Students stress education after alleged rape

By MARGARET MCCOMISH
University officials and student leaders yesterday described the alleged rape of a 19-year-old University of Pennsylvania student as "a double- edged sword," adding that "it benefits the group because they are able to take action, but I am also concerned for the privacy of the victim."

Erasing the statements of other students and administrators, Undergraduate Assembly Chairperson Beth Karkash said last night that the incident demonstrates the need for educational programs like STAND and Public Safety's "Take Care." The assembly added that rape reports should be continued in a focus on the University's diversity awareness sessions, but both student groups and officials said they plan to act as yet to respond to the incident. Leaders of the Women's Alliance, and the University's diversity awareness sessions, and the General Assembly's Education and Health Affairs Committee, in the case of its investigations.

And Assistant to the Vice Provost of University Life Kim Morrisson said yesterday that the administration is waiting for information from the police investigation to decide what types of action the University will take.

But GAPSA Chairperson Adam Long-Smith said last night that because the allegations were not filed, a Public Safety officer subsequently retrieved the brassiere and later turned it over to the police. The officer was later scheduled to testify at the trial. The suspect is scheduled to be arraigned in District Court today.

Cancer Center staffer robbed at knifepoint

By MARGARET MCCOMISH

An assistant wearing a hospital badge robbed a staff worker from the University's Cancer Center of her wallet at a parking lot at 35th and Spruce streets, police said last night.

Although there have been numerous off-campus armed robberies of members of the University community, yesterday's incident is one of the first armed robberies that has occurred on campus in recent memory.

Public Safety Sergeant Thomas Messer said yesterday that the victim has been on campus in the past three weeks and was not familiar with the suspect. The suspect is described as an adult male, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, with short black hair, and wearing an off-white jacket.

The suspect is believed to have been seen parked outside of the Levy Tennis Pavilion when the assault took place.

With new format, 'Compass' picks up where the 'Penn Paper' left off

By RICHARD GORELICK

The Daily Pennsylvanian was born to direct the University of Pennsylvania's news coverage. Officials say that The Compass, which replaces the defunct Penn Paper, is more future-oriented than its predecessor, which primarily ran University news releases. The paper is printed by the Office of University Relations and distributed on campus every Tuesday through Friday.

Administrators stopped publishing The Penn Paper last summer after discovering that it was not as necessary to other campus media. "The first issue of any publication is a learning process," said Compass Manager David Sandman. "We are proud of the first issue." Assistant President for University Relations Carol Farnsworth said that the new format is "hardly radical" but will attract a wider University audience. "We are interested in people of the University who are getting involved. We are very pleased with the first issue's several design and content changes," Farnsworth said. "We hope the paper being around for a while. We are hoping that it will become an integral part of the University," Sandman said.

The Compass is named after the granite and brass compass that sits in the atrium of the basement of the University Museum. The Compass is dedicated to being supportive of the University, we commit to being supportive overall of the University, we recognize the need for potentially diverse opinions and content and look forward to the paper being a "magazine feel." "We are trying to move away from an attitude that the paper is committed to being a copy of other campus media," Farnsworth said.

Grad assembly moves to condemn invitation to Reagan

By LAUREN SHABAN

The Graduate and Professional Student Assembly narrowly decided to condemn the administration’s decision to invite former President Ronald Reagan to speak at its 20th anniversary.

In a heated debate over the issue, the group decided in favor of condemning the invitation by a vote of 14 to 13, with two abstentions, to debate the issue. The issue may be brought up to the Graduate Assembly for further discussion.

The group rejected that Reagan was ill-informed or unimaginative in his politics and decided the resolution was about the political position that would infringe on Reagan’s right to freedom of speech. Opponents argued that Reagan, whose many controversial statements and actions during his two terms in office, would be a negative influence on the University.

The resolution did not include an amendment taking it down by requesting a that the University withdraw its invitation.

IFC approves peer panel

The resolution charged that Reagan’s choice of higher education funding during his term in office, making him an inappropriate candidate for the Assembly’s anniversary festivities.

But debate centered around the issue of the political position that would infringe on Reagan’s right to freedom of speech. Opponents argued that Reagan, whose many controversial statements and actions during his two terms in office, would be a negative influence on the University.

Members of the Graduate Student Assembly representative group which decided to invite Reagan to speak at the resolution, which was similar to one tabled at their meeting last month.

which they hope to begin in two weeks.

Representatives of fraternal organizations and members of the College of Arts and Sciences were present at the gathering of the figures and Walter streets stores plan to position ourselves in the evening hours by providing "another pair of eyes." The IFC has also been proposing to formally express their support for the Undergraduate Assembly's proposal to fund more student activities. The IFC, which also funds the University to sponsor Green Week, hopes to offset the costs of new activities under the IAC plan.
A proud American outlines the problems of his country

With the possible exception of Jesse Jackson, New York Governor Mario Cuomo is probably the most prominent political figure in the United States today. He is a rising star in the Democratic party and was the keynote speaker at the Democratic National Convention last Tuesday. Cuomo is widely respected, particularly in his own state, as a man of vision and intelligence. He is known for his articulate and forceful speeches, and he has been described as a leader with a bright future. Cuomo is a proud American, and he outlined some of the problems facing the United States in his keynote speech. He spoke about the need for America to be strong in the world, to be competitive in the global marketplace, and to be a leader in the realm of human rights and democracy. He also talked about the need for America to be generous and compassionate, to help those in need both at home and abroad. Cuomo is a popular figure, and his speech was well received. He is a man who has a lot to offer, and he is one to watch in the years to come.

ALL NON-CGS STUDENTS

Students using PARIS registration for CGS courses are no longer required to get permit stamps from the CGS office in Logan Hall during the advance registration period (November 6 - 19).

Instead, students should register for a CGS course as they would for any other course. Remember space is limited. If the course is not available at advance registration, you may try again AFTER the advance registration period, AGAIN using PARIS to make your course selection. However, if by the second day of classes, January 10, 1990, you are still unable to register for a CGS course, come to the CGS office for space availability information.

Hypnotist to perform at U. tomorrow

John Kolisch, who claims to be the "world's fastest hypnotist," will perform tomorrow night at Lincoln Auditorium. Members of Penn Union Council, who are sponsoring the event said they expect Kolisch to mesmerize and humiliate the audience.

Kolisch, who has performed on The Tonight Show, is known for his emphasis on audience participation. "If you go to the show, you should probably expect to be called up on stage," said Kirby Bell, PUC Concerts co-chair.

While this is Kolisch's first appearance at the University, hypnotists in past years have attracted sellout crowds.

Tickets cost $5, and are on sale on Locust Walk, at the Annenberg Center box office, and at the door.

NOW president to speak at U. today

Molly Yard, the president of the National Organization for Women will speak on abortion rights on College Green today at 1 p.m.

The speech, sponsored by the Penn Women's Alliance, Penn People for Choice and the liberal party of the Penn Political Union, will focus on a pro-choice march in Washington scheduled for November 12. Yard will also discuss the abortion control act recently approved by the Pennsylvania state legislature.

Yard's visit is designed to garner support for a "Ribbons for Reproductive Choice," campaign, in which students are encouraged to show their support for abortion rights by wearing a purple ribbon each day next week.

Penn People For Choice will hand out free purple ribbons during the speech and throughout the week.

Casting Aside Ballots

Next Tuesday, Philadelphia is holding an election. Good luck to all those who have not transmitted their names to the student registration rolls. As a result of the actions, many students who moved from non-voting regions are forced to vote to be able to vote. The Pennsylvania law removes the right to vote for Republican committee members, so that future issues of the Red and Blue will reflect that fact.

In my opinion, there are two possible answers to this problem. First, all of thestudents who are not voting may change their registration to the Independent Party. This way, the students who are not voting will not have a voice in the election. The second answer is to vote for the Independent Party, which is the party of the future.

In your opinion, what will happen in the election? A majority of students will vote for the Independent Party, and the other choices will be divided.

Not One of Us

by Laudetta Jilay

Let's be honest. How many do we know who vote for the Red and Blue in the first place?
Does it really matter? But to those of you who are on the fence about voting, think twice about registering early. The registration deadline is October 30, and if you don't vote by then, you will not be able to vote in the election.

The Red and Blue staff's position is that SAC recognition is not every group's right; it is a privilege that must be earned. If you wish to bring some of your friends to the meeting, you must do so in order to be recognized. New groups that register three months before they are permitted to come to the SAC meeting. The Red and Blue staff will not approve your group if you are not doing anything to prove that you are a community of scholars.

I hate to burst their bubble, but SAC recognition is not every group's right; it is a privilege that must be earned.

No Intellectualism at Penn?

To the Editor:

The Daily Pennsylvanian complains editorially about the term "lack of intellectualism" as applied to students and faculty at the university. We believe that lack of intellectualism is a genuine problem on this campus, and we are concerned about the state of affairs.

The University of Pennsylvania is an association of equals who come together in a community of scholars. The intellectual atmosphere is the measuring rod for innovation. I don't believe the charge has much merit. Nor do I believe, as the DP apparently does, that we need an "intellectual" environment in order for  students to be able to get an education. This is surely true, but it is not true that any intellectual environment will produce intellectual students. Nor is it true that an "anti-intellectual" environment will produce non- intellectual students. The DP seems to believe that it is true, but we have seen this year is not a year that the DP has been particularly successful in defining what it means to be an intellectual student.

The real problem is that there are too many people on this campus who do not understand what it means to be an intellectual student. They are not interested in intellectual discourse, but are more interested in parties, sports, and other extracurricular activities. They are not interested in the "real world," but are more interested in their own lives.

In my opinion, the DP is right to complain about lack of intellectualism. However, the DP is wrong in its definition of intellectualism. Intellectualism is not about having a good time or about getting good grades. Intellectualism is about understanding the world around us and how it works.

Catherine Lajin is a College of

Arts and Science student in the Philosophy Department. This column does not necessarily reflect the views of the committee.

In all this, I see no evidence of an "anti-intellectual" institution.

At attendance at these lectures and discussions has been low, as few as 20 people have attended any of the events. However, the number of people who have attended these events has been limited by the fact that they have not been advertised properly. The university has not done a good job of publicizing these events.

For it is not as if poor women in-America have no choice but to bear children. We have seen that poor women have the right to choose, but that right is not protected by the law. The law is not designed to protect poor women, but to protect the wealthy.

The reason that the President and Congress have not done their job is because they are not interested in protecting the poor. They are interested in protecting the wealthy, and they have the power to do so. The President and Congress have the power to do what they want, and they have chosen to do what is good for the wealthy, not for the poor.

It was the conference to end all conferences. The year was 1989, and the question of whether illegal immigration to the United States was a threat to the country was on the mind of everyone attending the Hillel Foundation. Conflict and diversity among students and faculty in the nation's campuses was the main focus of the conference.

WASHINGTON — The speaker of the Polish parliament yesterday for escalating the fighting in Nicaragua and a presidential spokesman defended the right of the Contras to return to a base in Nicaragua.

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Senate Democratic leaders yesterday concluded that Republicans would agree to limit amendments to a bill repealing a Medicare catastrophic illness tax and a tax provision opposed by business.

The Democrats said evidence to form a basis that crimes were "partisan politics into this debate," which is an official way by the Congress. HUD officials said they had information the bomb at-
