PiKA national suspends U. chapter indefinitely

By ANDREW LIBBY

A meeting of the Graduate Student Association (GSAC) yesterday approved proposals which could pave the way for graduate student collective action. GSAC Finance Committee Chairperson Charlotte Levine said that the group "will now have the tools to be an effective union." Levine said that the group would also be able to negotiate for higher wages and benefits for graduate students.

Although the group was finally able to ratify a proposal to form a union, GSAC President Elizabeth Hunt said yesterday that the decision is "not the end of the road." Hunt said that the group will continue to work with the administration to improve the conditions of graduate students.

Security tightened at Shops at Penn

By LAURA SANTINO

Last week, the Philadelphia Police Department announced that it would be initiating a new security program for the Shops at Penn, which is located near the University of Pennsylvania. The new program, which includes increased police patrols and surveillance cameras, is intended to deter crime in the area.

The Shops at Penn is one of the largest shopping centers in the Philadelphia area. It is located near the University of Pennsylvania and is home to a variety of stores and restaurants.

Women's Alliance bans 'hate speech'

By MARIA KAZEN

The Women's Alliance at the University of Pennsylvania has passed a resolution to ban hate speech on campus. The resolution was passed unanimously by the Alliance's members yesterday.

The resolution states that "hate speech" is defined as "any statement or behavior that is intended to cause harm, offend, intimidate, or discriminate against another person or group based on their race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity, or any other characteristic.

The Women's Alliance, which is a student organization at the University of Pennsylvania, has a long history of activism on issues related to gender and sexuality. The Alliance has previously passed resolutions condemning sexism, homophobia, and racism.

Grad student strike still a possibility, GSAC says

By MATTHEW KLEIN

The Graduate Student Association (GSAC) yesterday rejected a proposal that would have allowed graduate students to strike. GSAC President Elizabeth Hunt said yesterday that the group is "not ready to strike" and that the proposal was "not the end of the road." Hunt said that the group will continue to work with the administration to improve the conditions of graduate students.

College junior and Tau Epsilon Phi brother Jeff Berson spends his weekends on road trips. But instead of he and his friends piling into a car headed to the beach or a concert, Berson, president of Philadelphia Hunger Reduction Action Team, distributes sandwiches and clothing to Philadelphia's homeless and needy each Saturday and Sunday.

PHRAT members first gather Saturdays at Beta Theta Pi and Sundays at TEP to make the 400 sandwiches to be distributed. Members then pile into two cars and travel to Philadelphia's parks and subway stations.

Volunteers cite a variety of reasons for joining PHRAT. Some people choose PHRAT to satisfy their fraternity or sorority service requirement. Other, more regular attendees said they value the opportunity to see a side of the world they normally would not experience.

Participants admitted that they were uneasy at first about approaching the homeless. But as the two-hour journey neared its end, people said they felt rewarded, but often disturbed and saddened by what they had witnessed.

"It's a mixed emotional thing," Berson said. "People feel good about what they've done, but definitely have a deeper understanding of the problems that do exist."

The PHRAT members distribute supplies to people ranging from residents of small "box towns" to others who have homes, but need PHRAT's helping hand to survive.

Beta brother Jon Pletcher recounted one story of meeting a man who had worked as a stockbroker, but was forced to live on the streets after losing all his money. This man, who is originally from Canada, now must rely on food and clothing from PHRAT to aid in his survival until he gets back on his feet.

PHRAT started with a small group of people walking around and handing out sandwiches to the needy, but has become a program that benefits both the recipients of the supplies and the people distributing them.

The International Affairs Association (IAA) will sponsor a speech on African development by a former PETA director, Dr. Paul Zahl, at 9:30 in room 100 of the Van Pelt. All students are welcome to attend.

Alum Rosengarten dies at 84

BY MATTHEW SELMAN

While the Rosengarten Reading Room is probably his best-known contribution to the University, alumnus Alphonso Rosengarten stated more than a name on the Van Pelt library study area. The heir to a century-old pharmaceutical company, Rosengarten attended Princeton University as an undergraduate and became a part of the University’s Law School, where he received his masters degree in international law in 1943. Rosengarten joined the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry. He served a man breaking into a car parked on High St. North Drive in the early evening, police said.

According to College senior Randall Lane, who attended PAST with College senior Bret Parker, the meeting is designed to open up the group to anyone who is interested in “stopping from incidents like this.”

The speech will start at 7 p.m. in the High Rise North Rooftop Lounge.

Prof to speak at Law School tonight

Professor Howard Adelson of City College of New York will speak today at the Law School addressing “Terrorism: A legal perspective from 1989 to the present.”

The speech is part of the Undergraduate Law Club’s Lecture Series. The speech will start at 7 p.m. in room 104 of the Law School.

Youth of Today

It was just about a month ago when President Phil, the most exalted and most beloved leader of the student body, held his annual open meeting. We celebrated. Presidents had Greenberg's day as an excuse to do all sorts of things, including spending hours in the gym playing basketball, going out to drink a toast to dear old alumni of different ages, the forum held in DuBois Classroom, trying to figure out who's 'straight and alert.'

Spring is important because it is a neutral and refreshing start to the busy and stressful season. Spring is a time when everyone can simply enjoy each other's company and relax in the beautiful weather. Spring is a great time to meet new people, whether it's during spring break or simply enjoying the warmer weather.

So I will not apologize. I will not bow to those who do not respect and acknowledge my worth. I will not lie down and allow them to define who I am. I will continue to stand up for myself and those who are like me. I will not be silenced.

The University has a responsibility to educate students on the importance of diversity and inclusion, and to create a safe and welcoming environment for all students. The University should take action to address issues of discrimination and bias.

Better Than a Show

The 250th Student Committee captured this week what the real spirit of the University celebration should be.

In its Mission Statement, the Student Committee listed, "Generation to Generation: The African American Student Experience." So the student-run group linked the University's history to its present. Through presentations from black alumni of different ages, the forum held in DuBois College House gave current students of all races and ethnicities a chance to read the past and take suggestions from people with experience. Following the planners of the main 250th celebration, the Student Committee included a momentous year to get a sense of their present, even though many of the students in attendance were not exactly scientific.

Fleischer said that he plans to do something to maintain his membership, although he is not sure what specific action he wants to take. "When you face sexism every day, you face it in a group where you have to explain why something is sexist," Fleischer said. "Not only does he have to be at our meetings, but he has to explain to his colleagues why he decided to list him from attending.

But Fleischer said that using the charter to ban a group is primarily recognized as a support for the group, adding that while membership may be sympathetic to women's issues, they "rarely" understand them.

But while Stern said that the Annenberg School Theatre is a "vital space," she said that the increased short-term demand for space, rates and "run-ins" with Annenberg administration was going to make them think they are not supported.
Soviets approve stronger presidency

MOSCOW — A determined and at times angry Mikhail Gorbachev yesterday rammed through the Soviet legislature his proposal for a more powerful presidency that progressive lawmakers wanted could become a reality. Gorbachev, his voice rising as his speech ended, declared: "I am willing to be the victim of engaging in 'cheap demagoguery.'" The Soviet leader recognized lawmakers and vowed their right to oppose even at war during the often-derisory debate.

He faced the Supreme Soviet's flak and overwhelming approval of his proposal as a "great political matter." The bill, which was approved by a 4-to-1 vote with a five-year term, is to replace the governmental complex that he calls the "archaic, Germany" leader, whose formal title is Supreme Soviet chairman.

The bill was remained committed to consider dozens of amendments offered by deputies during debate.

"Like the slugs," Duncombe said. "You can really get into them.

Duncombe gets almost as emotional about "loving" his basketball season as he does about basketball on the court. He's just as chatty off the court as he is on it, as evidenced by his conversation with the interviewer, and he's just as easy to get along with.

Duncombe said he takes advantage of the extra time to work on his shooting game.

He's all about tailgating soccer, including the bonding happening over the food.

On a similar basis used in Duncombe's case, the team is constantly practicing to improve their game.

Duncombe was able to settle down before a game, "freshman year," Duncombe said, "was class one day, I was class first game. I don't think I was there for that one time around." But he's made his mark and is now able to "keep" out of the lineup and apply himself to his Adler's in the lineup.

NFL revamps schedule, extends it to 17 weeks, eliminates Super Bowl week

NEW ORLEANS — The NFL decided Friday to extend its 16-week season to 17 weeks and eliminate the Super Bowl week, a move that traditionally held between the conference championship games and the Super Bowl.

The change provides every team with an extra week of regular-season. In 1998 and 1999, the regular season will be played over 16 weeks, giving each team two weeks off.

"This new schedule format allows more opportunities to reschedule special events and games, especially in the case of the Super Bowl," NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "It will also offer a more flexible schedule for television networks, allowing them to better accommodate the network's new series and programs, and it will allow for more time to reschedule games in case of inclement weather conditions."

Three assistant football coaches take other jobs

By MICHAEL MIHREIN

After losing in their at the Ivy League title last weekend, the Penn men's football team is aiming to end its regular season on a winning note before they move on to the NCAA Championship.

"It's an important moment," Penn head coach Davey Robinson said. "Being on the road, we never had a chance to win there. We have something to play for in the next two games."

Robinson said the team has been focusing on the Roadshow, which includes a season-ending game against the Yale Bulldogs.

For the Lions, the next game is an opportunity to prove their worth and show the rest of the league that they can compete.

Fencing finishes with NYU

By ALEC SCHWARTZ

The cross country team has been completely restructured after last season's disappointing finish. The team's most notable newcomer is senior captain Hassan Duncombe.

Duncombe has brought a wealth of experience to the team, having previously competed at the national level. His presence has been instrumental in turning around the fortunes of the team.

"He's a key addition to our roster," head coach Listening said. "His experience and leadership will be crucial in helping us achieve our goals this season."
