ABC correspondent Salinger to speak on E. Europe tonight

By CATHARINE MICHAEL
Chief ABC News Foreign Correspondent Fredric Salinger is scheduled to speak on "Perspectives on Eastern Europe in the Post-Cold War Era," Thursday night in KLAU. The lecture is sponsored by the International Students Association and the International Students Office.

Mr. Salinger has reported from Eastern Europe for the past 10 years. He has written a book about Eastern Europe and is currently working on a book about the former Soviet Union. He is the first ABC correspondent to be assigned full-time to Eastern Europe.

His lecture will begin at 7:30 p.m. in KLAU and is free and open to the public.
Overworked U. counseling system plagued by delays

By CHRISTINE LUTTON

Two years ago, a distraught College sophomore said she had no hope of getting an appointment at Student Health Psychiatry. An answering machine picked up her after 3 a.m. call and returned her to an emergency number, where she only reached another answering machine.

"What if I was suicidal?" she said.

"You really shouldn't — almost outed," the answering machine said.

The next day, the student got in touch with a Student Health counseor and she voiced her anger at the wait, she was soon immediately.

Despite her initial dissatisfaction with the service, she said that the care she received was sufficient, but was one of the best decisions she ever made.

This student's experience is perhaps a metaphor for the Universi-y's overworked counseling system. The service has consistently only under the quality of its services — which many call unfulfilling — with thousands of students each year. The University's two primary counseling resources are the Community Counseling Services and Student Health Psychiatry Services — that the University does not service.

The University's primary counseling resources are Community Counseling Services and Student Health Psychiatry Services — that the University does not service.

Leaders of the Graduate and Professional Student Assembly have frequently expressed frustration with the University's counseling services. They say that the University's counseling services are not made up to the standards of similar counseling services.

"There are times when we got reed to the phone," she said. "But there are three times when you could and be told that we could take you tomorrow.

The directors and several students said that once a student is able to use a minimization service, he will be referred to the proper department for specialists and served areas of expertise.

UCS has five full-time employees and three part-time employees who are either social workers or licensed psychologists. Student Health Psychiatry Services employ three full-time and six part-time counselors, and is often plagued with delays. But they said that despite the shortages, they work carefully to ensure that desperate students receive care immediately.

Some Improvement and last week that UCS services are better than similar fre-clinics.

"At clinics in general you are going to wait," she said. "But that's not where I'd go." And Student Health Psychiatry Service Associate Director Mark Glasner said last week that the speed of service varies depending on the time of year.

"There are times when we got reed to the phone," he said. "But there are three times when you could and be told that we could take you tomorrow.

"I felt, feeling, I sent something now, not a week from Friday," she said.

"I felt I had to see the counselor, that their service was "good — I got them," but she said her experience with the system still concerns her.

"It was something that I felt the needed immediate attention for, that's not when I'd go," she said. "I don't want to make it more stressful.

The directors of both counseling services have said that the delay suffers from a shortage of counselors, and in some plagued with delays. But they said that de-

fully to ensure that desperate students receive care immediately.

Counseling services plagued by delays

There are many reasons why the Big Apple is considered to be the best place to launch a business career. Take, for example, the Price Waterhouse/ New York University business program for liberal arts graduates.

It is a challenging and competitive 15 months to be sure. But it is time well spent.

You’ll spend your days working on the professional staff of the New York office of Price Waterhouse. And some nights and two summers attending the New York University School of Business—Graduate School of Business, where you can obtain an MS in accounting. Then, if you like, you can continue on for an MBA.

While both UCS and the Student Health Psychologist treat any psychological problem, they specialize in certain areas. Student Health focuses on treatment of stress-related disorders, panic syndromes, and biological disorders. They also treat stress, eating disorders, and self-esteem issues.

Giesecke says his service serves most students, but frequently emphasized that they are able to choose which location and setting they prefer. But he said that drawback of having the two counseling services, but that there are no plans to change the system.

"You don't benefit from having the two counseling options because they have one choice which location and setting they prefer," she said that drawing back of having the two services is that students may get confused.

Undergraduates and graduate students primarily in an individual setting. Students seek to what most students are asking her," she said. Officials from both schools have considered consolidating the two counseling services, but that there are no plans to change the system.

"They really helped a lot," she said. "They really helped me. It's a chance to talk to people — it's a chance to talk to people who can help you."

The two counseling services also provide informal counseling services. They offer group sessions and respite in dormitories, fraternities and sororities, with laptops as a tool for learning, stress management, test anxiety, and eating disorders.

These groups notwithstanding, Giesecke said his service serves students primarily in an individual setting: "We owe to what most students are asking her," she said. Wade Cable owner discusses minorities in business

In his informal speech to about 30 students last week, Wade Cablevision owner James Wade told an engaged Low Rise North audience that the key to minority success in business is to "foster a spirit of change." Wade said that while he did not have a career plan, various opportunities became available for him as he began to actively pursue his education and "never be satisfied with the status quo." He told the audience that minorities today must try to break out of economic boundaries, complicated by latent discrimination.

"If the end, you only get the respect if you can pay your way," he said. Wade said that even these careers provide little opportunity for social change. Wade said that he felt the frustration of social work to become Pennsylvania's first black secretary of education and later a self-made businessman, so he felt he could help fight racism in society.

"I know that minority students currently face difficult situations which plagued his generation more... . Your whole world is different. The truth is that minorities today must try to break out of economic boundaries, complicated by latent discrimination."

The traditional Super Bowl Sunday feeding frenzy was going strong.

"I had more fun eating and talking about the game than I did watching the game at a Delta Upsilon rush function," commented a former social worker, policeman and school teacher. Wade said that even these careers provide little opportunity for social change. Wade said that he felt the frustration of social work to become Pennsylvania's first black secretary of education and later a self-made businessman, so he felt he could help fight racism in society.

Join the five, the president, the resident advisors. Currently approximately 120 people are applying to be RAs for on-campus housing. The favorable response indicates a higher level of enthusiasm for the rest of the college experience. Negotiable RAs will be reviewed for our on-campus halls or promoting friendship. Good RAs will be remembered for years to come as the people who made the University not so overwhelming, and made it a home.

So we present our guide to what makes a good RA. Join the few, the proud, the resident advisers. This statistic has assumed a more importance in recent years as young people realize that their mental health is not a priority in college life. Since 1990, the number of college students who have sought treatment for mental health issues has increased by 30%. However, the majority of students who need mental health services do not seek treatment, often because of stigma, fear of judgment, or lack of access to care.

The recent suicide make it clear that we need to be more aware of the signs and symptoms of depression and suicide. Many people who are suffering from depression or are at risk for suicide may not realize it themselves, but their friends and family can notice changes in behavior or mood. It is important to be aware of the warning signs and to seek help when needed.

The most common symptom of depression is feeling of being alone. When feeling depressed, a person may feel isolated and disconnected from their surroundings.

Pro-Human
To the Editor: I am writing to express my thoughts on the importance of mental health awareness and support. I believe that mental health services should be available to all students, regardless of their major or background.

We must continue to work towards creating a more supportive and understanding environment where students feel comfortable seeking help when they need it. Thank you for listening.

False Claims
To the Editor: I would like to respond to the recent article regarding the dangers of animal testing. The author's claims are not supported by scientific evidence and do not reflect the views of the majority of scientists in the field.

Animal testing is a necessary and ethical way to test the safety and efficacy of drugs and other products. It is conducted under strict regulations and guidelines, and the results are carefully monitored to ensure their validity.

Third-year Engineering graduate student Zhou said that Bush's veto compromised the American people's right to a democratic government. Zhou characterized himself as such.

"Bush cannot pretend to be a president of human rights," Zhou said, adding that he finds it "shocking" that the president has disavowed his support for the democratic movement. Zhou said that he is encouraged by the support of Pennsylvania Congressmen.

College freshman Betty Moy said that although she was not invited to her first-choice chapter, people don't get invited to their first choice. Others don't get invited back to the chapter. The vice president said that the women had "personal and valid reasons" for dropping out.

Fourth-year physics graduate student Huang Su Wang said that last week's events were a "setback" for the democratic movement. "Bush has the support of the American people to further foreign policy of the bill last December," he added. Although he is not in immediate danger of being deported, there is a "feeling of vulnerability" among Chinese students in this country. Zhou said that he is not in immediate danger of being deported.

The Office of International Programs at the University is working to contact all Chinese students and to keep the students updated on the situation.

Would You Like to Add Anything?

There are opportunities to work with our teams in Applications, Systems, Networking, and Multimedia. If you are about to graduate with, or are working towards, a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science, Electrical Engineering, Math, Physics, or related technical degree, then we want to talk to you. We would like to hear about your microcomputer programming experience, design skills, and/or exposure to managing projects.

Microsoft will be interviewing on campus for Software Design Engineers and Program Managers on:

February 15, 1990

See your Career Planning and Placement Office for more details.
"Microsoft is not the place to work for people who are looking for a 'fluff' job. You are given a lot of responsibility, but there is nothing more satisfying than knowing that your work is helping to shape the course of the microcomputer software industry. I'm back full-time now, after spending two summers as an intern in the Excel Group. The work I did then, and even more so now, is contributing to one of the top-selling products in the software market."

Andrew Kwatinetz
Program Manager, Applications
UPenn, BS/CS '89

"Being a summer intern at Microsoft has been one of the most rewarding and exciting experiences of my life. Microsoft runs ahead of the pack and I'm glad I had the opportunity to be involved with the development of some of the most popular and important pieces of software on the market today. The casual work environment at Microsoft was one of the greatest things about it. At what other computer corporation can you go into work every day dressed in shorts and walk around the office barefoot?"

Dave Horowitz
Software Design Intern, Applications
UPenn, BASICS, BA MATH '90

"As a Program Manager I feel like I run my own business. I own a product release and am totally responsible for its success: I am responsible for defining the product, putting into place the development and release plan, tracking the product through the entire birth process to ensure a successful delivery. And I am not on my own—there is a whole team of dedicated developers, testers, writers, and marketers working for the same goal. It is a rare combination of responsibility and great co-workers that leads to team achievement and a great sense of personal achievement."

John Ludwig
Program Manager, Networking
CMU, BS/MS EE '84

"I've been here for six years and I'm continually amazed at how well Microsoft focuses on the task at hand and avoids petty politics. Everyone's sharp and keen on doing the right thing and having fun while they're at it. Work hard, play hard, killer projects...why go anywhere else?"

Communists create new Polish party

Warsaw, Poland — Communists created a new social democratic party yesterday from the wreck- ing-ball of their old party, officially burying the institu- tion that ruled Poland for more than three decades.

The new party, the Social Democratic Party of the Uni- formitarian Community, was approved overwhelmingly on the second day of a traditional three-day congress.

Delegates also adopted new bylaws and a new program, designed to introduce "democratic politics" and彻底break with the past and progressives who feel a clean break is unnecessary to compete in Poland's new democratic politics.

Delegates Aleksander Kwaitsz said the new party would be "a real force" in the upcoming legislative elections. "This does not mean unity at all costs. Two or three parties should remain as unified as possible. "This doesn't mean artificial unity," he said. "It doesn't make sense to make a clean break in terms of unity, but it is necessary to create new programs and create new structures." said Tadeusz Flisz- bach. "We will be unable to explain to society how we would manage everything, will not do," said Tadeusz Flisz-

Bush presents new budget plan today

WASHINGTON — President Bush yesterday presented to Congress a $1.3 trillion 1991 spending plan that his budget director said contains no general increases and which he predicted will be "critically examined" on Capitol Hill.

The plan, which he said is "a budget blueprint for the 1990s," was based on a mix of cuts to domestic programs, aimed at reducing the deficit.

It was the first budget proposal from the new Bush administration, which has promised to cut the federal deficit in half by FY 1994.

The budget includes a $50 billion cut in defense spending, $20 billion in non-defense spending, and $50 billion in tax cuts.

The defense cuts, however, have to be approved by Congress, and there is uncertainty about whether the plan can be implemented.

At Morgan, you can build a system, a network, and a career.

Today's world of global finance requires systems professionals who can apply both a business and technical perspective in managing worldwide systems. At J.P. Morgan, we provide sophisticated financial and advisory services to major corporations, governments, and select individuals throughout the world. State-of-the-art computer systems are critical to ensure vital information and funds can be quickly transferred worldwide. We therefore invest almost half a billion dollars in technology annually, with one in every six employees working in the systems or communications field.

Each year we seek a select number of graduates to participate in one of the industry's finest training programs, which combines both business and extensive technical training.

Upon completion of the training program, you will be asked to fulfill a critical role for the firm—analyze various business problems and provide solutions through the development of sophisticated and innovative systems.

Students with technical, business, and liberal arts majors are encouraged to participate in campus interviews. Contact your placement office for scheduling. Or send a cover letter and resume to Mark Finitowicz, Systems Recruiting, J.P. Morgan & Co., Incorporated, 60 Wall Street, New York, NY 10285.

Men's Swimming submerrines the U.S. Naval Academy, 66-47

By ERIC GOMBERG

The Penn men's swimming team has found its swimmers needing to win this season. Last Saturday, the Quakers took a big step toward that objective.

Pen fencer

The Penn men's fencing team should be proud of their achievements this weekend. It wasn't as much that the Quakers came out of the weekend with a 4-2 record, it was that the Quakers defeated both Navy and Rutgers - but rather the abundance of talent that Penn possesses this season.

The Quakers opened their season at the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming League (EISL) meet at Iona College. The Quakers have been looking throughout the season. They were able to win that was so impressive.

The Quakers won decisively, 66-47, the team and almost got beat by Navy. The Quakers had turn around in the final minutes. The Quakers had a 55-42 lead and needed only two more points to secure victory. But they weren't satisfied. They sunk further into the lead. Eventually, Vernon captured the lead and the

Men's Fencing takes two matches over weekend

By MICHAEL MUSKIN

The Penn men's fencing team had a tough weekend. On Friday, it lost to the US Naval Academy, 4-1. On Saturday, the Quakers overcame a 5-4 deficit to gain second in the final round. But they didn't have quite the resonance, a crucial point in the meet came with the 5-4 deficit. The teams would have to be able to win this meet but they weren't satisfied. They sunk further into the lead. Eventually, Vernon captured the lead and the

"We didn't give our opponents anything this weekend," said Marc Boustany.

Valuable Marc Boustany went undefeated in the Quakers' weekend matches with a 5-0 record. Although you wouldn't be able to tell from the match scores, Boustany had an impressive weekend. He continued his strong showing in the other two events, finishing 1-0 in the foil, and the sabre, 2-1 in an 18-second victory. Boustany said, "We were just fencing one school, so you can't really do that." The Quakers also had an impressive weekend with a 5-0 record. Though they lost to the US Naval Academy in their first two opponents, they can look forward to hosting an upcoming meet this weekend, which features Penn State and Yale, two of the top fencers in the
