Black fraternities claim pledge process fosters unity

By LEEVY KERR

"I don't know a lot about them. You see, they are white and black, and the pledges are not allowed to talk to you. It seems to be maybe unusual but that is very social among each other. We don't seem to get a chance to know about them."

"I think it's odd but that's part of their pledge activities then it is. Every fraternity has its own way of pledgeing. If a student didn't want to do the pledge, they wouldn't have to, they would say, 'They know what they're getting into. We don't understand why they do it.'"

"I look down on the right. Both the fraternities and sororities make them pledge. It's a part of our culture. It's really important for them to join for their social life but it's important for you too. That's what they have homework or they want to be with people? They should be more understanding towards the pledges, but they know what they're getting into."

Three white undergraduates

Many black students who join as pledges at black fraternities or sororities are one of the most important experiences of their four years at the University.

But other students, seeing a line of freshmen marching in and out, are often helped by understanding the pledge system and why it is attractive to so many students.

This has been a problem facing the black Greek Council for many years, according to members of the black organizations. The Big Ten, as the council is called, represents two sororities — Alpha Kappa Alpha and Delta Sigma Theta — and two fraternities — Alpha Phi Alpha and Kappa Alpha Psi. They claim that practices are not fair to black while there are non-black members currently.

The pledge system can be seen as being a part of the social and cultural fabric of college campuses. It has been described by some as being "the code of honor."

The following is a statement from Nominations and Election Committee Chair Peter Greenfield.

Dear readers,

I am writing to let you know that the Nominations and Election Committee, which administers the election process, has determined that the election for the position of business manager of The Daily Pennsylvaniaian was not properly run. The Nominations and Election Committee, which administers the election process, has determined that the election for the position of business manager of The Daily Pennsylvaniaian was not properly run. The Nominations and Election Committee, which administers the election process, has determined that the election for the position of business manager of The Daily Pennsylvaniaian was not properly run.

The Daily Pennsylvaniaian has detailed coverage of events on campus, and it is important that the election process be conducted fairly and transparently. The Nominations and Election Committee, which administers the election process, has determined that the election for the position of business manager of The Daily Pennsylvaniaian was not properly run.

Last week’s undergraduates Assembly was elected to serve the 1987-88 academic year. Forty-seven candidates ran for fifteen seats, and the Nominations and Election Committee, which administers the election process, has determined that the election for the position of business manager of The Daily Pennsylvaniaian was not properly run.

Anyone who doesn’t have the John Hancock HealthPlan is better off home in bed.

It’s safe there. You don’t have to worry about something happening to you and (as if that weren’t bad enough) not being covered by your insurance for out-of-pocket costs. Of course, if you sign up for the John Hancock HealthPlan, you don’t have to worry so much.

See, not only does John Hancock cover emergency needs anywhere in the world, we take care of routine office visits, maternity and well-baby coverage, even eye examinations. From hospital care to physicals, you’re covered 100%. That’s the difference between John Hancock and a lot of “reduced benefit” plans.

But what if you’re signed up with Blue Cross/Blue Shield 100? Now, there’s nothing wrong with the plan, they’ll take care of you. But they don’t cover as much as John Hancock and they could cost you and your family almost $500 more in monthly payroll deductions. Think about that.

Okay, so we save you money. But we’re not talking about a can of beans or a bag of flour. This is your health. Which is why we’ve spent a little money of our own on a new medical facility, just around the corner, at 3550 Market Street. That brings to 14 the number of John Hancock Medical Centers; all conveniently located, all staffed by private physicians who have everything they need to treat you right then and there.

Remember, all U. of P. employee health plan applications are due at the Franklin Building by April 15th. So now’s a good time to join us for one of our Open Houses (at the new Medical Center at 3550 Market Street), April 9 & 14, between 5 and 8 pm. For more information call 823-8610. It’s a terrific health plan. And it sure beats staying home.

Shoemaker scores six to spark offense

Shoemaker shot past Michael Page (3-0) and Princeton's defense was almost identical. Penn got on the board with an unearned run in the fourth when Charters reached on an error. From back page

Allee McNally's starting goal at 1:10 of the second half, however, did not signal the end of the 4-3 Penn victory. Quaker sophomore Kenah Shoemaker netted Penn's third and final goal of the game just 1:32 later, as she spun around the goalie and slipped the ball past her. The Quakers had themselves a much-needed win.

"It was mainly the same defense we saw earlier in the season," Quaker senior co-captain Terri McFadden, who scored in both halves, said. "But in the second half, they weren't predictable. There were some breaks here, backhands there, high shots. We really capitalized on our shots coming."

Shoemaker, who scored his third and final goal of the season, also had a great first half. "I think we played well, I think that my opponent was tougher. It couldn't be easier than that," Shoemaker said. "I'm not saying it was easy. I got a lot of doubles and they take away many points. It's tough to make a crucial match when you don't have so much.

"We scored Akers and Keith's clinic losses with Robin Paston's last minute victory, and came out with a difficult afternoon for the firee. It's not uncommon that the Quakers could have given us it doubles play in there, but they lost some points after the long single play and lost all three of their doubles matches. So Penn had to settle once again for a fum that wasn't really a blowout. "We're just good at getting the ball away a lot. We had little spurts, and we didn't give up the ball away. We were in control." No doubt about it.

"It's a timing play," Blake said of Kennedy's goal. "It's a good play, but we really need to be able to give Penn a 4-3 advantage that it never relinquished."

Quaker sophomore Lisa Solo (two goals) sealed the deal with two minutes left, as she spun around the goalie and slipped the ball past her. The Quakers had themselves a much-needed win.

When it rains, it pours.

Going into Saturday's game against Dartmouth, the Penn men's lacrosse team had been experiencing a severe offensive drought, having scored seven goals in their previous six games. The Quakers (9-15, 3-5 EIBL) lost a deuce to Trenton State in its game last Wednesday, the ninth time in the last 11 games it had scored single digits. The Penn men's lacrosse team had been struggling to get their offense back on track, having scored more than 10 goals only once in their last 10 games.

The Quakers needed someone to make the goals stick against the Big Green. Fortunately, they had someone who could do just that.

Kennedy leads Penn to first Ivy victory

By HOWARD FALCONWITZ

It seemed fitting that Quaker co-captain Payton Kennedy had possession of the ball at the line in the last out of the game. Kennedy had been the team's most consistent offensive threat this season, scoring 22 goals and adding five assists. His performance against Yale (9-5) was a reflection of the improved play on the field. Kennedy did much more. She transformed a 3-3 halftime lead into a convincing Ivy League victory. Kennedy leads Penn in scoring with 33 goals and has been a consistent performer throughout the season.

Shoemaker's spree signals end of offensive dry spell

Deb Blake (left) and Tom Sawyer (right) were key contributors to the Quakers' victory against Dartmouth. Blake scored a career-high six goals and added an assist, while Sawyer scored three goals and added two assists. Their performance was critical in solidifying the Quaker lead and securing the win.

Strong pitching wasted as Penn drops three to Big Red, Tigers

BY IRA APFEL

The Penn baseball team went north to play doubleheaders at Princeton and Cornell this weekend, but the hitting was not up to par. For the third straight weekend, the Quakers struggled to score runs, ultimately falling to the Princeton Tigers (22-10) and the Cornell Big Red (22-10, 2-1), 6-1. The Tigers (9-15, 2-1) scored two runs in the third inning and added four more in the eighth to put the game out of reach for the Quakers (7-15, 1-6 EIBL).

The Quakers managed only two runs and 14 hits in dropping both games. The Princeton Tigers were too much for the Quakers, scoring all 14 runs on 18 hits. The Quakers were unable to mount a comeback, as Penn managed only two runs and 14 hits in dropping both games. The Princeton Tigers were too much for the Quakers, scoring all 14 runs on 18 hits. The Quakers were unable to mount a comeback, losing games 3-1 and 5-0.

Lions hire Gilmore as assistant coach

By IRA APFEL

Tom Gilmore, a former star attacker for the Penn men's lacrosse team and a former assistant coach for the Quakers the past season, has been named as defensive line coach for Columbia's varsity team. Gilmore, 30, was a team captain at Penn and joined the faculty at the University of Texas at El Paso as a coach.

The hiring of Gilmore is a significant development for the Quakers, both as a model hire and as a coach. He is a former tri-captain who won national honors and led the Quakers to a 22-10 victory. His experience will be invaluable as the Quakers look to improve their defense and continue their success on the field.

Transition attack too quick for Dartmouth

BY NEIL WEBBERGER

When the Quakers took on Dartmouth Saturday at Franklin Field, one thing was clear: the transition attack was too quick for the Big Green. The Quakers scored five goals in the first quarter and added four more in the second, giving them a 9-2 lead en route to a 15-6 victory. The Big Green (4-13, 2-2) scored only three goals in the game, allowing the Quakers to build on their lead and secure the victory.

The defense has been a strong suit for the Quakers this season, allowing only nine goals per game. The transition attack has been a key component of the Quakers' success, as they have scored 15 goals in the first quarter of their last three games.
