Lawsuit filed in alleged police brutality case

BY RANDALL LANE

The 14-year-old allegedly beaten by a University Public Safety officer has filed a lawsuit against the university.

After his arrest, Shabazz had allegedly struck Pickett. His attorney said yesterday that his client was "thrown" into a wall by the university Public Safety officer.

The lawsuit, which was filed November 14, accuses the university of violating Shabazz's civil rights.

Nursing School often forgotten, neglected

U. treats harassment as ‘racial’

BRENT MITCHELL

The University is treating a weekend quadrangle disturbance as a racial incident, according to Public Safety spokesman Silvy Canada.

Two University students are facing harassment charges after an off-campus incident early Saturday morning. Student safety officers say the incident occurred in a dormitory.

Canada said the work Public Safety does not differentiate between types of harassment, but the Quadrangle was a ‘racial disturbance.’

Black Student Leadership President Travis Miller said late last night that the case was not yet covered by incident report but added that the student still felt the incident was important.

“The time you have students running up the hall yelling racial slurs is that seriously a major problem,” Miller said.

And the University has a responsibility to do something about it because, although we can use regular belief on armed, it can definitely regulate behavior,” Public Safety Detective Supervisor Michael Carrol said yesterday that an investigation into the incident is underway.

One student who said he was involved in the weekend disturbance declined to comment last night. It was not clear how the Inquirer Office policy can not be spurred on an incident involving a racial incident. The early morning incident began when the two University students tried to bring seven friends through the building.

Goode promises — but can he deliver?

BY BETH HENRYARD

Last November, despite what many called a lackluster first term, city voters decided to give Mayor Wilson Goode a second term — and a Second Chance.

The mayor didn’t have an easy time doing it. His agenda of tax and fee increases, the consent decree, and Community Development Corporation and push for increased city and state funds caused a lot of controversy. Mrs. Pernsley was because after looking at other people, they had already been selected. She should be replaced or the DA’s office perceived mismanagement as the reason. Williamson said. "He should be replaced or the DA’s office perceived mismanagement as the reason. Williamson said. "He should be replaced or the DA’s office perceived mismanagement as the reason. Williamson said. "He should be replaced or the DA’s office perceived mismanagement as the reason.

Goode has already won some significant positive recognition from the community. For example, the Community Development Corporation, a pay raise for top administrators and Council approval of plans for the Penn’s Landing development.

"Since this is Goode’s last term as mayor — he cannot run for a third consecutive term — some of his allies say that he will not be concerned about political popularity and may not be willing to support controversial legislation. Critics have charged that Goode is preoccupied with the newspapers and TV instead of the MOVE incident and winning re-election, ignoring the impact of his administration. Karen Warrenburg, the mayor’s official spokeswoman, said last week that the mayor plans to be as active as he was during his first term and will continue to fight for the needy. He said Goode dramatically increased spending to assist the homeless and new plans are expected.

"With the help of the Council, we’re setting a new course for Philadelphia," Goode said.

Opposing stands on controversial issues like the abuse and TV troubles have created a shaky relationship between the mayor and Council. Blackwell said that as improvement in the Council’s relationship with the Mayor, goode said toSUCCESSFULLY push an agenda.

"The mayor must step up next year to do more than just do his job," Blackwell said.

According to Dunn, one problem area is the neighborhood associations. The mayor has not utilized money efficiently and has failed to provide adequate services. Dunn said that one of her primary concerns was with city services. She pointed to drug abuse and negative employee attitudes as an area that requires the mayor’s attention.

The mayor and his immediate staff have to be as active as they were in the past. The mayor’s ability to gain back and he’d like to see the officers get along better. Another issue facing the mayor will be the negotiations of new contracts for the city’s unions. A study by the administration conducted last year concluded that city agencies could save millions of dollars. If the unions agreed to give up some contractual rights, the city could save millions of dollars. If the unions agreed to give up some contractual rights, the city could save millions of dollars. If the unions agreed to give up some contractual rights, the city could save millions of dollars.

The wage increase Tucker is recommending has not been made available. We’re willing to negotiate on all the issues that the police, firefighters, white-collar and blue-collar workers have to raise. But President of Firefighters Local 22 Les Yost said last week that the union’s position on work rule concessions will depend on the amount of the pay raise.

We can certainly use more money and we can certainly use more money. The mayor’s announcement for additional workers and money is a clear indication that he plans to follow through on the commitment he made in his inaugural speech. Assistant to DHS Commissioner Kevin Tucker proposed exchanging higher pay for work rule concessions earlier this month.

Goode has said he does not support pay increases, but the police unions seeking a 25% increase and the firefighters are requesting a 52% raise. The debate over the rights of management versus the rights of workers will likely rage for months.

Nursing students say they get no respect

In Brief

Vandals protest McDonald's murder

Undetermined vandalism prompted "R.F. Meters" signs to be knocked down last Monday night.

A group calling itself "Concerned and Angry Students" claimed responsibility for the incident, saying it was a response to Saturday's K-9 search of the campus. The group released a statement to the administration, which said it would release a statement on Monday. The statement said it alleged that the police "arrived while the students were still at the McDonald's.

In a statement to The Daily Pennsylvania last night, the group said they are trying to force the administration to close the morning hours.

The statement said, "We are calling to McDonald's so that they will find the 24 hour policy unenforceable."

Professor to host TV show on AIDS

Academy of Medical and Professor Barlow will be the first to appear on the show in a national television program that will document the history of their disease.

The goal is to bring the history of the disease to the public, and the show will discuss the world's historical diseases. Each season will focus on a different disease, and the project will be a joint venture between the Hunter Foundation and the National Institutes of Health.

Jennifer Barlow will also look at AIDS, one of the most common killers, starting in the 1980s.

Plates will be up at 9:00 pm on Channel 12.

Reporting Crime and More

Pennsylvania House Bill 100 requires the University to provide prospective students with information on off-campus crime, and for that reason the bill has been a rallying cry for students and parents concerned about safety at college.

But among the questions the bill will force the University to answer are how to air inappropriate comments and how should make students as well as administrators seriously paused and reconsider their positions on the basis.

The six questions range from whether single-sex dormitories are available on demand, to whether prospective students are tested for alcohol and drug dependency. Another question asks if liquor laws are "vigorously enforced" by campus police. If the University were to fail to meet these, they would have to rem- per-priY peet/sei 2-

But the catch is that some of the answer* would concern about safety on campus enme. and for thai reason ihe bill determined to make students informed would be much more to the point than the one currently before the state government.

There are effective ways to pressure universities to improve security. Instead of forcing schools to disclose crime statistics to high school seniors, the House will try to force them to bring to the campus community about the crime situation. Informed students, as well as modifying their own behavior, can be counseled upon to pressure the ad-mnistration if they know their lives are in danger.

Campus crime over the last two years show that and students will demand more changes if the current string of crimes continues.

To the Editor:

"Country Without a Man" (Op. 1/18) was an amusing and insightful commentary on the continuing hollow nature of the administration's "information. Unfortunately, the building meetings and "levels of information in the press."

The description of the Republican Party as having "32 million members (who) pretentiously and proactively run a lower class neighborhood in Washington," seems entirely out of place in an otherwise perspective on the topic of civil rights. What highlights the need for the University's administrative push to diversify enrollment. While, the administration's error of only thinking in terms of providing an education for a select group of students, is one of the main good fortune for Mr. Greenbaum.

New cholstered may trifle heart risks

NEW ORLEANS — An estimated 3 in 5 Americans who have a single risk factor for heart disease, such as obesity or high blood pressure, will develop at least one more risk factor within the next 10 years, a study from Columbia University Medical Center in New York found.

The study, which analyzed data from the Framingham Heart Study, found that among adults in the United States, the prevalence of at least one additional risk factor for heart disease increased from 37 percent to 83 percent over a 10-year period. The risk factors included obesity, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, smoking, diabetes, and physical inactivity.

The findings highlight the importance of identifying and managing risk factors early to prevent the development of multiple risk factors, which can increase the risk of heart disease.

Court declines to free state committee

WASHINGTON — A federal court has declined to free a state committee, calling it a "threat to the state's reputation.

The court ruled that the state's action of trying to prevent the committee from meeting was not justified.

The state had argued that the committee, which was investigating allegations of corruption, was a threat to the state's reputation. The court disagreed, saying that the state's actions were unconstitutional.

The ruling means that the committee will continue to meet, despite the state's efforts to prevent it.

Nunn calls for weapons reduction

WASHINGTON — Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) called for a reduction in the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal.

Nunn, who chairs the Senate Armed Services Committee, called for a reduction in the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal from about 7000 to 5000 warheads.

"We need to reduce our nuclear stockpile," Nunn said. "We are living in a world of nuclear proliferation and we need to demonstrate to the world that we are committed to reducing our nuclear weapons.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has been working on a bill to reduce the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal.

said. But Friday, alter Barteti was arrested, the agency placed them in foster care because they found no signs of abuse, the 77th time the agency sought to have the children placed in foster care because they found no signs of abuse. A mini who wailed formal charges last week against the 23-year-old pastor from the mother of the children apparently withheld information from social workers about her husband's alleged drug use and the son's death.

Michael Barrett, 23, faced charges of murder and involuntary manslaughter in the death of his 7-month-old son. Barrett had been released on bond two weeks ago. During that time, he and his wife, Sara, 17, were arrested, tried and found guilty of murdering their baby and sentenced to life in prison.

The case of the children's murder has been the subject of intense media coverage, and the public has been shocked by the brutality of the attack. The children were found dead in their home, and the mother was charged with child abuse and murder.

NIH delays federal research support

Biology Associate Professor Rocky Tuan said similar difficulties yesterday, but he said he faces even more severe consequences.

"I have two grants that were supposed to be paid a month ago and they never started," Tuan said. "I couldn't initiate the research."

Tuan said that he has been able to continue his work on other research projects using separate grant money, but "We're actually doing rather well," he said, referring to a tentative 4 percent increase over fiscal year 1987 that the agency was allocated in the federal budget. "Many agencies did not do as well as we did."

Other researchers said that they have found it difficult to pay the salaries of their assistants. And those able to pay their support staff through outright reductions in grant money subsequently had difficulty buying equipment and proceeding with research.

The federal budget was held up last fall due to bipartisan negotiations in Congress. Under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction bill, major spending cuts would have been implemented if the President and Congress hadn't been able to agree on a substitute package by November 20.

Rev. King earned philosophy degree from U.

By JILL STENBOCK

Taking the prominent business courses, media and public service courses that he intended to take at Harvard University, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., could not find his way. Instead, King enrolled at Harvard University after taking three graduate philosophy courses there. The right side of his diploma has resulted in him being created an African Student Association.

The right side of his diploma has resulted in him being created an African Student Association.

In a press conference on Monday, Stetson said that his office opened in April 1998. We are at the point of saturating a new student body, he added.

"The search has become the back bone of many admissions processes," Stetson added.

Presentations were given of the activity center on Saturday, January 23.

English department to alter major

By CAROL VINZANT

The English major is undergoing a reassessment to align the major's course offerings and mandate a senior English major.

The college's recent report indicates that English majors are required to take a different set of courses, and the college has decided to make some changes.

The changes include:

1. The elimination of the current requirement of writing a senior thesis.
2. The addition of a new course, "History of Writing," which will be mandatory for all English majors.
3. The introduction of a new course, "Creative Writing," which will be offered on a rotating basis.
4. The elimination of the current requirement of taking a 400-level course.

The changes are expected to take effect in the fall of 1988.
Anderson outplays Smits, Drexel downs Marist, 76-67

A confident Anderson scored 22 second-half points, but Marist's John Rankin had 20, making it a close game. Anderson, who led the Dragons' next 19 points, was unable to stop Marist's attack, which was led by John Rankin and Rodney Bourgarel (16 points).

Recovering from an injury, Tara Fitzpatrick hopes to play for the Quakers against Richmond tomorrow.

Gymnastics seeks home advantage

Quakers play host to West Chester

BY GAILA ESPINOZA

It was supposed to be the last game of winter for the gymnastics team, but there is no place like home. As the Quakers (3-7) prepare for tomorrow's singles meet against West Chester University (3-7), 5 p.m., in Rec Hall, and student support will give them a significant advantage. Penn took last Sunday when Northwest Penn's gymnastics team swept the Quakers, 176-105-85.
