CHEATING CASES NEARLY DOUBLE OVER PAST YEAR

BY PETER SPIEGEL

The number of cheating cases handled by the Judicial Inquiry Office in the 1987-88 academic year is nearly twice that of the previous year, according to a report to the University community yesterday.

The report states that the only expulsion last year was under the Code of Academic Integrity. The student was found guilty of taking an exam in the Dental School.

The report also states that the number of violations, 59% of which were harassment or plagiarism, increased for the second year in a row.

The report also states that the number of cases handled by the Judicial Inquiry Office increased from 51 in 1986-87 to 102 in 1987-88.

Grad student demand gets support

By ROXANNE PATEL
Daily Pennsylvania Stall Writer

Several diversity on the Walk committee members yesterday cited support for GAPSA and the demand for more graduate student representation.

At this month’s University Council meeting, the Graduate and Professional Student Assembly called on President Sheldon Hackney to appoint two more graduate student representatives to the committee.

Currently, GAPSA Chairperson Susan Garfinkel is the committee’s only graduate representative.

“It seems obvious that if graduate students are not represented, given the make-up of the committee, it is not representative of students at the University,” Garfinkel said.

Garfinkel said GAPSA members were outspoken in their support of Garfinkel at their next meeting on November 9.

“We absolutely do need more graduate student representatives,” Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance Co-chairperson Robin Wood said last night.

Statistics show crime upsurge

University Security Act, passed by the department.

According to a report released by the University Security Act, there were a total of 503 crimes in 1989, including 158 thefts, 166 assaults, 13 cases of criminal mischief, and 105 larcenies. The report also states that there were 206 burglaries, 36 car thefts, and no murders, rapes, or arsons were reported to the University Police.

The report indicates that the statistics were reported only to the Philadelphia Police and does not include incidents reported only to the Philadelphia Police.

Weekend witnesses handful of crimes

By PATRICK O'DONNELL

Weekend witnessed handful of crimes expresses the assertiveness and determination required to manage and control the city's environment during the weekend. The effective management of the city's environment requires a strong and focused approach to address the issues that arise during the weekend.

The city day morning, police responded to a string of vandalism and burglaries, in addition to a stabbing and a beer theft. The incident occurred during the city's annual Homecoming festivities. The weekend was not peaceful, with a surge in crimes such as burglaries and trespassing cases.

In a separate incident, police arrested a man who was charged with trespassing. The victim was allegedly seen attempting to enter the victim's home.

1990 U. grad attacked, stabbed in back over weekend

A student was attacked and stabbed in the back over the weekend. The student was stabbed during a late-night walk to class. The incident occurred near the intersection of 34th and Locust Streets, which is a common area for campus students.

The student was rushed to the hospital and is currently in critical condition. The suspect has not been identified, and the investigation is ongoing.

The university has heightened security measures in response to the incident. Students are encouraged to take precautions and report any suspicious activities to the university's security department.

The incident highlights the importance of being aware of one's surroundings and taking necessary precautions while on campus.

To the Editor:

Since Susan Stone's column about how socially, I could not but notice the words of negative response to her position (DP 10/16/90). The article was well thought out and comparatively reasonable. What I would like to say is in regard to the difference between the six and the shiver.

Although there was an "op-" in the Didymus' opinion, personally, we must realize that whenever someone attempts to be a possible voice in such a sensitive issue, they will hear and receive negative and cold words of gift in being and active, shar- pness and any double-edged sword. It penetrates even to dividing rod and staff, and spear: and it judgeth the thoughts and attitudes of the heart.

Dear Editor,

While walking through the hallways, I noticed a sign publicizing a rush event for Sigma Phi Epsilon. The sign depicted a classic lounge on a chair, a ivy wreath, and a "W" in the middle. Several other clubs may also be living on the same building doing nothing.

To the Editor:

I am pleased by Susan Tippan's defending my position (DP 10/16/90). We have, indeed, been trying to get people to understand the issue of the right to control one's own body.

Cheating cases nearly double last year.

The JIO handled a total of 118 cases in 1989-90, with 116 involving graduate students. The JIO adjudicated 114 cases in 1988-89 and 116 cases in 1987-88. The most non-cheating cases handled by the JIO fell in the miscellaneous security violations category. Goodman said these are usually minor incidents that occur at residences.

The second-highest number of violations, 14, came under the "misconduct during exams" category. Other offenses included presentation of grade point average, submission of false data, falsification, presentation of work used previously, submission of work done by another's work." Goodman said that 10 of these came from the same class. Last year, and Goodman said all eight were involved in the Psi Upsilon fraternity.

The report, released in today's Daily Pennsylvanian, shows that eight students received sanctions of community service, including the January kidnapping of Delta Psi brother William O'Flanagan. According to the report, at least one of the eight received a suspended sentence of expulsion, which is the University's harsher punishment under which a student can still remain in school. Goodman said that anyone who receives a suspended sentence of expulsion is expelled automatically if they ever violate the University's Code of Conduct again.

Goodman would not say how many students charged with kidnapping last year, and Goodman said all eight were involved in the Psi Upsilon fraternity.

The study also shows that none of those charged with kidnapping received additional community service or punishment. It is not clear whether the students received additional service or punishment. According to the report, at least one of the eight received community service, and another received a suspended sentence of expulsion. The 19-year-old Psi Upsilon fraternity was kicked off campus last May after the University found evidence the fraternity student had been dropped or punished.

The University Judicial Charter requires the JIO to present an annual report on all Code of Conduct and Academy Integrity Code violations handled.

No members of Castle were expelled.

The University's Code of Conduct states that "cheating is a violation of the University's policy on scholarship, or any action or omission that is intended to manipulate the outcome of any examination, test or grading scheme." The report also stated that almost 52 percent of all cases the JIO handled last year involved multiple sanctions.

The report also stated that almost 51 percent of all cases the JIO handled last year involved more than one offense. Goodman said that 10 of these came from the same class. Last year, and Goodman said all eight were involved in the Psi Upsilon fraternity.

Rendell enters mayoral race

PHILADELPHIA — Procurator General Rendell yesterday announced that he will run for mayor and against City Council next year, saying the city needs "fundamental change."
Rendell said he would present himself as a candidate for City Council to run in the primary election for mayor.
Rendell said he would press for the endowment for the Arts to drop its pledge covering last year's grants, and against City Council races.
Rendell said he believed his campaign fund is already around $300,000, and he said he expected to announce for mayor in June.

Operator services get new regulations

WASHINGTON — Those common carriers that offer operator services, such as when you charge long-distance calls made at airports, hotels and other public places are going to have to pay the toll for long-distance calls. The Federal Communications Commission, which yesterday announced new regulations for the providers of common carrier services, also removed the requirement that they provide service at least seven days a week or at three times a week. As of November 1, the operator services will be required to be offered to all customers.

Soccer frustrated once again by yet another close loss

On the heels of their fifth straight loss to the Bulldogs, the Quakers were held to a 1-1 tie with the University of Pennsylvania. After a 1-6 first half, the Quakers looked to have a solid hold on the game, leading Yale 1-0. But in the closing minutes of the game, Yale made a last-ditch effort, and the ball snuck into the goal and the score was tied once again.

This Lions v. Wildcats game was as tense as it gets and something happened in the final 34 seconds that will go down in Lions history.

We almost lost this game.

Everyone knows that.

But let's not lie. Let's all own this.

Roy. Lions' coach Ray Trudell (above) led his team to victory by 1-1 in the final 34 seconds.

"It's a hell of a thing," he said yesterday. "We played as well as we could today. We played as hard as we could today."

Penalties help Bulldogs negate Fugitives, 18-17

By DAN FELDMAN

Daily Pennsylvanian Sports Writer

Nothing has been going right for the Penn

The Quakers (5-8 overall, 5-2 Ivy League) again showed their weakness as a defensive unit in Friday night's 18-17 loss to Yale.

The Bulldogs (7-3 overall, 4-1 Ivy) took advantage of three Penn defensive lapses, and scored three goals in the second half to secure the victory.

Neither williams nor says anyone is giving up on the team out of alignment. Even Congress

"But what was amazing to me was how the game was played. We were the ones that were playing Yale's game. We were the ones that were playing Yale's rules. We were the ones that were playing Yale's rules."

All three of those goals were achieved in the first half, as the Quakers took the lead in the second half.
