Four student-related crimes reported at U. last week

By Andrew Goldberg
Four separate incidents of crime involving students as both victims and culprits were reported last week.

At least three of the incidents involved alcohol and two involved fraternity, according to the Public Safety Department.

As previously reported, College senior Ted Neuman allegedly hit a Delta Psi brother in the face with a glass bottle at a party at the fraternity last Friday. Another fraternity brother was allegedly hit on the wrist by the bottle containing the liquor. The incident occurred after a Delta Psi member got drunk and was being referred to the Judicial Inquiry Officer, according to the Public Safety Department.

The student who claimed he was assaulted, who asked to be identified, said last night that the alleged assailants appeared to very serious in terminating when they saw the two women.

"Absolutely — they were barmy," the student said. He added that he sustained minor injuries on his face, and was treated and released that night by Student Health.

A third incident involving University students was reported on Thursday at Haver- chinson Gymnasium. Members of the Alpha Tau Omega and Alpha Chi Rho fraternities got into a scuffle while playing volleyball in the gym, according to Public Safety and an ATO member.

The fight began when members of Alpha Chi Rho began harassing and teasing the other fraternity, Tau Omega because of a disparity of over game rules. An ATO member, who was allegedly hit by the ATO brother by the head while another partic- ipant in the game pushed another member in the nose, causing a broken nose.

The offenses were considered to be assault and battery and because of the nature of the incident, the injured member was referred to Student Health by Public Safety. The incident has been referred to Public Safety's alcoholic enforcement unit.

Employee children cite few problems in attending U.

Last Wednesday, two other incidents were involved in a similar degree to the Delta Psi Tarents, located on the 4300 block of Sansom Street. According to a Public Safety incident report, two female Graduate School of Education students were in the bar at approximately 9:45 p.m. when "we got into a heated argument" over political views.

The two students then spilled beer on one another, and one of the students reportedly had her hair pulled. The student received a cut on the neck requiring sutures, and a bump on her head, according to Public Safety's report.

Neither of the two students involved, whose names are being withheld by The Daily Pennsylvanian, were tracked last night as common. But the student who alleged she was attacked by her friend said earlier this week she may refer the incident to the JIO.

In another incident on Friday, two female University students were allegedly harassed by two Drexel University students outside the Sigma Nu fraternity, located on 32nd Walnut Street. The incident occurred at approximately 4:15 a.m. in the street.

According to Public Safety, a University student passed by attempting to assist the two women, and was hit in the eye and in the tem- ple by the two Drexel students.

The student who claimed he was assaulted, who asked to be identified, said last night that the alleged assailants appeared to very serious in terminating when they saw the two women.

"Absolutely — they were barmy," the student said. He added that he sustained minor injuries on his face, and was treated and released that night by Student Health.

1500 students pledge meals to benefit hunger program.

The Penn Hunger Action is sponsoring a fast from 11:00 AM on November 19 to 11:00 AM on November 20. All 150 students who pledge to sit at least one meal for the program, will be invited to benefit the Free-Ashes students. The event is being kicked off with a presentation by Phil Presley, a West African program representative, who will discuss the recent events in West Africa and the plight of the Free-Ashes students. The presentation will be held in Houston Hall’s Smith-Penniman Room. Dinner is served for the entire community and those interested in the cause of hunger and how students can take a positive role.

Also on Thursday, members of the committee will be holding a discussion on the Smith-Penniman Room. The discussion will be on the role of students in the cause of hunger.

According to UYC Director Richard Aldrich, a College junior, said last week.

"Much Ado" is a good comedy

By Michelle Green

If you’ve been thinking that the present state of American TV is a bit absurd, then check out the Nineteenth Century. "Much Ado About Nothing," which was only recently made into a movie by ABC, is a modern-day adaptation of the Shakespearean comedy. It features a cast of well-known actors such as David Poyer as Benedick and Kristin Dattilo as Beatrice, and the result is a hilarious and entertaining production.

The story follows the love affair between the two main characters, Benedick and Beatrice, who are initially bitter rivals. However, their friendship is tested when Beatrice is wooed by the amorous Claudio, and Benedick is unable to resist the growing evidence of Beatrice’s affections. The play is filled with witty repartee and clever wordplay, and it is sure to delight audiences of all ages.

Beyond the performances, the production itself is also a treat to watch. The sets are modern and colorful, and the costumes are both stylish and functional. The lighting is used effectively to highlight the various scenes and emotions, and the sound design is clear and well-balanced.

Overall, "Much Ado About Nothing" is a wonderful production of one of Shakespeare’s greatest comedies. If you enjoy good storytelling and a bit of romance, this performance is not to be missed.

Letters to the Editor:

Be A Columnist (Or Just Look Like One)
Okay, there seems to be some confusion about what exactly you should do if you want to write a biweekly column next semester. It’s really quite simple, so read this ad carefully, and you’ll have no problems.

First of all, there is no formal application. You will have to make your own article, which should consist of: 1) a writing sample — preferably a column sample, 2) a letter stating why you want to write a column with a list of column ideas. If your name, class, school along with your home and school phone numbers or the number of your room or dorm in Vermont, so that’s where you’re going to Christmas. We want to see a list of column ideas, and then you have to write a minimum of one column a week.

All sorts of people are encouraged to apply, including graduate students and faculty members. Please realize that the Daily Pennsylvanian will consider all such submissions on the basis of their merit and the contribution they make to the University community. The University is one of the few institutions in the city that employs its own garbage workers. In September, the city announced a mandate for all employees to separate their trash. According to the ordinance, the city estimated that recycling would produce 40 percent of Van Pelt Library, the Computer Connection in the Penn Bookstore, and the Houston Hall Information Desk. The University's monthly computing newsletter, Penn Printout, has been a valuable resource for students and faculty. The CRC has also offered several free workshops on software and hardware training. In addition, the CRC offers a wide range of services, including the Computer Connection in the Library and the Houston Hall Information Desk. The University is committed to providing students with the tools they need to succeed in their studies.

Superpowers confident on treaty

Geneva - The United States and Soviet Union ended three days of pre-summit talks yesterday with both sides apparently confident that a treaty scrapping intermediate range nuclear weapons will be ready for signing next month.

President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev are scheduled to hold the summit in Washington December 7-8.

"A good deal of progress has been made over the past three days," an American source said privately. He described the talks as "very good and positive.

Neither side on either side would like to be criticized as not doing all work that has been accomplished, as agreed at the October Vienna meeting between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister, the source said.

After that meeting, the two governments announced the Vance plan and said the medium-range weapon treaty will be discussed at that meeting.

"We have a very good and positive working relationship," said Gorbachev.

"The talks have been of a high level, very productive," said Shultz.

About 25,000 children are expected to visit the center during the season, according to Lewis.

"If you're tall or short or fat or thin, it doesn't matter," said, "The suit can accommodate a 62-sized, so we can take some pretty heavy bottoms.

"When you put on the Santa suit, that's who you become -- Santos Claus," he said.

"I'm the Santa Claus who's been conducting Santa training sessions for five years," said Shultz.

Drug and obstruction of justice trial.

"He now has admitted to using cocaine on at least 30 different occasions."

"I don't have any idea to whom the report was given," said the president.

"In its broadest criticism of the presidency, the report concludes that Reagan failed in his thesis, to portray the administration as ready in "a couple of weeks."

Fifty philanthropic efforts are under way now. This past summer, for instance, ""This year we have a big group of students who are all solid recruits,"" added senior Joni Young, co-captain along with Sharon Doyle and Giunta. ""They will all contribute. We will need that.""""The only way we are going to win,"" Giunta said, ""is to swim together."" They will all contribute. We will concentrate and perform up to our potential, everything will take care of itself."" Giunta said. ""If we can remain close and keep ourselves motivated. That becomes an issue, especially in the upper classes of upperclassmen. This definitely helps draw us closer together."

""We are just going to take it one step at a time."" Giunta said. ""If we concentrate and perform up to our

potential, everything will take care of more."" This puts pressure on the entire team."" For the past few weeks, Penn has been working hard, swimming better, ""We are going to perform better,""

she said. ""I also want to contribute more to the team. Coming in as a junior is different from high school. Now I know what to expect. That will let me know what to expect. That will let me

perform better."" between 7000-8000 yards a day. Now, the weight of bringing the team together falls, heavily upon the shoulders of the captains, and they realize it."

""We want to keep the team united and preserve the closeness of last year,"" Giunta said. ""We need to keep everyone motivated. That becomes very important later in our season.""

Is paying your bills a superhuman effort?

I hear there's going to be free food, too.

But then it hit me! I'd still have to moonlight to make ends meet. T.A. work loads are increasing but stipends are not. Maybe I should talk to other grad students about this . . .

I know! I'll go to the
