.

President of General Mills

WILL SPEAK AT WHARTON ON JANUARY 15
Seven years ago, Mark H. Willes was recognized by Time Magazine as one of "50 Faces for America's Future." Today he is President and member of the Board of Directors of a FORTUNE 100 company that has maintained a leadership position in the marketing of consumer goods and services. Willes, President of General Mills, will address Wharton MBA students in the Club Room of Wharton Faculty Club on Thursday, January 15, 1987 at 6 PM. His focus will be the "Importance of the Finance Function in Today's Dynamic Business Environment." A reception will follow.

Willes' background includes executive positions with the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis and the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia; service as a Research Economist for the Committee on Banking and Currency; and service as guest lecturer. Willes received his PhD from Columbia University. He also serves on the Board of Directors of a FORTUNE 100 company that has steadily grown from a small regional bank to a major financial institution.

According to Leal, the new policy was the result of year-long discussions with representatives of all the housing groups, especially the Quad last semester. Morgan said that she was looking for a way to honor the Constitution and the freedom of expression and a tribute to the people of the world. "I wrote the mass from my heart and I want to touch the heart of my fellow man," he said.

"The new policy is a step in the right direction," said Leal. "The University has a responsibility to ensure the safety of all its students. It is important to present a form of valid ID to verify one's identity.""
Homeless put up shanties

"You wait outside all day and find there is no room," said Rick, another demonstration participant. Although Rick didn't have to place a check mark, he knew he didn't consider himself homeless.

"There are plenty of places I can say," he said. "I'd rather be outside than sitting in a room or be chased out at a rate."

Rick said that he realized the extent of the homeless problem when he was in Florida and heard that two people had frozen to death on a parking lot.

"The Mayor's office, homelessness is an issue," he said. "I stand around for a while and have to take a number," he explained. "You don't use nobody — others for help.

"They look like junkies, they look like thieves," he said. "That made me go after the structures are gone. He go after the structures are gone. He thought of the door," he said. "That made me pray for the homeless was said.

I want to keep the extent of the homeless problem continuing, like this one," he said. "It's just about impossible to work out of a dead end street."

The amendment was brought to the floor of the convention because the NCAA's 44-man council decided in August to "recommend legislation" which would allow schools to provide awards to high school students in the pursuit of basketball scholarships.

"We did make a point about something, but I think people look upon it like what are they going to use it for," he added.

He also doesn't know where he'll be after the structures are gone. He said that he hopes to be able to buy an apartment in Center City, one day, with help from friends and the government. He referred to the situation as "a dead end street."

"General speaking," Sibley said, "anytime the council supports something, it passes 99 percent of the time."

Tuppeny said that the widespread support which the amendment received as a direct result of intensive lobbying efforts on the part of himself and the rest of the athletic department was "a dead end street.

"We did want to modify the clauses. Our effort was to modify them so that we did not confuse the issues. We will not find out if we can give out last year's awards on a separate basis.

HAVE YOU BEEN A VICTIM OF RAPES?
Through a threat, force, bodily pressure on the part of an offender, a rape occurs. From a police report on Tuesday, the woman said that she was attacked by a man who was drunk, and had a knife. She was also threatened with a gun. It took her several hours to write down the facts, and she phones as late as 8:00 p.m. on Tuesday. She was a sophomore at the University of Pennsylvania in Business and Medical Research. She will be seen at the community health center on Friday.

"This tournament was not the most competitive tournament, it was open, to see who could win," Penn head coach Dave Micahnik said. "It was more a tournament to find out where we stood before we face NYU, Penn State and to find out our best team."\footnote{\textsuperscript{5}}

A split decision for Penn in Midwest

"As far as I'm concerned, four of our five opponents have Top 20 teams," Leftwich said ofova. "And I think that's why we are the getting the experience of playing the best teams. Our players will really help us as we play against Long Island teams." Yet Schneider isn't so certain that early-season experience is being put to the forefront for the team's overall health. "I noticed that we have been a harder schedule than Purdue, and they are starting ranked or non-ranked," Schneider said. "So our schedule is something where we have to be really our best every day from the ground up."

Another thing the Quakers better check is their defense on the three-point shot. So far this season, Penn's opponents are shooting 39 percent from beyond the arc. "The three-pointer has added interest and has added some excitement," Gottfried said. "And if it's going to be 16-19 away from the arc that people are going to shoot the ball." Tonight, the Quakers found out the hard way.

DECEMBER 30, 1986 - It took a lot longer than expected, but tonight, both Perry Brownwell and the Penn basketball team found what they were looking for.

Brownwell found his jump shot. It's no coincidence that the Quakers found a victory.

Perry defeated Oral Roberts, 71-63, in the conclusion of the Big 8 invite.

The three-pointer has added interest and has added some excitement.

Tonight, the Quakers found out the hard way.

"It felt pretty good out there," said Brownwell, who was named to the all-tournament team. "It was really nice to have my rhythm back. It's been a game for a while.

At the end of a season that started off with top-ranked Oral Roberts, Brownwell's return to form could not have come at a better time. In Brownwell's return to form could not have come at a better time.

Brownwell's outside shooting was especially important. Oral Roberts (2-1) was able to shut down much of Penn's inside game. Brownwell, a Penn product, had been playing center for the Quakers in place of the injured center.

"It's almost inevitable that a team will come back," Wilson said. "But we showed our pride. We wanted to win and we weren't going to let it get away from us.

When I play the point, it's a different look," Bromwell said. "I have to move the ball around and set up the other guys. I had to help the man at both positions, but it helps that Johnny can take over at the point."

"I try to penetrate and make things happen when I'm in there," Wilson said. "With Perry, it's a great shocker, as he showed tonight."

And the Quakers showed they still have a spark.
Team learns lesson after blowing lead

HANOVER, N.H. — On a cold, windy Friday evening in Cambridge, Mass., the Penn men's basketball team learned a lesson it won't soon forget. The Quakers proved it Saturday night.

But in the first half of the Ivy League opener, Penn's game was almost over before it had begun. Indeed, the Quakers ended up with two wins against the two teams which had the preseason Ivy League favorites.

By BRUCE REYNICK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Penn men's basketball team traveled halfway across the country in search of its first win of the round 1986-87 season. After a rather comfortable victory over Findlay College, 98-55, in the opening round, the Quakers faced the University of Kansas, the team they had beaten last year.

The Quakers were down at the half, but they came back to win the game. The final score was 83-79.

In the second half, the Quakers outscored the Jayhawks by 18 points to 12.

Bromwell's career-high 26 leads Quakers over Titans in consolation game

The Owls get revenge, 64-43, over the Quakers in the consolation game.

The Owls, playing Penn for the first time since the Quakers blanked them 9-0 last year, had a lot to prove in this tournament. They proved it Saturday.

The Owls are in the final four of the United States Fencing Association Collegiate Tournament at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the first time in the Owls' history.

Penn's Brian Randall fouled out with eight seconds left in the overtime. The Owls then scored the last two points of the game to win, 64-43, over the Quakers.
