Business is lousy for many University-area merchants. They say inadequate parking and the summer slack season hurt commerce. And they say they are charged high rents by their landlord - the University.

By KENNETH BADER

It's 4 a.m., you are slightly intoxicated and very hungry.

Suddenly, you find yourself sitting at Troy's, a long-time University favorite. You lie smothered in gravy. You are close to the University market area.

It is no secret that the last year or so has been a trial period for many University students in his other two restaurants, Bicycle Express on 46th Street, said last month that his rent is "fairly high." Yet Bicycle Express is one of the few success stories in West Philadelphia. According to Thornburgh, who is often the University, the slow summer hurt commerce. And they say they are charged high rents by their landlord - the University.

The University's Real Estate office was unavailable for comment.

Parking, a problem that any visitor to the University encounters, is also a problem for businesses.

Loren Gulley, owner of Friendly Flowers on Walnut Street, said that he had already closed the bar's liquor license. "Parking has  been a problem for University students and others for years."

A West Philadelphia resident walks past The Athletic Department, which is still open. "Parking is a problem that any visitor to the University encounters, is also a problem for businesses."

Many University students in his other two restaurants, Bicycle Express on 46th Street, said last month that his rent is "fairly high." Yet Bicycle Express is one of the few success stories in West Philadelphia.

The year could be 1971, 1983, or 1991. It's just another night at Troy's, a long-time University favorite.

Barbin added that he does not think the harassment policy is any worse than legal procedures for deciding who to fire an officer. He thinks the University's harassment policy is “a whole lot better than having to go through due process,” which is “lengthy, expensive, and painful for everyone involved," including the officer who is the subject of the complaint. Barbin added that there is no guarantee that if the University fires an officer who has committed harassment that they will find another officer to replace him.

Waterman added that if the department is not satisfied with the results of a complaint, they can file for a hearing, which would be conducted by a neutral third party. Waterman said that the department is satisfied with the results of the complaints that have been filed against the officers.

Mayoral candidates debate old issues

Mayor candidates debated old issues such as the city's finances, crime, and the economy. The candidates agreed that the city needs to address these issues in order to move forward.

The Mayoral candidates also debated the city's budget, which has been in deficit for the past several years. The candidates agreed that the city needs to cut costs and increase revenue in order to address the deficit.

The candidates also debated the city's economy, with some candidates arguing that the city needs to provide more support for local businesses, while others argued that the city needs to cut spending in order to reduce the deficit.

The Mayoral candidates also debated the city's crime rate, with some candidates arguing that the city needs to increase funding for law enforcement, while others argued that the city needs to focus on reducing poverty and providing more opportunities for residents.

The candidates also debated the city's schools, with some candidates arguing that the city needs to provide more support for students, while others argued that the city needs to focus on reducing crime in the schools.

The final settlement, however, should not have any further impact on the ruling price of bulkpacks, which had already been nailed by the magazines in a spokesperson for the Association of American Publishers yesterday.

In the ruling, U.S. District Court Judge Constance Baker Motley said that the automaker that bulkpacks fall under the "fair market value" of 1981 copyright laws was invalid.

ALL MAJORS WELCOME
American Morality Starts Here

Ah, the Keystone State. Pennsylvania can put a budget surplus of over $16 billion in the bank and still have most of its major revenue sources based on legalized gambling and legalized medical marijuana. But it is perhaps the University of Pennsylvania that represents a moral high ground.

At the end of the semester, the University of Pennsylvania launches an advertising campaign titled "don't drink and drive," urging students to refrain from consuming alcohol and to not drive while intoxicated. This campaign is part of a broader initiative to promote responsible drinking practices among students.

The campaign includes a series of advertisements featuring prominent University faculty members and students, emphasizing the importance of making informed decisions about alcohol consumption and transportation. The messages encourage students to use designated drivers, ride-sharing services, or public transportation to avoid driving under the influence.

The University's Office of Public Affairs and the Department of Student Affairs are collaborating on this initiative, highlighting the University's commitment to fostering a safe and responsible campus environment. Students are also encouraged to support each other by being alert to peers who may be under the influence and refraining from providing them with transportation.

Overall, the "don't drink and drive" campaign is an important step in promoting a culture of responsibility and safety on campus. By encouraging students to make informed choices about alcohol consumption and transportation, the University is taking proactive measures to create a safer and more inclusive community for all students.

Letters to the Editor

Palmer Przemyslaw

Editor

The University of Pennsylvania is known for its high academic standards and prestigious alumni network. However, recent events have raised questions about its commitment to ethical behavior, particularly regarding the handling of financial aid.

The situation involves a scholarship program offered by the University, specifically the "University Scholarship," which is awarded to students based on academic merit and financial need. Recent revelations suggest that the University has been mismanaging the scholarship funds, leading to widespread dissatisfaction among students and alumni.

Student protests and petitions have escalated, calling for accountability and transparency in the management of financial aid programs. The University administration has faced criticism for its handling of the situation, raising concerns about its ethical standards and its ability to maintain a reputable reputation.

As a member of the University community, it is essential to address these issues and work towards restoring trust. This requires open communication, transparent decision-making, and a commitment to fairness and integrity in all aspects of the University's operations.

Elizabeth Hunt is a doctoral candidate in the School of Science from Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, and her column appears alternate Wednesdays.

Policy on Submissions

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Letters to the Editor are welcome and encouraged. They should be concise, well-written, and submitted by an identifiable person. Majors, dates, and years when appropriate, are requested. Their authorship should be clearly indicated. The names of the author, institution, city, and state are required.

Letters should be sent to the managing editor at the Daily Pennsylvanian and must be typed or written legibly in ink. They should not exceed 250 words. The Letters section is subject to editorial discretion and may be abridged if necessary. All letters are subject to the approval of the managing editor.

Guest Columns

The Daily Pennsylvanian welcomes columns from the University community, but not from non-students. Columns should be approximately 600 words and submitted by email to daily@upenn.edu. The University reserves the right to reject columns at its discretion. They should be formatted as a Word document and include the author's name, affiliation, and contact information.

Columns do not necessarily reflect the views of the University or the Daily Pennsylvanian. The Daily Pennsylvanian reserves the right to edit columns for length, clarity, and grammar.

Soviets ask Bush to send them food

WASHINGTON — President Bush received a 300-page Soviet request for emergency food aid yesterday and declared "nobody is going to starve" during the hungry Mideast winter. But the president said he was surprised at how much the United States would provide.

The aid request is likely to be high on the agenda when Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev meet next week in Spain.

Agriculture Secretary Ed Madigan delivered the Sov- iet request to the White House. Madigan led a U.S. de- legation that spent nine days in the Soviet Union studying emergency food needs.

Bush had been prepared to say any request from administra- tive sources, for humanitarian needs, "was Bush said at the White House.

Asked how quickly he would act, the president said he would "do it in a reasonable, prudent way, to take whatever time is required to be sure what you're doing makes sense. I can't give you an exact time frame as we will have a price. . . ." Soviet officials have appealed repeatedly for food assistance and have cited essential to the success of political and economic reforms.

"In the United States as a country in order to survive the winter and to solve all the problems concerning the transition," Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin said when he was in New York last month for the opening of the U.N. General Assembly.

Stock market drops

NEW YORK — The stock market settled lower yesterday after a flurry of computer-triggered selling capped off a lackluster session.

Stocks opened at mixed levels as the market appeared to catch its last week's impressive gains. But attention centered today on bargain-hunting gains as way to profit taking in recent mergers, the fall in oil prices as well as on these advances.

Volatility was rare as there was little reaction in a brief halt in trading on the New York Stock Exchange that resulted from a power failure. Trading stopped at 1:50 and was cut off 1:30 at 3:45. But exchange officials had to immediately determine the cause of the stoppage.

The price was light until the final hour of trading, when computer-triggered sell programs kicked in and sent the market lower at a brisk pace.

Much of the profit-taking focused on blue-chip issues.

North says Bush knew about Contra diversion

WASHINGTON — Oliver North said yesterday that George Bush knew about many of the Reagan administration's illegal sales to the Nicaraguan Contras.

But the former National Security Council aide said in an interview with reporters that he didn't tell the then-vice president about the covert diversion of aid sales money to the Contras.

"I tell you I prepared a couple hundred thousand pages of concerned information on the subject and literally to the vice presi- dent's office," North said. "I don't believe anybody has said he wasn't aware of at least a good measure of what was going on" regarding the Contras.

Activity in the credit markets, where bond prices continued to er- ode as yields trended higher, also weighed on stocks. The yield on the Treasury's 10-year bond remained above the psychologically important 7 percent level.

Shamir says Israel won't move borders

STRASBOURG, France — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir yester- day rejected any change in his country's borders, saying that to do as would invite war. He insisted that Israel has every right to its land it oc- cupied in 1967.

Shamir was upstaged as a speaker at the Mideast peace conference by the Palestinian leader Arafat, who flexed his muscle by announcing that the Palestinians are "not victims of the Israelis, nor are we under false pretenses".

The meeting was concluded with a joint statement in which the two leaders said they now have a "just solution of the Palest- inian problem" in the heart of the Arab-Israeli settlement.

Arafat gained a symbolic victory when Foreign Minister Boris Pankin of the Soviet Union, a co- sponsor of the conference, met with Shamir before the meeting and praised him for his "great statesmanship.

Arafat also received a round of applause after he announced the 14-member Palestinian delegation to the peace conference, and named a seven-member advisory commit- tee to operate behind the screen. "I hope that the Israeli side, the government of Israel, will really heed his peace," Arafat said in Hebrew on Israeli radio after an- nouncing the delegation. "On our part we want peace ... peace based on equality."

Braves chop Twins’ lead in Series

ATLANTA — Mark Lemke’s two-run home run in the bottom of the 12th inning ended the Atlanta Braves’ 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins and gave Atlanta the 3-2 lead in the American League Championship Series.

The Braves needed the win to keep their Series hopes alive. Minnesota had won two of the first three games of the Series in the Metrodome, giving it a 2-1 lead and a chance to clinch the Series and clinch a berth in the World Series.

Despite being down 3-2 in the Series, the Braves had been able to narrow the gap to 2-1. The victory put the Braves in the driver’s seat as the Series heads into a pivotal Game 4 in the Metrodome tonight.

Rangers top Islanders 4-1

The New York Rangers scored a 4-1 victory over the New York Islanders on Thursday night in Game 3 of the Metropolitan Division semifinals. It was a sign of things to come as the Rangers took a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The Islanders, who had a 1-0 lead in the Series, were unable to hold off the Rangers in the third period. The Rangers’ win put them in the driver’s seat as the Series heads into a pivotal Game 4 tonight in New York.

Braves need win tonight

The Atlanta Braves need a victory tonight against the Minnesota Twins to keep their Series hopes alive. The Twins have a 6-4 lead after seven innings, and the Braves need a win to avoid falling behind 2-1 in the American League Championship Series.

The Braves were able to score two runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to tie the game, but the Twins responded with a run in the top of the ninth to give themselves a 6-4 lead. The Braves will need to score four runs to win the game and take a 2-1 lead in the Series.

NHL-Tampa Bay 6, Washington 4

The Tampa Bay Lightning defeated the Washington Capitals 6-4 in Game 3 of their Eastern Conference quarterfinals series on Thursday night. It was a sign of things to come as the Lightning took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series.

The Capitals, who had a 1-0 lead in the series, were unable to hold off the Lightning in the third period. The Lightning’s win put them in the driver’s seat as the Series heads into a pivotal Game 4 tonight in Tampa Bay.

The anemic offense vs. the non-defense

By JOSHDUB AUSTHO

Offense
The offense has been inconsistent this season. The offense has had its share of big games, but it has also had its share of duds. The offense has had trouble finding its rhythm and has struggled to score consistently.

Defense
The defense has been solid, with players like Joe Paterno's son, and I like it that way. The defense has been playing well and has been a key reason for the team's success.

The game between Penn State and Drexel was a classic battle of two teams with different styles of play. Penn State's offense was able to score early and often, while Drexel's defense was able to contain the Nittany Lions. The game was a back-and-forth affair, but in the end, Penn State was able to prevail. The final score was 2-1 in favor of the Nittany Lions.
