Man shot dead at 44th St.

Philadelphia Police last night removed the body of a man who was shot in a Chestnut and 44th Streets house. The man, who was not identified, was not affiliated with the University according to the police. Page 2.

Tight security drapes U. over break

By Rolland Lane

While off-campus crime persisted last week, in clinical college meetings this week, the University's security council met as usual, discussed major security issues, and made some last-minute changes in student policy.

This was the first Thanksgiving vacation in three years that did not result in major public safety incidents. Two years ago, third-year physics graduate student Marco Antonio Matute was stabbed in his room in Nichols House during the break. Last Thanksgiving, a student was allegedly raped after an intruder broke into her friend's Upper Quadrangle room.

Both Public Safety Staff Assistant Sylvia Canada and Resident Living Director Carol Kontos praised the increased security measures implemented over break. Included in the extra security measures were three additional Public Safety officers on patrol during the night. 24-hour professional over-sight and perimeter patrol officers, a campus-wide alarm system, snow plows and strike ID procedures for students staying over break.

Canada said that this break’s security was tighter than usual.

"This Thanksgiving, we really went far and beyond to make sure the community was safe," Canada said.

Canada said that Public Safety assigned three extra officers to patrol North, South and West camp-

New evaluation to allow TAs to critique TAs

By Christopher Coven

Students taking courses in the School of Arts and Sciences are getting a new evaluation form for teaching assistants, through a new evaluation developed by the Undergraduate Assembly and the Graduate Students' Association Council.

The new evaluation forms were distributed to students approximately two weeks ago. It is designed to allow the TA to make adjustments in their teaching during the term. If not filled out, the form will be assigned to graduate students in the "ASAC" program for the next evaluation. If completed, five times for this semester, to vote on amending and cooperating with other organizations, and to plan public events.

Currently the group has no membership requirements, so anyone who goes to a meeting may vote on amending a speaker.

A man with a shaved trapped beard was in the McDonald's restaurant at 44th and Walnut Streets yesterday and ran away with $300 from the till.

The trapped man even occupied through a back door but was later thrown through a window of the nearby Galaxy video arcade by four armed men. Counselling staff on campus last weekend was the primary concern of the trip. The three major crimes reported to police during the break were burglary, assault and vandalism.

Community condemns Haiti election violence

By Joan Norr

The University's local Haitian community expressed shock last night following the violent break in the native country this week that led to the cancellation of Haiti's first election at a presidential term in 13 years.

"I'm not able to find words strong enough to express the sadness I'm feeling," said President Jean-Claude Duvalier, who was born 24 years ago in the United States. "The people of Haiti have paid the price for the actions of their leaders. I ask you to support the government's program to bring about peace and prosperity to our country."

Berg said yesterday that the approximately 3600 evaluation forms will enter the Department of Food and Commerce. The forms are filed out by students.

Until this form was created, there were several problems with the current system. Berg added that he may speak with the TA and not use the information for TAs later in the term.

"I hope that the current system will work in the future," Berg said. "We have to make sure that the new system is not only effective but also fair to everyone."

Prof. Martha Dore is working with pregnant teens in the Bronx.

"It's hard to worry about a pregnancy when you don't have a roof over your head," she said. "The services included for the first time, counseling, and educational and social counseling, as well as community outreach programs.

Dore said that the girls needed someone to do as they talk to someone else, especially since they had so many teenage pregnancies. The services were open to both community members and female students. The goal of the project was to "reconnect" these teenagers to an educational program.

"After giving those kind of information, I found that they didn't like that they couldn't get to stay poor and they tried to stay away from home as much as possible," she said. "I consistently found that the family relationships were very poor. They were much more powerful amongst the teenage girls and the young women.

Dore added that the target demos the project were at the community level and to speak about this. "Statistically the incidence of teenage pregnancies is high in the next two years after the pregnancy and close to Super- nancy. If you have a program that is run by TASA.

By Pamela Schleiman
At this University anything is possible, at least according to the recent production of a musical called "Purr," which had its world premiere at the end of this past spring season. The show was written, directed, composed, and choreographed by students and was the main focus of the University of Pennsylvania's "Purr" Project. According to the program, the "Purr" Project is a new venture created specifically for the University's College of Music, with the goal of bringing together students from all disciplines to collaborate on a musical production.

The musical, "Purr," is centered around the theme of self-discovery and personal growth. The story follows the life of a cat named Purr, who discovers a hidden talent for singing and begins to explore the world outside of her comfort zone. As she embarks on this journey, she learns important lessons about friendship, resilience, and the power of music.

The "Purr" Project is a testament to the University's commitment to fostering a creative and inclusive environment. It provides students with the opportunity to work together, learn from each other, and create something truly unique. The production is a reflection of the University's belief in the power of arts and culture to bring people together and inspire meaningful change.

Bloom book assailed by roundtable

By Geoff Tashman

The Philomaihean Society featured a roundtable on University of Chicago Professor Alan Bloom's controversial book The Closing of the American Mind during the yearbook preview last Tuesday. Professor Hackney, called Bloom's thesis "foolish" and "not intellectually defensible," is to his book. Bloom says that "in- clusion of everyone in society is not possible, and are much more cut off from traditions.

He criticizes Americans for not taking enough intellectual risk from the roundtable and the administrators and students," Hackney said. "It's faulty on his end. "

"American students are less well-educated than those of a generation or two ago," said College Senior Anthony Brooks.

"It's just horrible," Glasker said. "We alreadied a President's Committee to increase the patrol of the area from four to midnight, but he said he would not agree to doing so."

"There are people who have been talking about the security, but they have not yet have Bloom himself. But College Senior Richard Garella, moderator of the book, said that the book was assailed by the re-

Fat Aesop Joins Up

Fat Aesop, the bill collector, has everything on Black Mondays. He's the leaseholder of a molecule over the years, ever since Fall 1985.

Fat Aesop is a native of Cambridge, Massachusetts, where he was born on February 11th. He attended Harvard University, graduating with a degree in Economics with honors. He went on to pursue a career in banking, working for several years at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. He is currently a consultant at a major investment firm in New York City.

Fat Aesop is an avid reader and a lover of classical music. He enjoys playing tennis and golf in his free time. He also enjoys traveling to Europe and the Far East, where he has made many friends.

Fat Aesop is a member of several charitable organizations, including the United Way and the Red Cross. He is also a member of the Harvard Alumni Association and the Harvard Business School Club.

Fat Aesop is a married man with two children. He lives in a large house in the suburbs of Harvard and attends all of his children's events. He is a devoted father and an active participant in his children's school activities.

Fat Aesop is a man of few words, but he is always willing to lend a helping hand. His friends and colleagues consider him a true gentleman and a loyal friend.

Fat Aesop is a man of many talents, but his greatest asset is his ability to listen. He has a way of understanding others and their needs, and he is always ready to offer his help.

Fat Aesop is a true classic, and he is a true gentleman. He is a man of few words, but his presence is felt in every room he enters.

Fat Aesop is an inspiration to us all, and we are all grateful for his presence. He is a true gentleman, and we are all lucky to have him in our lives.
Professor uses grant to study economic differences in gender

By Patrick O'Donnell

When most people wake up in the morning, the furthest thing from their minds are the economic problems of the world. Not so with Economics Professor Claudia Goldin. "It's something that every day when I wake up I think about," she said. "I wake up in the morning and wonder - why are some people poor and others are poor. I wonder why people in Ethiopia are starving while people in Chicago eat heartily."

Goldin has transformed thoughts like these into more than 20 books and articles on topics as diverse as poverty and slavery. Most recently, she was awarded a Guggenheim grant that now allows her to research the history and economics of women's employment in the United States. Most recently, she was awarded a Guggenheim grant that now allows her to research the history and economics of women's employment in the United States.

"One cannot help wondering why there are gender differences in how people think about the world," she said. "I wake up in the morning and wonder about - anything else is the economic problems of the world.

"It is important that it is written for historians and economists, so it is extremely difficult for the editor," she said, explaining that editing the Journal of Economic History, a publication put out by the American Economic Association, the Journal's ly publication and editing them to fit the journal's needs, "is what one might call an invasive editing," she said, explaining that editing the Journal is more difficult than editing other publications.

"It's something that every day when I wake up I think about," Goldin elaborated. "My research indicates that women in their 40s and 50s and most recently, young women, are not going to increase relative to men," she said, explaining that there is a massive influx of women into the system, most have either limited work experience or have worked for a number of years, thereby decreasing the average wage.

Along with her research, Goldin also spends much of her time editing The Journal of Economic History, a publication run by American Economic Association. "It's something that every day when I wake up I think about," Goldin said.

"Wouldn't you like to do that?" she added. "And have someone pay you to do it? That's the definition of heaven?"

"Isn't that the definition of someone pay you to do it?" she asked.

Poles reject government referendum on economic norms, price increases

Warsaw, Poland — Youths demonstrated last night in the largest anti-government protest in Warsaw in three years to protest price increases.

The results of Sunday’s vote and the influx of refugees from the Soviet Union are likely to fuel the chorus of criticism of Poland’s government in the West.

Warsaw’s government said the referendum was part of the country’s economic reforms, which it says will benefit the entire nation.

President Lech Walesa, who has been critical of the government, said on Polish television last night that the referendum was a “shameful” act and that the government was trying to divert attention from its economic problems.

The government said the referendum was necessary to stabilize the economy.

The vote is the first time since the Soviet Union’s collapse in 1989 that the government has held a referendum on economic issues.

The referendum was held on Sunday in the capital, Warsaw, and the results are expected to be announced today.

Terror gangs fired randomly at passers-by, carried out methodical and brutal attacks on polling stations and shot election observers, diplomats and journalists.

The government said it would not comment on the results of the referendum.

Local Haitians condemn election violence in Haiti until the military junta is removed, as Haitians will respond to the military violence by arming themselves.

But University Graduate Student Antoine Seraphique, also a Haitian refugee, predicted that an uprising of the Haitian people would be met by the army with the same "diabolical" measures that have been used in recent years.

"We hope to bring about a positive psychological effect on the army's ability to effectively communicate in English," Joffee said. "But we hope that they will take the standardized test prepared by the Educational Testing Service, which evaluates an instructor's ability to effectively communicate in English."

Student assaulted by youths

By Andrew Goldberg

A University sophomore from Pakistan whose name is being withheld by University Public Safety has not made any arrests.

The student said he fell "humiliated" from his attack. He said the assailants then crossed the street.

A similar incident occurred earlier this semester when a female student was attacked off-campus by a pack of youths punching him in the Civic Center.

A University student sustained bruises to his right eye and left jaw in the assault, and was robbed of $4999.

The suspect was released two hours later. Public Safety Staff Assistant Sylvia Canada said yesterday that University police were also called to the scene, about 10:45 p.m. The student was taken to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania health center, the report said.

The student was attacked off-campus by a pack of youths returning from a wrestling match at the Civic Center.

the group's use of funds as well as its organizational structure, noting that large allocations have been made at assemblies where few members attended. Several students noted that during one poorly attended meeting the fall term, students voted to approve $15,000 for a housing project to help cover costs for the first Chicago winter. Harold Washington's speech, which was cancelled last week because of scheduling conflicts.

Although several Connaissance members questioned the group's use of funds in appropriate fashion with a low attendance. Graif said he believes that the group's efforts are "not only done to help the meeting, but also to help the meeting through the decision of the organization." Graif said he understands the community's concern over emergency numbers being converted to the two-year break, which she said was standard for all residence buildings, requiring all students to show identification and all residence sponsors to attend at least one meeting before being eligible to vote for or against the student's use of funds and its organization as of next semester so that the group would never happen again if we can help it."

Although some University students have questioned the use of funds as well as the group's ability to make tough decisions, others have said that Connaissance's sponsorship may be used to prevent the use of funds. Connaissance is restructuring the organization as well as its procedures, according to Graif, who added that the group will continue to attend at least once meeting before being eligible to vote for or against the student's use of funds and its organization as of next semester so that the group would never happen again if we can help it."

"We didn't help each other on defense. We just didn't play the game that we did last week," Middies coach Trainer said.

Waldron was Penn's only other player to stretch during which he scored 10 of those 14 points for 15 points total.

A.J. Hulbert scored 15 points and had four rebounds. "We played hard but there were a lot of mistakes on the court that they should have had," Triva said. Phil's game totalled 19.

Waldron in the lane, the freshman showed some promise. He will be a key player as the Quakers look to improve on their season.

Lehigh won 76-75, as Penn's offense fell apart down the stretch.

"Lehigh is a very talented team," Trainer said. "They are very athletic and have a lot of shooters." Trainer said the Quakers will need to focus on defense to have a chance against Lehigh.

The Quakers are 2-3 in the last seven games.

Riebel returns for Penn

...back on schedule for his anticipated return. Riebel is a key player for Penn.

Just when you thought Bruce Riebel had graduated, another emotionally-striken player has come along to take his place on the Quakers' team. Bruce Riebel is back on the court for the Quakers.

The 6-7, 225-pound forward from the Gold Gloves and Penn's starting line-up for the past three seasons returned to the court late in the season.

"It's a good feeling to be back on the court," Riebel said. "It's been a long time since I've played." Riebel scored 12 points and had six rebounds.

The Quakers will now set their record against Villanova this weekend. "It's a big game for us," Trainer said. "We need to get back on the right track."
Celtics reactivate McHale
Boston forward to come back following foot surgery

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics were preparing to welcome back one of their greatest talents. The team confirmed that Larry McHale, the team's record-holder for rebounds, was ready to return from an injury that had kept him out for several months. "McHale has been cleared for contact and will be an important addition to our lineup," said Celtics coach Bill Fitch. "He's excited to be back and we're looking forward to having him on the court." McHale missed the last 22 games of the regular season and the team's first playoff game because of a foot injury. His return was a boost for the Celtics,谁 were looking to make a strong first-round playoff push after finishing the regular season with a 58-24 record. McHale provided a strong post presence and his ability to draw fouls and shoot from the outside will be crucial to the team's success. The Celtics, who are currently seeded sixth in the Eastern Conference, will need to win at least one playoff series to advance to the second round. With McHale back in the lineup, they have a better chance of achieving that goal. "Larry is a big part of our team," said forward Paul Silas. "He brings a lot of experience and leadership to the court. We're really excited to have him back." The Celtics' first playoff game is scheduled for Tuesday against the New York Knicks. McHale will be a key factor in determining the outcome of that game and the rest of the series. "Larry is one of the best players in the league," said Knicks coach Pat Riley. "He's a great shooter and a great defender. We have to find a way to slow him down." The Celtics are looking forward to the challenge. "We're excited to have Larry back," said point guard John Havlicek. "He's been a big part of our team and we know he'll make a difference. We're ready to make some noise in the playoffs." were just standing around. After the back-to-back dunk by [First Name] Quercet (which put the Engineers up, 15-13), [First Name] was the first to speak.

And that angrier line. "We were really cut up," he said. "We were doing well with 12 minutes left, guys saying packing it in is 8 up to us and Phil [Peters] to keep us under control.

Another bright spot for the Quakers was the defense, which forced four Midshipmen turnovers, helped by another big game from Brad Hippenstiel, Penn's senior defensive end. Hippenstiel tied a career-high with seven tackles in the first half, including a sack and two passes broken up. Hippenstiel had a total of eight tackles for the day, tying a career-high.

But the most impressive performance on defense came from senior safety Mike Lista. Lista had a career-high 13 tackles, including two sacks and two forced fumbles.

"[Lista] was really good out there," said defensive coordinator Tim Davis. "He was really effective in the middle, breaking up a lot of plays.

It was a big game for us. We needed this win to get back to .500, and I think we did that today."

Penn's defense held Navy to just 10 points in the second half, allowing the Quakers to pull away for good.

"Our defense really stepped up in the second half," said head coach Kevin Cook. "We really controlled the pace of the game and forced Navy to make some mistakes.

And that led to us getting some opportunities to score."

For the Quakers, it was a much-needed win to keep their playoff hopes alive. With three games remaining, Penn is still in contention for an Ivy League title.

"We're just glad to get this win," said senior guard Walt Frazier. "We've been working hard all season, and we finally got a win.

"I'm just glad to get this out of the way and move on to the next game."

W. Basketball opens season with loss to Navy

Wyoming native started the season by going 7-for-10 from the field and 2-for-6 from behind the arc.

"I'm really happy with the way he played," said head coach Kevin Cook. "He was really aggressive out there and he was making some good shots.

"He's really been practicing a lot and it showed out there."

The Quakers led 51-42 at halftime, but the Midshipmen outscored Penn 23-19 in the second half.

"We came out with a big lead and we didn't take care of business in the second half," said Cook.

"We had a lot of turnovers and we gave the ball away a lot.

For the Quakers, it was a tough loss to start the season.

"We really needed this win," said senior guard Walt Frazier. "We've been working hard all season and we really wanted this win.

"But we'll move on from this and focus on the next game."

Yale's Ryan named Player of the Year

By Ken Scher

Ryan, a senior guard, was named First Team All-Ivy for the second time in his career.

"I'm really happy for him," said head coach Fran McCaffery.

"He's been a great leader for us and he's really helped us out a lot.

"I'm just glad to see him get the recognition he deserves."

Ryan averaged 18.2 points per game and led the Ivy League in assists with 6.7 per game.

"He's really been a great player for us," said McCaffery.

"He's really been a key to our success."

For Yale, it was a banner year.

"We had a really good season," said Ryan.

"We really wanted to win the championship and we did that.

"I'm just glad to see us get the recognition we deserve."

Lehigh exploits

The 1989 Lehigh team was a disappointment, but it's a team that is winning, just like the Quakers.

The Lehigh team is a young team, but it's a team that is winning.

"We have a lot of young players," said coach Kevin Cook.

"But we also have some experienced players who are really helping us out.

"I'm really happy with the way we're playing right now."
