Dalai Lama calls for peace

BY LAURA SANTINI

A speech that explained the purpose of the companion, the Dalai Lama explained an Irvine Auditorium crowd Saturday, with a simple style and personal manner.

Speaking in front of gigantic red and gold tapestries, the 16th leader of Tibet, His Holiness the Dalai Lama told the sold-out audience that compassion for one’s fellow man is an inspiration to people all over the world who cherish freedom and dignity.

In his speech, the Dalai Lama said that human nature is gentle and that anger is a disturbance of mind that shatters decisions and actions. He urged listeners to develop a loving and peaceful heart.

After using his interpreter for the first notes of the song, the Dalai Lama began to speak in English, occasionally asking people to repeat the phrases.

U. plans to purchase 40th Street buildings

BY PETER SPIEGEL

All the world may be a stage, but the University of Pennsylvania trustees will soon stage a show to the expensive Harold Prince Theatre.

The University Trustees Executive Committee on Monday approved a plan to purchase the 40th Street retail plaza for $300,000 for renovations, Whittington said.

The University Trustees Executive Committee was asked to purchase the property right on our doorstep,” van de Velde said.

Although the administrative concerned is that the property will remain the same, she said that the area will be an important part of the University community.

She said that the property will remain the same, and that the University will use some of the property for administrative purposes.

“The University will use some of the property for administrative purposes,” van de Velde said.

But it is blind energy,” the Dalai Lama called for peace.

Kappa Sig ushers in BYOB-party era

The Employment Gap:

New college graduates will face a tougher job market in the '90s

By STEVEN OCHS

Donna Smith spent her undergraduate years at Wharton learning about advertising, consumer research and how to match products with consumer needs. Now, after four years at graduation, Smith checks her calendar and sees no interview opportunities. "I'm in a bit of a bind."

Donna Smith's case is extreme — most college graduates face job markets that require a higher degree of education. The picture could become even bleaker if the economy slumps.

"There are a lot of ifs that are looming very large, " said Victor Lindquist, dean of placement at Northwestern University. "What impact will the crisis have on the economy? If the budget isn't brought into line, if the perception of a recessionary economy is not unfounded, then the Pew's Drop would materialize, and the picture could be bleak.

There are a lot of ifs that are looming very large."

Panel focuses on molecular biology

By MARGARET MCMORRIS
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

In the midst of the University's series of 25th anniversary events, a six-member panel presented a stimulating scientific symposium covering the future of molecular biology. The symposium offered an overview of the momentous research that is going on in these fields—panel members had the opportunity to share their insights into self-improvement, altruism, compassion and cultures.

Speakers emphasized that by integrating different areas of research, they are making breakthroughs in scientific knowledge that at one point was never thought possible. At the symposium—which also entailed much discussion and question-and-answer sessions—the panelists shared their visions of the future of molecular biology.

Notable among the panelists was Nobel laureate Baruch Blumberg, who lectured on the future of molecular biology Saturday. Blumberg, a University professor, has made significant contributions to the field of molecular biology, particularly in the areas of viral hepatitis and liver cancer. His research has led to the development of a vaccine for hepatitis B, which has saved countless lives.

In his lecture, Blumberg discussed the potential of molecular biology to address several major health challenges. He highlighted the importance of understanding the genetic basis of diseases and the role of molecular tools in diagnosing and treating these conditions.

Another panelist, Gilbert Omenn, dean of the School of Medicine's 225th anniversary, emphasized the critical role that molecular biology plays in advancing medical research and innovation. Omenn shared insights into the current state of molecular biology and its implications for the future.

Other panelists included a distinguished group of researchers from various disciplines, each contributing their unique perspectives on the future of molecular biology. The symposium provided a comprehensive overview of the field, offering insights into the exciting research being conducted and the potential impact of molecular biology on society.

The symposium concluded with a panel discussion, where audience members had the opportunity to ask questions and engage in a lively exchange of ideas. The panelists encouraged students and researchers to continue exploring the frontiers of molecular biology, emphasizing the need for collaboration and interdisciplinary approaches.

Overall, the symposium provided a valuable glimpse of the vibrant landscape of molecular biology and its potential for shaping the future of medicine and other fields. Panelists underscored the importance of continued investment in research and education to ensure that the benefits of molecular biology are realized for the betterment of humanity.

Pouring Proper Toasting Etiquette

Leaving it in the year's first full game to remain on just how much fresher will need to learn.

The Class of 1994's most visible gaffe at graduation occurred when the organist played "Here's a Pardon for Old Chestnuts," a patriotic tune. Clearly, had the organist been the "Lemons." "Creston kids could have tried it.

Also, dear neophytes, toast-throwing is not a statement to make that thelications of the Greeks. It's all too easy to see why they're waiting around the song. And while we're revisiting this little tradition, no, somebody ought to tell the freemason "Hagg and Davis" line isn't "Giddyp:" Welcome Back

When PSA reopened the Underground Cafe last year, students had many misgivings about the change in its name and appearance. It's now the Coffee Shop, and students were given the opportunity to express their feelings about the changes. It seems (in part vs all) on coffee, it's accessible, and it's fun. The Underground was well received, and after the million dollars — in fact, they'll be happy if they can make the coffee shop profitable. There are a whole lot of changes that are going on right now, but they seem to be working with us.

At the end of the day, if all goes well, most people welcome the idea of living in a small town, and the Undergrads will be upset if they ever see our old friends and their coffee shop. We can all have fun while we're there, and enjoy ourselves.

The Underground offers what students want: a change in scenery, a change in student life, and an opportunity to explore new ideas. I'm not the only person who questions myself about reality, and it's not just because I'm a liberal, but because I'm a person who likes to question things. I raise the question has been that the underground is a place to learn, it is not just a place to socialize.

Keeping Change of Heart

I came to Wharton in 1981 to learn management, and I graduated in 1985. Now I'm working as the president of a large company. I was told in a management class that the only way to succeed in business was to be a hardworking individual who could make tough decisions. I learned that the only way to succeed in business was to be tough and aggressive.

But college life changed me. I went from a background in management to one of my favorite things, and that really stuck with me. I wanted to have a good time, and I found it to be the best way to live my life. I couldn't think of anything else, and I found myself exploring new ideas, new experiences, and new possibilities.

Now, as I sit here and think about all the things I've done, I realize that I haven't been as successful as I thought. I have been able to achieve some success, but I haven't been as happy as I thought I would be. I have been able to achieve some success, but I haven't been as happy as I thought I would be. I have been able to achieve some success, but I haven't been as happy as I thought I would be.

I think I'm more successful now than I was then, but I'm not as happy. I'm not as happy as I thought I would be. I'm not as happy as I thought I would be.

To the Editor:

Guy Harby was certainly one of the most entertaining and knowledgeable speakers to grace the campus last year. His presentation on the topic of "Labor Economics" was a joy to listen to. "Yes, I was the only pro-life speaker at the Convention," he said after his speech.

The crime situation in Philadelphia was discussed by Amer J. S. Lincoln, who spoke on the topic of "Ethnic Violence, Mob Rule and Social Disenchantment." He stated that "the City's political vision is not different from that of any other city in the country, from New Orleans and Cleveland to New York and Boston."

Iraq threatens oil, Israeli fields; U.N. set to open

Iraq protest threatened to delay Middle East talks and add to war risk if other nations tried to extract it from Kuwait. The U.S. planned to ask the Security Council to impose economic sanctions, White House sources said. The U.S.-Iraq border talks were being considered. Iraq also said it would not attend the U.N. General Assembly session that opens today because its delegation was not being allowed to travel to New York on Iraqi Airways. The airline has no landing rights behind the Berlin Wall.

A State Department official said the matter was still under consideration. But if anything, Iraq was hardly in a hurry to get there. "If they want to come, they will come; if they don't, they don't," said a second government source.

Iraq was in a strong position, the official said. "They're strong, they're on the offensive, they're asking for what they want. They're not in a hurry to do anything." The U.S. is also considering an economic sanctions package, but sources said it was still weeks away.

U.S. officials said the sanctions would be aimed at "getting at the heart of Iraq's economy, its energy sector and its commercial sector." The sanctions would be "a strong signal to the rest of the world, including the Europeans," the officials said, "that we are going to take measures to try to deter them from going on this path." The sanctions would include a freeze on Iraq's assets in the United States and restrictions on trade with Iraq.

New book by Rushdie acclaimed

LONDON -- Salman Rushdie's new book, "The Satanic Verses," has been hailed as a masterpiece by critics and readers alike. The novel, which has caused controversy in some Muslim countries, has been praised for its powerful exploration of the conflict between the Western and Islamic worlds.

In a review in the Daily Telegraph, the book was described as "a work of art of the highest order," and "a triumph of the imagination." The New York Times called it "a masterpiece of modern literature," and the Guardian stated that it "is a book that will be read and re-read for generations to come."

In an interview with the BBC, Rushdie said that he had written the novel "to entertain, to entertain, to entertain," and to "make people think." He said that he had been inspired by "the great writers" of the past, and that he had tried to "create a new kind of novel." The novel tells the story of two characters, one of whom is a British Muslim, and the other a Bengali. The novel explores themes such as love, war, and freedom, and has been widely praised for its "brilliant writing" and "profound insights into the human condition."
Quakers' quarterback Fitz McKinnon struggles to get a few extra yards against Holy Cross.

Holy Cross makes good on Penn's sins

At first, the numbers looked good for the Crusaders. With tailback Joe Fuller (21 carries, 90 yards) and receiver Tom Lewis (4 receptions for 59 yards, 1 touchdown) making a showing behind the offensive line, the sophomore signal-caller was thoroughly exciting. McKeen was a big key for the Crusaders to pass successfully throughout the day. On the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th down, we were able to move the ball behind the explosive line, the sophomore signal-caller 2nd down, and the offense support it needed. Lewis (4 receptions for 59 yards, 1 rushing touchdown) was a consistent threat. Penn was soon forced to the defence they had been looking for.

McKinnon throws Holy Cross a curve

McKinnon (15-27, 130 yards, 2 touchdowns) displayed some quickness, he can run the option, and he can have some success against the Crusaders' defenders. Unfortunately for the Crusaders, their secondary was able to keep Penn's running game in check. The Penn running game had a few bright spots, but the running game was unable to consistently move the ball against the Crusaders. The Crusaders' defense was able to keep Penn's running game in check, but the running game was unable to consistently move the ball against the Crusaders. The Crusaders' defense was able to keep Penn's running game in check, but the running game was unable to consistently move the ball against the Crusaders.

Eagles soar over Rams, 27-21
Giants, Bears, Raiders, 49ers, and Bengals still undefeated

ANAHEIM Col.—Randall Concept threw for two touchdowns and Anthony Toney ran for 103 yards as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Los Angeles Rams 31-21 in a rushing of last year's NFC champions.

The Eagles (6-0) have won a week in a row, and Toney, who led the first Eage-ns units to a run of 7 yards on the grass after an 11-play drive, led the Eagles' first 103-yard touchdown.

The Rams fell to 1-5, and the Eagles close the gap on Cleveland by tying their 4-1 record and tying the game on New Year's Eve at Philadelphia.

Cunningham's 14-yard pass to Calvin Williams 14 seconds before the half put the Eagles ahead for good, 17-10.

The Eagles gained an 18-yard field goal from Harrah in the third quarter and a 18-yard punt return by Robert Drummond early in the fourth. Philadelphia outgained Los Angeles 103-3 on the third quarter.

Cunningham started their first drive of the second half on the Rams 46 after 12 attempts missed Keith England's punt. But on third and goal from the 10, Cunningham overthrew Mike Quick on a throw to Quick and the Rams recovered the ball on the Eagles' 4.

The Rams got the first of the Eagles, 14 after Michael Strickland forced Toney to tumble and recov- ered it. But they drove down to just 15 yards on a 26-play, 165-yard drive, on a run and a pass, 26 points. Cunningham at the Eagles' 35, and Mike Lamonica gained a 4-yard yard down to the 40.

But the Eagles went 46 yards in 12:26 to gain a 26-7 lead. Fletcher's first score was set up when Raghib Jegle got a 43-yard pass from Rommel and a 28-yard pass from Cunningham, and Cunningham threw one for 15 yards to Quick and the Eagles gained their first 12 yards of the drive, on a run and a pass.

Anthony Newman intercepted Cunningham at the Eagles' 56, and the Rams faced only five plays to gain their biggest scoring chance of the afternoon. The Eagles gained only five yards on their next possession, and Cunningham scored the last 52 yards of the drive, on a run and a pass. Cunningham at the Eagles' 35, and Mike Lamonica gained a 4-yard yard down to the 40.

McKinnon gives Penn options

It was late in the game when the Penn football team knew that they had just lost to Holy Cross, and that they had just lost a little bit of their season. The team had been struggling, and the loss was a blow to their confidence. But McKinnon, a red-shirt sophomore who had never taken a varsity snap, seemed to be making a choice to replace senior starter Doug Hatcher in this game with little time remaining. He had yet to win a game at Penn, but that didn’t stop him from stepping up and making a difference.

The game had been a back-and-forth struggle, with the Crusaders taking the lead in the second half. But McKinnon wasn’t done yet. He had the ball on the one-yard line, and with just over two minutes left on the clock, he took the plunge and scored a touchdown. It was his first career touchdown, and it gave the Quakers the lead back.

The defense, led by senior linebacker Joe Segreti, was able to hold Holy Cross off in the final minutes of the game, and the Quakers were able to secure a 17-14 victory. It was a momentous win for the team, and McKinnon was a key player in the Comeback victory.

The rest of the game was filled with highlights, including a 50-yard field goal by senior kicker Jack Scovill and a touchdown catch by junior wide receiver John Novak. But it was McKinnon’s touchdown that set the tone for the win, and it showed the team that they could compete with the best of them.

The Quakers now stand at 2-2 on the season, and they will continue to battle for a spot in the Ivy League Championship. McKinnon’s performance was a step in the right direction, and it gives the team hope for the rest of the season.

It was a cold, wet day on the field of Bill Meier Stadium, but the lights were on and the energy was high as the Penn men’s soccer team took on Cornell University. The Quakers were coming off of a tough loss to Princeton, and they knew that a victory over Cornell was crucial.

The game started with both teams playing to control the ball, but Penn was able to break through in the 40th minute. Junior forward Michael Meulens scored on a penalty kick, giving the Quakers a 1-0 lead.

The rest of the game was filled with opportunities for both teams, but Penn was able to hold on to the lead and secure a 1-0 victory. It was a critical win for the team, as it not only got them back on track, but also helped them continue their push for the Ivy League Championship.

The ball was out of bounds more than it was in bounds.

Turnovers played a major part in the loss, as the Quakers fumbled the ball away four times and were intercepted once. Princeton also had a fumble and was intercepted twice.

Penn’s three turnovers came off a punt which was returned for a second-and-goal from the ball yard line leading to the score in the second half. “We fumbled four times inside the thirty... We should have scored twenty-eight points,” wide receiver Mike Rosenfeld said.

Penn’s two missed field goals were due to the Penn blocking unit. In the game, Princeton scored on the flyball with just one second left in the fourth quarter.

I saw the ball the whole way,” Head Coach Karl Meier said. “I may have hiked him early, but it shouldn’t have been a fumble.”

Overall, Penn’s offense played well. Princeton’s guard, Mike Moran, had ten rushes for 40 yards, and Matt Giraudo combined for 154 yards on the carry. Princeton’s coach Bill Meier said, “It was an easy decision on the field. The Quakers could not capitalize as Penn senior quarterback Doug Hatcher caught the ball and fumbled out on the 15. Two players later, the Rutgers quarterback could not score as a quality shot of the ball was intercepted by the Penn defense.”

The Quakers finally escaped from the shackles of Cornell’s sloppy play, with Penn’s penalty far too little for the players who had been penalized in the second half.
