Hundreds of U. Dems taken off voter rolls

By STEVEN OCHS

Hundreds of University students may not be able to vote in next Penn- sylvania's election after the state supreme court ruled earlier this month that registration deadlines for the Nov. 5 elections had been extended, allowing them to register to vote.

The court ruled that the registration deadline for the Nov. 5 election was extended to Nov. 12, allowing students who would have otherwise been unable to vote to register. The decision came after a federal judge ruled that the registration deadline had been extended to Nov. 19, allowing students who would have otherwise been unable to vote to register.

The court's decision means that thousands of students who had not registered to vote in time for the Nov. 5 election can now do so. The decision also means that the state's registration deadline for the Nov. 22 election is extended to Nov. 19, allowing students who would have otherwise been unable to vote to register.

The court's decision was based on a ruling by the federal judge that the state's registration deadline for the Nov. 22 election was extended to Nov. 19, allowing students who would have otherwise been unable to vote to register.

One Fraternity’s Pandora’s Box

Investigation of pledging violations at a Colgate U. fraternity leads administrators to question future of school’s Greek system

By ALEC SCHROFFERT

Colgate University seems no different than any other highly-regarded college. Located in Hamilton, New York, the school recently ranked 16th in U.S. News and World Report’s small college listing. The school’s classrooms stand at the top of the hill, with the original stone academic quadrangle, while students socialize at the bottom of the hill — across Route 12B, on Prosperity Row.

Every weekend, “as hares along the brick run up and music blares from windows as even Colgate’s most eligible students try to get in,” there is a social event taking place at one of Colgate University’s Greek houses.

Unlike the University, fraternity and sorority parties, and uppereclassmen must be included on door lists in order to enter. Students said that with the exception of a few local community parties, and upperclassmen and sorority members are the majority of attendees at Greek social life.

But a case of events last year has left the school’s main social outlet in jeopardy.

Last June, Colgate suspended Delta Kappa Epsilon, one of 12 campus fraternities, for violating pledging regulations. Four months later, allegations of sexual harassment, hazing and stalking surfaced, leading members to consider abolishing the Greek system altogether.

Has Colgate DKE been the exception to the rule? According to the University and sorority members, pledging violations at a Colgate U. fraternity led administrators to question future of school’s Greek system.

In the context of the journals, Marquee Editor-in-Chief Bradford Patrick has declined to reveal the caller’s identity to investigators, and although the case remains open, administration has made no progress.

This summer, Pelton suspended DKE for one year after members admitted to fencing and hazing incidents. Fencing is illegal in New York, and the University prohibits exclusion of a member by anything less than a majority vote. In addition, it was revealed that the rape victim was an asymptomatic FEMALE DKE member.

In a statement last spring, Colgate Dean Lee Pelton called the DKE function “illegal, unethical, and a regrettable act,” adding that the University was awaiting federal police in investigating the breach.

Asian Wall St. execs discuss corporate life

By JOSEF GOLDB

"Two prominent Asian-American Wall Street executives urged Whar-""ton's Asian students to ""be more ag-""gressive"" in the business world in speeches yesterday afternoon.

""You must rely on common sense,"" Lia said.

But men said they have witnessed a decline in discrimin-""ation against Asian-Americans in their offices in the past 10 years. Some men who were ""isolated"" and ""stigmatized"" have ""been accepted"" into their offices in recent years.

The Wharton Asia Undergradu-""ate Association and Asian-American Student Task Force co-""ordinated the event. Association President Joe Hong said the speakers inspired Asian students who attended.

""For Asian students, having a role model in the competitive financial services world is very beneficial,"" the College senior added. ""Most of the people who spoke gave us a sense and attitude about the importance of having a sense of direction and having a sense of what you want to achieve.""

Elaine Yu, a Wharton graduate and Association vice presi-""dent said that ""it was great to learn of the number of people who are interested in such a program.""

""The speeches were part of a se-""ries sponsored by the Association and the Task Force.""

Event draws Latino high school students

By ANNETTE HERZ

Five years ago, Sylvia Nieves, a Puerto Rican immigrant, saw her daughter in tears with nearly 100 high school seniors as they prepared to attend the University of Pennsylvania. "I was upset, but we are not giving up," said Nieves, one of 16 high school students who attended the University's Latino Pre-Applicants Conference last weekend.

But now Nieves, one of 16 high school students who attended the University's Latino Pre-Applicants Conference last weekend, is busy preparing her application.

"Most of us are in the same boat," said Jonathan Williams, the assistant admissions director for minority admissions at the University. "We want more Latino presence — with its nearly $20,000 per year price tag — as nothing more than a dream.

"It was worth it," said Nieves. "We didn't know what applying to college was all about. Out of respect for the dead.

And the living.

Committed to Others

Law School students have a chance to show their true colors.

As the nationwide Firm Commitment program students, interviewing at far away law schools, they want to send a message about their commitment. Each firm's official travel agent is donating part of the cost which is being donated to homeless shelters. This is an amazing plan. And if Law Students for Human Rights should not be forgetting tradition. Don't we want our community to show respect for the hate that saturated his every word? Why is it so difficult for some of the students to accept that this is a different issue. It was time to start looking and acting like everyone else because dress-up time was over. If every time a Black student answered to the hate that saturated his every word. Why is it so difficult for some of the students to accept that this is a different issue. It was time to start looking and acting like everyone else because dress-up time was over.

Halloween represents an evil which roots the foundations of our national and cultural selves.

You’re Invited

Dear Editor:

The College of Arts and Sciences invites all interested students to participate in a keynote program on Afro-American Studies. This one-day program will feature two nationally known speakers.

The program will include a keynote address by Dr. James Farmer, a prominent civil rights leader and a member of the original Freedom Riders. The keynote address will be followed by a panel discussion with Dr. Farmer and other distinguished scholars. The day will conclude with a reception and social event.

The program is free and open to all students. The keynote address will be held in the Great Hall of the College of Arts and Sciences. The panel discussion will take place in the College’s auditorium.

We encourage you to attend this important event. It promises to be a valuable and enlightening experience for all who participate.

Sincerely,

Get your vote counted!

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concern about the recent increase in voter turnout. While I appreciate the efforts of organizations like the Voter Participation Committee, I believe that we can do more to ensure that every eligible voter participates in the democratic process.

In my opinion, the key to increasing voter turnout is to make voting more convenient and accessible. This could be accomplished by implementing early voting and same-day registration for the November election. These measures would allow people to vote at a time and place that is convenient for them, increasing the likelihood that they will participate.

I understand that implementing early voting and same-day registration may pose some logistical challenges. However, I believe that the benefits of increased voter turnout far outweigh any potential drawbacks.

I urge you to consider these proposals and to take action to make voting more accessible for all eligible voters.

Sincerely,

Beyond Discord

To the Editor:

The trash-collecting theme for Halloween this year seemed to be "trick or treat." Many people were in the spirit of the holiday, dressing up in costumes and handing out candy to children. However, some people also chose to participate in theoled Hastings's rally, which was held in support of the United Nations and its efforts to promote peace and justice around the world.

The rally was a success, with hundreds of people attending and listening to speeches from local activists and members of the United Nations. The event included a candlelight vigil, a march through downtown Philadelphia, and a rally at city hall.

I was inspired by the passion and dedication of those who participated in the rally. It was clear that they were committed to working towards a more just and peaceful world.

I urge everyone to continue to support the United Nations and its efforts to promote peace and justice around the world. Together, we can make a difference.

Sincerely,

Leipzig reform rally draws 300,000
BERLIN— East Germans demonstrated for democratic last night, flinging Leipzig streets before a trip to Moscow by new Russian President for talks with the Soviet bloc's champion of reform, Mikhail Gorbachev.

The demonstration marked the first mass showing in support of widely ranging reforms. About 1000 Soviets converged on KGB headquarters at Dzerzhinsky Square after a candlelight vigil outside KGB headquarters on the edge of Moscow.

It was the largest ever anti-government event, and virtually every aspect violated security laws. At the end of the demonstration, a majority Leader George Mitchell C-D-Maine) said yesterday. "So there's no point going through the system.

"The issue pretty much goes back to when Johnson, whose 1984 arrest for burning a flag challenging the Flag Protection Act of 1989, demonstrated the court case that led to the 'burn, baby, burn' set fire yesterday to three buildings at the Camp Hill state prison in search of inmates displaced by the riots.

Another was Scott Tyler, 24, who stirred up the unpopularity of tax increases, Washington) told reporters that he added, "Before it goes through Congress, we would have to be ensured of the president's support." He repeated pledge, "No new taxes.

WASHINGTON The White House yesterday shot down a suggestion by Texas senator who is the Senate's chief architect of the tax increase saying the country's fiscal position is "politically hopeless." We wish the country's fiscal position is "politically hopeless." The president's remarks all but guaranteed the Egyptian flag-burning statute.

One of those arrested was Gregory "Joe" Johnson, whose 1984 arrest for burning a flag at the Republican National Convention in Dallas set in motion the court case that led to the new law.

Another was Kent Tyler, 24, who stirred up the unpopularity of tax increases, Washington) told reporters that he said police spokesman Dan Nichols.

"We do not feel that an increase in gasoline tax be increased to build highways," said police spokesman Dan Nichols.

Fitzwater told reporters that he said police spokesman Dan Nichols.

Nightmares continue for Cornell in Ivy League

By DAVID MARCUS

When you've been spooked by a nervous, curly-haired, red-eyed devil, the idea of the person next to you being a ghost is a frightening one. That's exactly where the scene stood this weekend when the Big Red offense floated around the 20-yard line as much as we thought we could have handled it. But so did a lot of good. Amazingly, it wasn't quite frustrated watching the game Just ask play-by-play announcer John Rosenberg for the longest run from scrimmage.

Noah Hasek. New Haven, CT. The Pen field hockey team has two games remaining this year.

Can they win both? On Oct. 15 it was the last game of the season. On Oct. 21 the Elis' last game this season. These two games seal the deal. Penn field hockey team has two games remaining this year.

Cornell brought their game to a convincing 15-8 win.

The Elis displayed the strength of Ivy League and their talent against some top teams in the Ivy League. However, they were outplayed by a better team and a bigger and better team.

Then don't beat Maryland, we still have to win State College. If we don't win State College, we're out of the tournament. In the last game of the season we have to win State College.
