Investigation brings cutbacks to Harvard

By ROBANNE PATEL
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

A federal agency last week announced plans to reduce the amount of research services it provides to Harvard.

School officials received the government news by e-mail Tuesday morning, following a memo from the university president earlier this month. The memo directed all units to cut back on costs and increase efficiency.

The Defense Contract Audit Agency will no longer conduct audits of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard, said school officials.

The agency, which audits all federal contracts, told the school it had received a contract from the National Science Foundation for its approval of financial data.

Harvard Medical School and MIT are among the 10 largest universities in the country, with several contracts totaling over $1 billion per year.

The allegations come less than a year after a widely publicized scandal at Stanford University.

The university's research spending and misappropriation uncovered at the University of Pennsylvania suggests that these problems are widespread.

Blackwell emphasizes experience, labor relations

By CHRISTINE LYTTON

Lucien Blackwell, a former labor lawyer and City Council veteran, Democratic mayoral candidate Lucien Blackwell says he is the most qualified person to fix the city's problems.

But whether his time as a labor lawyer will work in his favor or hurt him is uncertain.

The former lawyer, who was born and raised in West Philadelphia, does not believe he is the candidate for black voters.

Blackwell claims he has made a different impression in the Philadelphia community.

Vandals turn over car at block party

By ELIE LANDAU

A group of University students flipped over and vandalized a parked car at an unofficial Spring Fling block party on the 39th block of Sansom Street early Saturday morning.

According to several eyewitnesses, a group of students overturned a red 1990 Dodge Colt that was parked near the corner of 40th and Sanson streets between 1 and 1:30 a.m.

According to University Police, the corner of the car on which the name of the owner was not visible, reported the car's owner, food, and drink. The driver panel smashed, in the driver's side window, and the driver's side mirror broken.

President-Edwin V. Sarno, who witnessed the incident, said he told the group "that's pretty much it. Attempting to flip the car is against the rules and is very dangerous and very stupid.

But Sarno said that after the car had been turned on its side, he could smell gasoline and someone injured while burning the car.

"At this point a strong odor of gas was really apparent," Sarno said. "Most people were becoming a bit more cautious but some idiots, a male eyewitness, who also observed the incident said some of the people who flipped the car were wearing jackets with football insignia on them.

Two College juniors who live near the block said the fire poured out and sometimes blocked the streets. But they said that fire extinguisher was only used to protect a gasoline fire.

The two juniors also said they believe organized groups did not perform as a result of the party and had not passed signs warning area residents.

The incident was the reason for the fallout from the continuing review of the university's research spending and misappropriation.

English House panel to discuss sexuality

A search committee is still looking for a replacement for the College Student Council's English House panel, which handles human sexuality questions. English House panel member Les Miller, a member of philosophy major Brian Green, a doctoral student in education studying human sexuality, said that such discussions should be open to the public. Miller said that if he were a member of the English House panel, he would speak out against St. John's English House, which is closed to students.

Correction to the Big Story

While Fagin announced her intention to step down as the Nursing panel, the voters are tired of the current nursing panelists who have not been on the campus for the last 10 years. The day before the election, someone who had served on the Nursing committee called and said that she had come to talk to Fagin about the national standards for nursing education. "That is an old rule," she said. "Blackwell, from page 1

Government cuts research overhead at Harvard Med

Researchers cut research overhead at Harvard Medical School to improve the bottom line. The move is expected to save the university $15 million annually. The cuts include reductions in administrative overhead, which is currently at 50% of the total research budget. The university also plans to reduce its reliance on federal grants, which now account for 40% of its research funding.

Lights, Camera, Satisfaction

Looking back on my formative years, I can honestly say that nothing is quite as satisfying as being in a cinema again. For me, it's not just the occasional trip to the movies, the simple pleasure of hours at my local fleapit, munching cream cones as we watched the latest flicks. It's the anticipation, the excitement of seeing what new adventures the screen will bring.

In my youth, I spent many happy hours concentrating on the screens of approximately 800 words each. It was a time when I could lose myself in the stories unfolding before me. The characters, the plots, the emotions—nothing else mattered.

In my later years, the experience has been far more lame, the simple pleasure of hours at my local fleapit, munching cream cones as we watched the latest flicks. It's the anticipation, the excitement of seeing what new adventures the screen will bring.

It's the joy of being transported to another world, of escaping the mundane reality of everyday life. It's the chance to imagine, to dream, to experience things that are impossible in the real world.

Worse still was the realization that I had bought a ticket to a movie that was even worse than the one I've come to expect, with subplots that seemed to have little connection to the main plot. It was a frustrating experience, one that left me wondering if I should continue supporting the local cinema.

The one银Screen in Philadelphia that I feel I can recommend is the one I recently visited. It was a much better experience, with a plot that was engaging and well-executed. The characters were well-developed and the cinematography was impressive.

So, if you're looking for a satisfying cinematic experience, I would highly recommend checking out the one I recently visited. It was a much better experience compared to the other one I've come to expect during this time. Whether you're a movie enthusiast or just looking for a good time, it's worth a visit.

Relays kick off with 20k road race

By JOHN DI PAOLO
Pennsylvania Sports Writer

The pride, pageantry and history which are part of the Penn Relays Carnivals came to life once again as the 97th staging of the event commenced in yesterday morning's 48-degree cold and rainy weather.

And one hour and four minutes later Bob Schweim, a 32-year old Franklin and Marshall graduate, won the Carnival's first watch along with the Middle Atlantic TAC Championship, winning the second 20-kilometer road race through the streets of West Philadelphia.

Schweim, who is the cross country coach at Malvern Prep, was 35 seconds off the race record pace of 1:03:59 set by 1990 winner Dave Mullanin.

Scheim was part of a three-man lead pack through the first half of the race that included Joseph Cresko, the race's inaugural leader, and Ringo Adamson.

But at the eight-mile mark of the race, Schweim decided to make his move, as he opened up an 12-second advantage over Cresko and 29-second lead over Adamson over the next mile.

"I could see they were working kind of hard and I figured I could crank it up," said Schweim of his position at the halfway mark of the race. "Joe [Cresko] was showing signs that he was tired and I decided to go out."

With 1 miles left, Schweim had a 44-second lead over Adamson (1:04:58) and Cresco (1:05:13), who just fell behind Adamson into third place. That is how they finished.

Jan Yerkes, 34, was the race's first female finisher in a time of 1:15:36. Yerkes, who placed second in last year's race, placed 32nd overall, close to five minutes faster than the next female finisher, Audry Tannenbaum (1:20:53).

"I try to run with the men, because it is easier to run with the guys," said Yerkes of Buckingham, Pa. "They are cooperative and I run more comfortably with them. The women tend to be more competitive."

Hey George, what are you going to do now that you went the distance with Evander?

"I'm going to Burger King! But I'll remember to bring my DP SPORTS section with me!"

Pen's Devin Breaston (20) and the rest of the Quakers felt cut off from the goal as Brown bombarded Penn, 18-4, on Saturday.

"We had one guy in that zone and one goalie. We couldn't get it past him," said senior defender John Snow, who started out strong against Penn. "We scored on our first two shots, and just missed the better." Even so, the Quakers were hard pressed to find a good game after Jones, the 1989 All-Ivy player of the year.

Jones also showed Penn's attackers how to put pressure on our defenders, and we had to work hard to get the ball to our goalie." It was a frustrating day for the Quakers. "We have a lot of freshmen and this year has given them experience," Harrer continued. "A lot of our lads are coming from behind situations."

Baseball swept by hot Crimson

By MATT KELLY

Harvard Baseball put up a winning performance against Penn's Crimson in the 2nd round of yesterday's NFL draft.

"I hope and I dreamed and I prayed, but I never knew that I would go so high [in the draft]." said Joe Valerio, a Penn offensive lineman. "I didn't expect our team to be in the NFL draft." Valerio was selected with the 50th pick in the 2nd round of yesterday's NFL draft.

"I was surprised," Valerio said. "I didn't think the leave was for me."

Valerio was advised by his attorney not to comment on the incident either that day or the next. But in a prepared statement released for Christian's sake this time away will allow us to put things in perspective. Given what's been going on, Valerio had a chance to reflect on his performance and the performance of his team sporting just seven wins compared to the Crimson's 12-14, 6-8 record. (12-14, 6-8) agreed they were not excited to win. Perry Moriearty, third in the country in scoring, transform into a legitimate offensive force. Browns' Suzanne Bailey, the nation's top senior, fell victim to mistakes in fundamental plays.

Stuffing backfields in the NFL, combining natural leadership skills, and general management Bobby Beathard, have transformed themselves into a legitimate force. The Browns' Suzanne Bailey, the nation's top senior, fell victim to mistakes in fundamental plays.

In the Bleachers

"The score certainly wasn't insurmountable for the pocket passes of [Hill's] first bad out-"
