A different ZBT comes back to a different campus

By BRENT MIDDLECRO

After an 18-month suspension for violations of the code of conduct, the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity officially returned to campus last week, and Friday night the new chapter hosted its first party on campus since the spring of 1988.

The event had been planned for weeks, but the local police department was leery about the group's presence on campus, and a small number of protest rallies were planned for the evening. Few students wanted to talk in depth about the fraternity's return, but many said the chapter's presence on campus was a reflection of the University's policies and procedures.

The judicial panel hearing the Vincent Phaahla case did not rule on the academic charges against the former Wistar Institute scientist last week.

According to sources familiar with the case, the panel may recommend that Phaahla be reinstated, but the decision will be up to the administration. Phaahla was accused of not cooperating with the case, but many said he has cooperated with the case.

U. working to make transition easier for international students

By LAUREN SHAHAM

Over the past three weeks, the Office of International Student Affairs at the University has assisted hundreds of international students who have moved to campus for the fall semester. The office has been helping students register and other OIP assistants have served as virtual walking encyclopedias of American culture, answering questions about everything from taxes to health insurance to how Americans do black-top. In her role as an international student orientation assistant, Diana Salazar helped new international students, any student already on campus who wanted to move off campus, and potential students who wanted to transfer. OIP expanded its orientation program this year to include two graduate student orientation coordinators and eight student assistants. Since August, 10 multi-lingual advisors have run meetings and answered questions in one-on-one consultations. NEW YORK (AP) — Maverick Soviet politician Boris Yeltsin, who will visit Philadelphia this week, said Sunday that his country faces continuing economic and social decline and can learn from American democracy while changing its political system.

"We are in an economic and financial and social crisis, as well as in respect to the Communist party," Yeltsin said on the CBS News television program, "Face the Nation."

Yeltsin arrived in New York on Saturday to begin his first visit to the United States, a two-week tour that includes a stop in the city. On Wednesday, Yeltsin will speak at a luncheon sponsored by the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia at the Hotel Atop the Bellevue in Center City.

"We have to take what is positive from Soviet experience and what has been positive in the experience of the other socialist countries, positive experience — and on the basis of that create a new model of socialism," Yeltsin said through a translator.

Yeltsin, 58, lost his position as Moscow's Communist Party chief in 1987 after criticizing the slow pace of change under Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, but returned this year as an outspoken member of a radical bloc in the Soviet legislature.

He continued his typically blunt criticism in the Sunday television appearance.

"The whole society is in a crisis and such extraordinary measures of an economic or financial nature are obviously necessary since the standard recently not only has not risen but has actually fallen," he said.

"I must use some opportunities to accelerate perestroika," or political and economic restructuring.

"Naturally there has started a movement from below in the form of strikes indicating dissatisfaction with the national leadership, including with Mr. Gorbachev," Yeltsin said.

In what will surely be the easiest test of your intellect this term, Apple invites you to try winning a free Apple Macintosh Plus personal computer merely by finding it in this drawing.

We’ll even give you a hint. It’s not the table, the lamp, or the chair.

Now you’re on your own.

Register, look for content details where Macintosh computers are sold on your campus. Oh, all right, we’ll give you a hint for that, too: Look at the bottom of this ad.

But do it really, really fast. Because only one Macintosh is being given away on this campus, and it’s going to happen soon.

Soon, as in right away. Pronto. Quick-like.

But hey, you can take a hint.

Somebody’s going to win a free Macintosh.

Collins said that colleges are likely to experience outbreaks because of their close-knit environments.

"College kids are more likely to spread the measles because they live in close proximity of each other as well as attending classes and eating together," Collins said.

Collins said that health care professionals disagree about when a person should receive the second vaccination. She said that The Academy of Pediatrics has stated that a person should be vaccinated again at the age of 12, but that other groups recommend that people should obtain the second dose at six years old.

The CDC's Health and Immunization division recently announced that it will release a policy this fall strongly suggesting that schools require students to receive two doses of measles, mumps and rubella vaccines. Cases of Mumps and rubella, though less frequent, are also on the rise, Collins said.

The measles is a highly contagious viral disease spread through the air. An infected person can spread the disease by sneezing, breathing or coughing into the air. Early symptoms of the disease are high fever, runny nose, watery and red eyes, sore throat and a red rash over the entire body.

Becker handles Lendl in 4 sets to win Open

NEW YORK — Boris Becker overcame a change of Windsbom grass and, now, a solid-duty of U.S. Open tennis to meet and stake his claim to the world’s No. 1 ranking by beating top-seeded Ivan Lendl 7-6, 1-6, 6-3, 7-6 in an exciting four-hour, five-set battle.

“This is much more demanding,” Becker said afterward. “San Francisco it’s just the same, the Open, with the heat, the planes and the spectators.

Becker’s win was a breakthrough in the fourth set. But he didn’t win it without his share of drama.

Yanks won't promote Adkins in '89

By ALAN SCHWARZ

Baseball's Eastern League has earned a new home for its 11th regular season. The team's franchise, which won the league championship Saturday, and the first Quakers player to make the major league was promoted to Albany. It was making a bid to become a member of the American League—3:45 — and with the team being effectively a part of this season's division title race, the Yankee team has shown a commitment to younger players.

One strike against Adkins is that he does not possess an overpowering fastball that would catch the eyes of the organization's scouts. However, he pitched in the recent Red-Blue scrimmage, which won the league championship Saturday, and the first Quakers player to make the major league.

Please see YANK, page 13

Steele disappointed with Red-blue game

Coach 'not overly concerned' by sloppy play

By SCOTT WAYNEBERN

Last night Friday the Penn football team held its dress rehearsal scrimmage at Franklin Field. And it's a good thing it was just a dress rehearsal and not opening night, because the Quakers' defense impressed its visitors with its depth and strengths in its efforts to occupy the opposing front and allow the Quakers' guys up front aren't real big, but they're strong and they can run.

Receivers to see their role expanding in Penn offense

By GREG BROWN

As did millions upon millions of college football fans across the country, nearly 35,000 faithful Penn fans converged on Franklin Field to watch the 1988 Red-Blue game. And it was a beautiful day in Philadelphia, with the sun shining brightly and the temperature hovering around 60 degrees. The color guard marched onto the field, and the band played the national anthem. The players took the field, and the game began.

The defensive line is obviously the biggest question mark facing the Quakers as they prepare for their first game this Saturday against Colgate. Every other positional unit on the team returns at least one starter, and the line is a crucial importance to Penn's defensive schemes.
