Environmental politics to be discussed

Next Weirich, who is running for Philadelphia City Council on an environmental protection platform, will speak tonight on "The Environment and Politics: How Anyone Can Make a Difference" tonight at Franklin Hall.

Weirich, who is running for an at-large position on City Council, said last night he had a movement recognizing that "Hepatitis B Vaccine is Not Free" to be held at the same time on campus.

Weirich emphasized that because he is in one of the minority races on the board, he will not need to be an activist to campaign for minority rights. Weirich emphasized that because he is in one of the minority races on the board, he will not need to be an activist to campaign for minority rights.

Was It Racism?

To the Editor:

In Helen Jun’s column regarding the Student-Athlete Advisory Committee at the Nov. 6 meeting (The Daily Pennsylvanian), the assumption is made that because a white student’s father is an important athlete on the team, the student is not treated equally to black students who are not related to noteworthy figures. However, there is no proof that this assumption is correct. In the case of the ACC’s intolerance of black students, there are many other factors which contribute. The ACC’s tolerance toward white students cannot be attributed to racism. It is not racism that has prevented black students from being treated with the respect due them by the ACC.

Oil tanker sinks off Italian coast

GRANATA, Italy — The registered tanker Haven sank yesterday, spilling millions of gallons of crude oil to the bottom and magnifying fears of an environmental disaster along the Italian Riviera.

Port officials said the ship sank in 500 feet of water off the town of San Pietro del Giudice, some 15 miles from shore, and French officials reported scattered oil slicks in a 15-mile-wide area.

The Haven, a 990-foot-long tanker, sank intact — giving officials hope that the oil slick could be salvaged with minimal spillage. Port officials said later yesterday expressed worry that the vessel had broken up and sunk, but an official from the ship's owner denied that report.

The water was clear on the bow of the ship yesterday and its propellers out of the water as it was towed by ferry.

The spectacular view drew thousands of people to the shores of the Italian Riviera for days as the ship, which carried 41 million gallons of oil, sank with its precious cargo.

In Rome, the government on Saturday declared a state of emergency, making the region eligible for special aid.

Panic sets in as the tax deadline comes

WASHINGTON — The deadline for the IRS to run out the tax year with the taxpayer's money — July 15 — is a taxing time for all Americans, especially for the millions who have waited until the last minute to file their 1990 federal income tax returns.

It's a taxing time for all Americans, especially for the millions who have waited until the last minute to file their 1990 federal income tax returns — and for Postal Service and IRS employees who have to deal with the rush of calls and the theater of lines.

The Internal Revenue Service expects to receive 72 million returns at its 10 generating centers this week, nearly twice as many fewer than last year.

Just this year, that many people must file by midnight June 15, before the 12th hour will take hours to return. The IRS said many of its offices and its toll-free telephone number — 800-829-1040 — would remain open into the evening to answer taxpayer questions. But don't expect instant service; repeated tries often will get through to an IRS operator.

Many post offices, especially in metropolitan areas, will stand slightly outside to allow motorists to drop off returns without having to enter the building.

In some areas, Tax Night has become a social event.

Outside the post office in Norfolk, Va., according to the Postal Service, WAKX radio will have Alex Lanza, a chief justice and Uncle Sam gen-

U.S. to pull forces from southern Iraq

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The United States yesterday began pulling back its troops in southern Iraq in a newly established demilitarized zone.

The move is the most dramatic indication that allied forces would withdraw from the southern part of Iraq.

The U.S. command said in a statement that it had begun pulling back its troops in southern Iraq to comply with the cease-fire treaty formally approved Monday night.

But the American commander said the pullback would be slow and gradual.

Meanwhile, the United States yesterday began pulling back its troops in southern Iraq to comply with the cease-fire treaty formally approved Monday night.

But the American commander said the pullback would be slow and gradual.

The command also reported that nearly 30,000 Iraqi refugees remained in the demilitarized zone, to include the refugees at Safwan.

It also involved any other refugees in the area formerly occupied by the Americans to move into the demilitarized zone for protection if they so desired.

The command also reported that the U.S. troop strength in the Persian Gulf had dropped yesterday to 250,000 from a peak of 540,000 during the height of the Gulf War.

The pullout was the first step in a proposed six-month deadline for the United States to pull its forces completely out of southern Iraq.
Houston Hall art exhibit deals with human rights

By NATHANIEL LINDZEN
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

As part of Human Rights Week, the Penn Student Gallery last Friday opened the Spirit of Humankind, an exhibit focused on creating communities and reflecting on building a playground and getting together to help children.

The Common theme is human rights, and many of the student community is involved in activities that will bring children to the area. Daniel and Todd Waller, the directors of the event, said the community before the event, "This is just what we got involved in to make sure that the event went well, some students were slightly disappointed with the turn-out."

Samuel Gross, a College representative, had the concern at the Annenberg School, "I wish we had more control over the situation, we were not the only ones involved in the event, it's a lot of fun." Barry Kirzner, a 1985 Wharton Management, said, "I think it's a good way of provoking thought or discussion, a way of getting people involved." "The event raised money for both the Penn community as among neighboring groups helping students resolve problems of rape and substance abuse as unique to the university community." Soslow said.

their long sticks were pretty weak, so we just tried to go on there.

"The key to the game was our ability to close the ball. Commissioner Tim Reinstein said, "We give the players credit for controlling the ball."

More than once the Big Green was caught trying to knock it away, but those penalties came particularly when Quakers' goalie Steven Brown, who had 15 saves, made a few key saves on controlled goals, two of which were called.

In fact, Dartmouth had only eight of 16 shots on goal. And while it was only Dartmouth on the field, the Quakers' defense was quite impressive. Brown made 15 saves, all of them on shots on goal.

"We knew we had to control the ball," said Brown. "We knew we had to keep them from controlling the ball and we did a good job of that.

"I think we played well, but it was a tough game and we had to work hard for it." Brown said. "We had some chances and we were able to convert them into goals.

"I'm pleased with the way the team played today. We worked hard and we were very successful." Brown said.

Students of the University of Pennsylvania:

Issues regarding the Drug and Alcohol Policy at the University of Pennsylvania, while always important, are of particular concern as we approach Alcohol/Drug Awareness Week and Spring Fling.

While the University expects that each student will understand and abide by its policies, we want to emphasize that the health and safety of each member of our community is our primary concern.

If you or a friend feel that you are in need of medical attention, do not hesitate to seek help regardless of the behavior that caused that need. University health and safety services available to students are listed below.

The General Policy Statements and Guidelines on Alcohol Use at Penn clearly state that:

Another weekend split diminishes EIBL hopes

By MATT KELLY

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Penn baseball team went into this weekend's doubleheader at Princeton andCornell with visions of energizing itself after a slow East East Intercollegiate Baseball League (EIBL) start.

Unfortunately, the Quakers (6-4, 11-15 overall) now find themselves 2-2 this season in the EIBL after losing two straight to the Tigers. Penn continues its deteriorating trend of bad weekends in splitting two doubleheaders. The Quakers were outscored 18-9 and were defeated in both games by a run each, over; facing Princeton in the season's second game.

The split twinbill dropped the Quakers to another all-time EIBL record. Charting the Quakers' losses this season, the EIBL title that has been synonymous with the Quaker program.

The Quakers lost a golden opportunity to shuffle the league standings on Saturday when they blanked Princeton 3-0 (9 inn), but the Tigers' two runs in the 10th inning tied the game at three. On Sunday, Princeton defeated the Quakers 2-1 (9 inn), as the Bears won both games as a result of a walk out, 6-2, before losing to Dartmouth 1-0 in their second game.
