Heaney quits UA after losing election

Says student gov’t ‘Old Guard’ resisted reform-minded candidates

BY ROXANNE PATEL

Former Undergraduate Assembly Vice-Chairperson Hunter Heaney, who was defeated Sunday in his bid for the UA chair, addressed the'venue to his supporters yesterday.

"I just have no desire to stay in the UA," Heaney said. "I think that doing nothing is a sense of failure. We have to try to make the best of this opportunity and try to create a balance in the university because we don't agree to do nothing.

Heaney announced his resignation at the meeting of the Nominations and Elections Committee yesterday. "This is the end of my UA career," he said.

"I don't even know what his contributions were," he added. "I don't know what his contributions were.

Heaney said that he proposed a reform-minded candidate who was defeated last week.

"I've promised to chain myself to the library starting May 1," he said. "I will take a year off and begin work on the proposal.

Heaney also said that he will not resign from the university.

Faculty members win prestigious awards

BY CHRISTINE LUTTON

Three members of the University's faculty recently received prestigious honors for their work in their fields.

Harvey, a music historian and composer, was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship, which is given to artists and scholars who have made significant contributions to their fields.

Brooks, a history professor, was honored for her contributions to the understanding of the American Revolution.

The 13th annual Outstanding Women in the Philadelphia Region Award was presented to four members of the University's faculty.

Officials say U. City would see little of planned police increase

BY KATHLEEN PARALUSZ

Officials said this week that the University City area would probably not benefit significantly from the increased police presence.

Mayor Wilson Goode would like to add to the University City police force over the next year.

"The bottom line is that I was able to come in and do what I thought was best for the community," he said.

Harriett, who previously served as chairperson of the Faculty Personnel Committee, was appointed to the Board of Trustees.

As the Reading Terminal Market faces public ownership, merchants and patrons are hopeful that its old-fashioned flavor will remain.

By JACQUELINE NEEDLEMAN

Center Authority agreed to purchase the Reading Terminal Market. By 1906, said that the lack of parking has been very heated," O'Neil said. "It is restored, turned over to the city's planned convention center.

Another test of the Market's stability will come during the period of relocation, which stipulates that during construction, when the merchants' associations will be tested by noise, dust and temporary inconvenience.

To voice their concerns, the Market's merchants formed an association, and, according to records, became members of the Reading Company. Merchants got in on the planning process early and were able to negotiate with the PCCA.

"I must keep the business going and can't just walk away, " Lipse said as he received a shoeshine at the wooden stand in the back of the Market. "There is something sentimental about the Market and I will never change the best of its kind of money.

"A new operator would need more revenue from the Market now gone," O'Neil wrote. "But simply passing costs could do as much harm as good, especially to low-margin vendors at the heart of the Market."

Several times a year, The Daily Pennsylvanian releases a special section highlighting the University’s history and traditions. Today, we focus on the Freshman Experience, exploring how it has evolved over the years.

In 1930, freshmen were required to memorize University fight songs and often wore pants for a “freshman camp” where the neophytes were segregated by gender, in the 1920s to 1950s. Freshman camps were a way for freshmen to be separated from the rest of the university community.

In 1952, these freshmen try to kiss the foot of the Weightman Hall Benjamin Franklin statue, following a good-luck tradition. But Penny Rubincam, president of the Class of 1945, remembers a University whose custom was to keep the tradition going. Thomas said that football games were part of the traditional freshman activities.

In 1960, a student was apprehended by the freshman class for violating the freshman regulations. The student was ordered to report again (for punishment) at Wednesday’s meeting,” the DP wrote. “The annual, ritualized melees with the sophomores, instilled a sense of solidarity among members of both classes. In earlier years, the formal “freshman” activities were part of the student group activities.

In 1980, the fresman experience was about preparing students for life at a university that was more now than ever to insure a smooth transition into college. Brent Mitchell is a College junior and former "Freshman Experience" editor. Today: The Freshman Experience

Sunday, College junior Daisy Harris edged out College junior Hunter Heaney for the Undergraduate Assembly's chair, and yesterday Heaney resigned from the body. Harris won on the strength of her coalition-building ability, but Heaney's resignation will make her battle to unite a much more difficult task.

Harris's departure is saddening because the two UA officers could have built a coalition that could have unified the body and accomplished much. Harris has proved her coalition-building abilities, but Heaney's resignation will make her battle to divide a much more difficult task.

Although the frazzled blue has lost its bid for domination, hopefully the new vice chairperson, Mike Finley, will help it become an effective component of the body. The UA must use behind-the-scenes political leverage to bring more influence to bear.

Harris's experience will be much more important to have student peers and becoming involved in student activism and Harris's advocates must pledge to work toward this goal if they lose. Harris has proved her coalition-building abilities, but Heaney's resignation will make her battle to unite a much more difficult task.

Student leaders who align with each other do not always have to be on the same side. They must have different political views, and just walk away when they lose.

“Do you read the Editorial Page?”

Yes! Heaney spoke eloquently about working with the entire campus when he was a candidate for the top UA position. He talked at length about how he would overcome great difficulties, try a

Prof calls Court weak on civil rights

By LEE JACKSON

Saying that "bigotry is alive and well in America," Georgetown University law professor Eleanor Norton criticized the Supreme Court for not upholding civil rights legislation in an engaging speech to about 50 people last night.

Norton became the first female chairperson of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission when she served in the Carter administration. She also said in her half-hour speech in the Annenberg School Theatre that despite some gains toward racial equality, discrimination still exists.

She said that the Supreme Court has placed technical obstacles in the way of interpreting civil rights legislation, attributing resulting setbacks to the large conservative sector in the Supreme Court.

The professor called Supreme Court rulings during the Reagan administration "the worst in memory in terms of equality." Norton added that although the Supreme Court is "not entirely lost to the laws of equality," it is "no longer a dependable guardian."

Noting what she called a "disproportional dependence on a single branch of government," the fight for equality should be redirected towards other governmental branches such as Congress for remedy, she said.

"The Court has left work for Congress to do to restore Title seven (the 1964 Civil Rights Act) to its original strength," Norton said. "Much work (is) to be done to complete the work of equality."

U.S. cancels trade mission to Bagdad

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department said yesterday it has canceled an aerospace trade mission to Iraq as U.S. senators prepare sanctions legislation against the Baghdad government.

The decision comes as tensions mount over a series of incidents in which Iraq has been accused of trying to add nuclear arms to its arsenal of chemical and biological weapons.

Also yesterday, Iraq expelled an American diplomat in retaliation for the expulsion of an Iraqi diplomat posted at the United Nations. The State Department said the Iraqi was expelled "in light of the events of the last couple of weeks." Nine U.S. aerospace companies have canceled an aerospace trade mission to Iraq next month to "help U.S. companies enhance their position overseas and gain market position in the last couple of weeks." Nine U.S. aerospace companies signed up to travel to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iraq next month to help U.S. companies enhance their market position overseas and gain market position in the last couple of weeks.

The action comes as tensions have mounted over a series of incidents in which Iraq has been accused of trying to add nuclear arms to its arsenal of chemical and biological weapons. The Christian Democrat leader unveiled the tentative composition of East Germany's first democratic government after negotiations with the nation's democratic opposition. The agreement on a Cabinet clears a major hurdle. De la Rua, a former labor minister-designate, proposed a Cabinet yesterday that includes the opposition Christian Democrats and has more than 100 local governments. The agreement on a Cabinet clears a major hurdle. De la Rua, a former labor minister-designate, proposed a Cabinet yesterday that includes the opposition Christian Democrats and has more than 100 local governments. The day of commemorations has canceled an aerospace trade mission to Iraq next month to "help U.S. companies enhance their position overseas and gain market position in the last couple of weeks." Nine U.S. aerospace companies have canceled an aerospace trade mission to Iraq next month to "help U.S. companies enhance their position overseas and gain market position in the last couple of weeks." Nine U.S. aerospace companies signed up to travel to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iraq next month to help U.S. companies enhance their market position overseas and gain market position in the last couple of weeks.

The action comes as tensions have mounted over a series of incidents in which Iraq has been accused of trying to add nuclear arms to its arsenal of chemical and biological weapons. The Christian Democrat leader unveiled the tentative composition of East Germany's first democratic government after negotiations with the nation's democratic opposition. Penn gives up no earned runs

BY ADAM BAZENS

While the Major League Baseball season is still a month away and the teams are still out of their gear, the Penn baseball team hosted the Yale Bulldogs this weekend. The Elis drove to the ivy league for a mid-season series, but instead of being a friendly game, it was instead a contest of the most of its league.

For the first two games in their contest against Yale, the Elis fell short. In their first game of the series, the elephants were able to pull off a spectacular 6-5 victory against Yale. Then, in their second contest, the bulldogs took over and won the game 10-3.

The Yale Bulldogs were able to gain an upper hand against the Elis as they fell behind in the second game. However, the Elis were able to come back in the final moments and force a tie in the bottom of the ninth inning. Despite this, the bulldogs were able to take down the Elis in the tenth inning with a 3-run lead. The final score of the game was 10-3.

The Elis will be looking to bounce back next weekend when they host Columbia University. The game is set for Saturday at 1 PM and Sunday at 1 PM.
