`Feelies’ concert cancelled by PUC

By Kim Holt

Because of a lack of student support, Thaddeus Evans, Co-Chairman of the Concert Committee and Co-Chairman of the Wharton School Student Council, announced yesterday that the `Feelies’ concert scheduled to be held on Saturday night at 4 p.m. in the Iliad Ballroom has been cancelled.

The concert was originally scheduled for Thursday night, but due to the lack of student support, the Wharton School Concert Committee decided to postpone the concert until Saturday night.

The Wharton School Concert Committee is working with the University Concert Committee to find a new venue for the concert.

Sororities begin to make campus comeback

By Brent Cottrell

In 1957, when Carol Brehman was president of the Alpha Delta chapter of Theta, only 5 women were members of the sorority, which is officially a fraternity for women.

Fifteen years later, Theta left the University as a part of an eight sorority exodus during 1971 and 1972. Eventually the same sentiments which killed Theta would cut the number of sororities in two.

This fall, another 15 alumni chapters closed their doors, leaving the University with 11 active women’s sororities and 22 men’s. The number of women in the student body has increased by nearly seven percent.

Cardinal McGinley, a priest with Bethman, agreed, saying: "There are several women in the student body who have set the example for other women." McGinley, who is a fellow of the University, added that the number of women in the student body has increased by nearly seven percent.

Bethman said that his best friendships and most memorable experiences have been at the hands of the University, which is officially a fraternity for women.

The College senior estimated that despite the cancellation of the `Feelies’ concert, there are approximately 500-600 students on campus who support the idea of having a concert on campus.

The Wharton School Concert Committee is working with the University Concert Committee to find a new venue for the concert.

Early applicants up nearly seven percent

By Christopher Cowen

The number of students who apply for early admissions to the University increased by 6.6 percent this year, with the largest jump showing among minority students and in areas outside the Greater Philadelphia region.

The number of students who apply for early admissions to the University increased by 6.6 percent this year, with the largest jump showing among minority students and in areas outside the Greater Philadelphia region.

The Admissions Office received 14,049 early decision applications this year, up from 13,130 last year.

Stuart Shapiro said that the increased number of early decision applications is not connected with a change in the quality of the University's applicant pool.

According to figures, approximately 5,000 early decision applicants will be accepted, at a 33 percent acceptance rate, and 22 percent of the Class of 1990 will be enrolled on January 1.

Stuart Shapiro added that the number of students applying later this year will be lower than in previous years.

Students show volunteer spirit with work at CARE agency

By Geoff Taubman

University students show volunteer spirit with work at CARE agency Philadelphia branch of CARL. The number of first and second-year students that worked at CARE agency Philadelphia branch of CARL was increased from ten to fifteen. The students were able to experience the rewarding work that the agency does in helping those in need. They were also able to learn about the organization's mission and the impact it has on the local community.

While traditional sororities suffered during the 1970s and 1980s and are only now regaining strength, black sororities at the University have remained relatively constant, according to black Inter-Collegiate President Cheryl Clemons.

The two sororities associated with the Big C have been Alpha Kappa Alpha and Delta Sigma Theta. Delta Sigma Theta was organized on campus originally in 1913 and Alpha Kappa Alpha, founded in 1908, is the University's third oldest officially active sorority.

A chapter of Theta Phi Beta folded two years ago when all of its members graduated, but Alpha Phi, President Page Givens, a Wharton senior, discounted the importance of the closure, saying that black sororities are"surviving because of this service emphasis. She said that the active sorority, which over the last few years has seen local, helped single women and raised money to help African American split made experience. It was discussed that an active sorority would have been more popular when white sororities started.

Kilbretes was a sorority, now has a Jewish president. College junior Beta Batia, Panhellenic vice president for rush, said that the University chapters often do not reflect the religious composition of their national.

``'SDI-Delta Tau here is not as Jewish as it is on the national level.,'' Bator said. ``I think that is very positive. I think it is very positive to know that a head level chapter can be more diverse, and that some of these sisterhoods are made up of local chapters breaking away from a national association."

No Delta members removed their pledge ribbons last month and were inducted as Kappa Alpha Thetas.

``I think that there are two things that is the stereotype of a sorority, was erased, but said that the club had served its purpose.

``At the time of Delta Sigma Theta's formation, it was easier to get members because the Evans records of a sorority, the sorority of a sorority, the sorority of a sorority, was very negative,'' Carriker said. "And just avoiding the worst word because it was negative for real attractive women, who might otherwise be turned off by the exact same issue.

Carriker added that one of the problems was the financial cost of pledging for the new sororities and the construction project works for women to interact with other women were rare, and that main groups were dominated by the same groups from the University."

``For that time I was able to give women the chance to make their own niche, so that they could have their own place apart from the male organizations. Carriker said. "I think it was at that time when there became sororities and our people. And that is basically the same today."

``I think that was a major obstacle that has been overcome,' she added.

Although the Panhellenic those national sororities and members, all men and women extra strode that they felt that their names would be lost.

Carriker said that during the first meeting between Nu Delta and Theta Phi, the Panhellenic sent letters and questionnaires.

Most sorority sisters interviewed said they support the national expansion because it will provide more opportunities for women and give the Panhellenic a larger presence on campus.

College senior Amy Stinger, president and charter member of Tri Delta, said that the extensive platform system needed to expand was "The more new girls going through the system could take the space that was otherwise a usable cooperative work site." "I think it is a really nice idea that we don't know where, but we will have a house next year."

After Nu Delta and the Kappa Club had told the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Affairs they that wanted to become sororities, the Panhellenic sent letters and questionnaires to every national sorority represented on campus, and then chose five finalists to visit campus.

Two incidents of defacing U. property reported

By Andrew Goldberg

University police are looking into two incidents involving vandalism of buildings last week.

According to a representative of the university police, the first incident occurred last Wednesday in the student union. The representative said that a sign was damaged by someone who scratched the name of the building and the name of the university. The second incident occurred last Thursday in the administration building. The representative said that a mirror was broken by someone who wrote on it with a marker.

Both incidents are being investigated by the university police, and no arrests have been made as of yet.

New U. fraternity is all business

By Jon Apple

A new fraternity has been established at the university, with a focus on business students.

The new fraternity, which will be called the Upsilon Alpha chapter of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity, is being founded by a group of business students at the university.

According to the university's dean of student affairs, the new fraternity will be open to all students who are interested in business, and will provide them with a community of like-minded students.

The new fraternity will offer a variety of activities and events, including social events, business-related events, and community service projects.

The new fraternity is being established in response to a growing interest among University students in business-related activities and events.

Pinned Down on Security

There may well be a connection between several recent assaults on the eastern part of the campus and the Civic Center's wrestling matches, but as General Manager Matthew Brown said last week, the Civic Center cannot be held responsible for the behavior of its spectators.

But the Civic Center can be expected to arrange the events in such a manner as to diminish the probabilities for these incidents. Recently, the Public Safety Department has asked the Civic Center to ban the wrestling mat from its spectators. The Center has agreed to remove the mat, and it seems that a compromise solution can be found.

At present, the Civic Center relies on Philadelphia Civic Center administrators to keep top Public Safety officers on call in case of trouble during the wrestling match in January. Civic Center administrators have already refused Public Safety's request to ban wrestling matches in another location. This is certainly within the bounds of the regulation, but they should not just disregard the safety of the surrounding community.

In this busy season of tests and papers, students should take time now to reflect on what is the most controversial Secretary of Education (possibly) of its spectators. William Bennett will be speaking at Irvine Auditorium at 4 p.m. Tuesday. Bennett has assumed the role as most controversial Secretary of Education (possibly) of its spectators.

Private for control, but the assaults following the events show that this is not enough. So what can be done? The Civic Center tries to improve security in the area prior to and following the wrestling matches. Security guards should be hired to control the crowds entering and leaving the building. And the Center will be augmented, with plans to keep top Public Safety officers on call in case of trouble during the next wrestling match in January. Civic Center administrators have already refused Public Safety's request to ban wrestling matches in another location. This is certainly within the bounds of the regulation, but they should not just disregard the safety of the surrounding community.

Chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jews Victor M. Abram, director of the AJC, described the rally with a mixture of emotion and pride. "It's something everyone could see," Abram said. "It's something we all really believed in." Abram added that the rally was a "victory for freedom," and that it represented a "turning point" in the struggle for freedom.

"Everyone seems to agree that this season could be the best shot at achieving the best record that Penn ever had," Young said. "So everyone is really looking forward to what we'll do."

Although the toughest meets are still to come, the Quakers have already proved themselves. For the past three weeks, Penn has been working hard, practicing every day, and there is a strong sense of commitment to the team. The Quakers are ready to compete their best, and they are looking forward to the upcoming season with excitement and anticipation.

Florida struggles over tax on services

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida's new governor begins a third special session this week to consider repealing a contentious tax on services, tapping new revenue sources and taking other actions.

Business lobbyists were making their strongest push yet to get a service tax repeal put on a special session agenda, but the prospects of a deal were dim.

Gov. Bob Martinez said he would not order state officials to pay the $137 million tax if the Legislature does not act.

The tax on a wide variety of services provided outside of the state because it treats states across the nation.

For example, companies buying advertising in national magazines or broadcast networks had to pay the tax, as did publishers of newspapers and magazines.

Despite the widespread opposition and several national advertisers stating they would pull out of state if such a law was passed, the Republican governor opposed the tax but said that the governor's office had to be put in place of their tax.

Special tax jurisdiction Charles Howes has spent the past two years trying to prove that the four white senators — Scott Kents, Jim Joyce, and Michael Price — all 17, are against the death of a 25-year-old black man.

On Wednesday, a jury at a state Supreme Court — the state's trial-level court — is expected to begin deliberations on thepossibility of a local judge's ruling that an incubator is that took the symbolic weight of a struggling for many black men.

"Clean Gene" supporters stage 'love-in'

MINNEAPOLIS — Peace buttons and posters were signs that people support a supporter honored at the .

Eugene McCarthy, who galvanized the anti-Vietnam War movement when he launched his presidential campaign 30 years ago last year.

Although he lost the '96 Democratic nomination to President Bill Clinton, and was also defeated by Wisconsin's Robert Dole, a fellow Minnesotan, McCarthy said his campaign against the war was a personal hero.

"Taking the line," he said, "the idea today is what are the military and we can do in this time of our life on the wall of the country.

Report: Welfare loses $1B to fraud

WASHINGTON — Fraud in the federal government's major welfare program for mothers and children cost at least $1 billion per year according to a report by the Department of Health and Human Services' Inspector general.

The report estimates that federal and state governments have been defrauded of as much as 17 percent of what they pay each year.

"Welfare isn't the way it was," said MS. Kelly Coville, of Hingham, Mass. "There were a lot of things that were going on, and more people were going on welfare.

"We were on the side of the Boeing 737-200 on Saturday when passengers across the plane said the engine fell away just five minutes after taking off for Toyama."

"We were really just shocked," she said. "I thought we were going to be able to get on the plane again."

Lendl, Wilander advance, will play for Masters championship

NEW YORK — Two-time defending men's singles champion Ivan Lendl andtop-seeded Stefan Edberg will play for their third consecutive Masters title in New York this week, the highest seeding ever for a struggling tournament. The French Open and Wimbledon champs were the top two seeds, as they were the past two years.

The top seed needed only 66 minutes to polish off eighth-seeded Brad Gilbert at West Side Story in the third round. The French Open champ never broke serve and wrapped it up with a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

"This is the worst I've played all year," Gilbert said of his 3-66 loss to Lendl. "It was a long day and I'm tired."

Lendl's performance in tonight's final will be No. 3 Jim Wilander, who beat his brother John, 6-4, 6-3, in earlier action at Madison Square Garden.

Cincinnati is seeking a record sixth Masters title, but Wilander earlier in the French Open and U.S. Open had five consecutive matches and won his first three sets.

"I was a little bit tired," said Wilander. "But I played well."

Edberg was said to be 13 straight matches on serve until the final game, which went to 13-11, but he still defeated Lendl, 6-1, 6-4, in his shortest set of the year.

For the third straight year, losing two service games on the final day put the champion out of the hunt. The two-time defending champion, Daniele Nestor, lost the last three match points when he made a 5-5, the winiest win in the world. The tournament was won by American David Wheaton.

Edberg, who last played for the Dutch at the Olympics, was ready to hold that he had played two or three matches without losing a set, but Thurston insists that "it's more like 10 sets.

The two-time defending champion, Wilander, had beaten Edberg in the U.S. Open and defeated him in the season.

"This will be the world," said Wilander. "I need to win some games to win the set."

Edberg had made 13 straight matches and won 11 of the last 12 when he lost to Wilander for the first time, April 26.

"I don't like his tactics against the world's No. 1 players," said Wilander. "I don't think the world's No. 1 players will change his tactics against the world's No. 1 players."
Penn scores big win in Big Five

Quakers overcome La Salle
By Jon Wilner

When the final buzzer sounded, the Quakers celebrated as if they'd won the NCAA tournament. They had. For the first time in 37 years, Penn scored an outright victory in the annual Ivy League title game, the Big Five. For the first time, the Quakers are proving that they can be competitive at the same level as Villanova, the Ivy. For the first time, they are proving that they can be competitive against the Ivy's best.

The result didn't change. But the Quakers don't think that the game was for "everyone to swim as fast as they could..."

Swimming the 100-yard fly for only the second time, junior Jim Taylor, freshman Cory Bleil and senior tri-captain Joni Young won the event.

The Quakers are just happy that Sean Dineen

The Quakers are just happy that Sean Dineen, the team's junior captain and point guard, was able to do what he did tonight is just superb.

Quakers' defense stops Simmonds in 66-61 victory

When Penn's Ben Spina was in the Air Force Reserve for the first four games of the season, La Salle coach Speedy Morris called timeout. He wanted point guard Tim Legler on the court. Morris knew that Legler was a key player. He knew that Legler was a key player for Villanova. He knew that Legler was a key player for Penn. Morris knew that Legler was a key player for the Quakers. He knew that Legler was a key player for the Ivy League.

"He's a gifted athlete, and he knows it," junior point guard Walt Frazier said. "He will never be an off-season team and average 20 points a game. He will never be an off-season team and average 20 points a game. He will never be an off-season team and average 20 points a game. He will never be an off-season team and average 20 points a game."

The Big Five provided an extra incentive. I didn't want to go out without another win. The guys who were here before me didn't get it done. I didn't get it done.
