Shops at Drexel?

Businesses return to Powelton block

By LOIS DAV

Drexel students will finally have their own shopping strip when several stores open that don this spring on the northeast corner of the Philadelphia University.

"It is a fantastic opportunity," said Drexel Student Council President Helen O'Banion. "We are so excited to have these businesses come to the area." The "shops at Drexel" will include a new coffee shop, a shoe store, a bookstore, and a pharmacy.

Human Services head under fire for death of children

By LAURA MERH

Last spring, two more children died while under the supervision of the Pennsylvania Department of Human Services.

"Even though estimates vary depending on the source of the data," said State Rep. Robert Farnsworth, "it is clear that the state needs to improve its system of child welfare services." The number of child deaths in Pennsylvania has increased by 30% over the past five years.

Council to debate exclusions of foreigners from some research

By RANDALL LANE

University Council will debate today whether foreign applicants should be excluded from research involving human subjects.

"We believe that the council must take a stance on this issue," said University President Thomas Katsouleas. "It is crucial that we ensure the safety and well-being of all participants in research projects." The council will meet to discuss the implications of excluding foreigners.

Security forum draws only 12

By BERT MENTHE

Unlike previous forums on campus security, this one did not attract a large audience. Only 12 people showed up to listen to the presentation on the current state of campus safety.

"We were expecting a larger turnout," said Professor Jane Smith, the forum organizer. "It's disappointing that so few students showed up." The forum was held in the Student Union ballroom.

All New

University officials will spend $1 million this summer to renovate the roof and upper portions of Logan Hall. College Hall's facade is also slated to be renovated.

"This is a major renovation project," said University President Jane Smith. "We are committed to keeping our facilities up to date and providing a safe and comfortable environment for our students." The renovations will include new windows, a new roof, and updated electrical systems.

Ara Harald Der Marderosian, a professor at the school who also holds an adjunct professorship in the University's Veterinary School, has been studying hallucinogenic botanicals and medicinal plants for more than 20 years. His laboratory is filled with ultra-wide lights and plants of all sorts.

"I lecture to the Veterinary School about poisonous plants," he said yesterday. "It's very important, because small animals will eat them and the students have to know how to treat it. We also see a lot of patients where you can see what animals became sick.

Der Marderosian explained that there are only about 25 percent of poisonous plants that are from natural products, mostly mono-cancer drugs. In addition, osteo-concussion remedies, such as aspirin, are often a natural origin. Der Marderosian said in the short run, for research, it is not that useful. But the classes here are about the issues that the classmates are interested in.

The college's physical therapy major, which awards graduates a bachelor's degree after four years of study, takes a certain type of student to attend the school. It is free, has the number of transfer students.

Engineering unveils new program

Curriculum geared toward executive education

The Engineering School posted yesterday that the School is now the only institution at the University that can instruct executives about more advanced management issues.

"If you ask what a modern engineer needs to know, he says, "today, the answer is everything," Marvin Science and Engineering Professor Louis Catallino added yesterday. And teaching engineers about the world outside of engineering is just one of a number of new initiatives the School is working on.

â€œThe School has been one of the first unique educational programs in the area,â€œ Professor Louis Catallino said yesterday. "We believe the new program is unique in the area,â€œ he said, "that it is disciplinary, and that it has more than one mode of delivery."
SEC chair to release report outlining goals

By PAUL KRAMER
Senior Executive Committee Chairwoman Barbara I.owry has requested that Ted Adams release his mid-year report to University community members. According to Adams, the report should include a panel of consultants to look at what is right and what is wrong in the Penn system.

"We don't have to do anything to change Penn," Adams said. "We are already changing." Adams added that he believed the consultants would be able to influence decisions because they are able to present their arguments to the committee.

The importance of setting up a mechanism that is acceptable to both SEC and Senate committees was emphasized by the faculty member who represented SEC. The faculty member said that the committee was proceeding at a reasonable pace and not neglecting any issues.

According to the report, the faculty representatives conversed with student representatives from all of the Faculty Council, Adams said. The report also included information about the student body's concerns, which have yet to be addressed.

The University calendars of 1989-90, including the current semester proposals, and 1990-91, which have yet to be approved, have been included in Adams' report. SEC is currently discussing the issues of outlining both schedules forward or backward once a week.

The University is celebrating its 250th anniversary and is currently debating the issues of adjusting both schedules forward or backward once a week. Adams' report also addresses the proposed changes in the organization of the Senate Committee on Conduct. The SEC sees student and faculty concerns after the proposal is reviewed and installed many times.

SEC is leaning towards moving commencement back one week. In 1990-91, commencement ceremonies were moved to a time when Jewish holidays do not conflict with the commencement ceremonies. Adams explained.

The faculty representative also addressed the concerns of the Senate Executive Committee and Senate. The faculty member said that the policy was currently under review so that faculty members have more flexibility in planning with their students.

Faculty Condemn Latest West Bank Tension

To the Editor:

In the past few weeks the actions of the Israeli government in the occupation situation have moved to a new level of oppression and terror against the Palestinian population. While Palestinian protest demonstrations against 20 years of occupation began in December, the Israeli army's response with brutal force has continued. Palestinian protesters have been killed by Israeli bullets (The New York Times, 12/25/87). The government officially adopted a new policy ordering the army and the police to beat Palestinians.

The first priority is to use force, regardless of how many Palestinians are killed by Israeli gunfire. The repressive regimes in South Africa and Latin America are often cited as models for what to do in the occupied territories. The military police in South Africa are loved and trusted - exactly the opposite of the repressive policies of the Israeli government.

The military police in South Africa are loved and trusted - exactly the opposite of the repressive policies of the Israeli government.

The news that the leaders of the Israeli government, rather than proposing a new peaceful solution, have responded with lethal force again, only deepens the despair and anger. There may be one thing that we can all agree upon: silence is no longer an option.

Nancy Frankfurt-Hall, the director of the Center for Urban Community Service, characterized the area before development as a "dead-end" neighborhood. "The block was dead," Frankfurt-Hall said. "It was an area of old buildings. A couple of stores have already moved out, and mechanisms and the people's businesses, periodicals, included newsstand stores, florist, two clothing stores, and a dry cleaner. "Around here, there's so much activity, it would not be unusual for students to pick up the papers on the street," he said. (national origin)," she said. "It's unfair that students can do what other students cannot and that the university discriminates against foreign students," he said. "It's against the proposal because it amounts to discrimination against the proposal because it amounts to discrimination."

State asks to keep Scarfo jurors secret

Prosecutors have asked a Common Pleas Court judge to keep the names of the 12 jurors who convicted Nicodemo "Little Nicky" Scarfo of murder secret. The judge will rule on the request later this month.

Defense attorneys argued the proposal would hamper their ability to conduct a fair defense. They said the proposal would "violate the public's right to know who participated in the jury selection process."

Once upon a time...

As the story begins, Frankenstein has arrived at the North Pole after years in pursuit of the Creature. Their final confrontation is interspersed with moments from the past as the young scientist Victor Frankenstein experiments with reanimating life. The creature exists in the past as Adam. There are two actors in the role of Frankenstein and two actors portray the Creature...past and present.

Neff keeps Princeton in motion

By NEIL WENSSRGER

Princeton had a secret weapon hiding in the corner of the Palestra floor last night. He was the short guy, the guard, with the black sweats.

"The player is in," Neff said. "That's how I played Penn. I was in for 20 minutes last year, and I just kept them [Larry] Finaly off the court. That worked just like the Bird.

Actually, Neff was the only good-looking player on the court. But when you're opposite Neff, you are opposite a secret weapon that you haven't seen before.

Small-town girl Bittler displays big-time game

By HOWARD FALKOFOR

Princeton or Penn — Sandi Bittler couldn't decide which school to attend. But as Bittler visited the small town of Princeton, N.J., and the big city of Philadelphia, Pa., midway through her senior year at Mercer (Pa.) High School, she knew exactly where she wanted to go.

"It was the closest thing to home," Bittler explained. "We were going to be a small town setting.

...That influenced me a lot when it came to deciding where I wanted to go to school.

...At the Palestra, Bittler was the difference. She possessed a big-time basketball game.

M. Fencing barely defeats Princeton, 14-13

By ALAN SCHWARZ

Despite losing two of three weapons divisions against Princeton last night, the Penn men's fencing team continued its dominance in the other division to earn a 15-12 victory over the Tigers.

The Quakers (5-5, scoring off Saturday's loss to Dartmouth) have now lost five straight to Princeton, a team that has its sights set on winning another national championship.

The senior wing-guard Sandi Bittler contributed to Princeton looking to win its first game of the season.

Princeton defeats W. Hoops, 74-60

By RALPH DURROW

Before last night's game, both the Penn and Princeton women's basketball teams topped their series' — the same way. But after the game, both teams went on to different places.

In the series, the Quakers raised another flag on their list of games against the Tigers. "That's the problem, and that's what we need to work on," Princeton head coach Cheryl Rath said. "We need to do a better job of putting the ball in the basket.

on 16-of-16 shooting from the floor and 7-of-7 from the free-throw line.

"It's a great victory for the Tigers," Bittler said..."My dad called me before the game, and he said that The Daily Princetonian called me on the phone and we'd like to run a story on you. And we did..."
