OB-GYN Department hosts forum

The Medical School's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology's Division of Reproductive Biology hosted a two-day symposium at the University of Pennsylvania this September. Over 180 people attended the sessions, entitled "Obstetrics, Fetal Development, and Reproductive Endocrinology: Ethical and Scientific Considerations." The conference featured talks from Japan, Korea, Egypt, Venezuela and Thailand.

"It should be noted that it was a nice opportunity to visit back at the University," said Luigi Mastroianni, director of the Division of Reproductive Biology. "To bring such renowned speakers to campus has got to be a great experience for everyone who participated in the two-year fellowship program at the clinic. Currently there are 25 fellows involved in the post graduate program, most of whom are from other countries."

"It is my perception that at the advent of the forum, many alumni attended the symposium," he added. "I don't believe it was the only way to do it, but I think it was certainly the best way to do it."

3 police depts. probing abduction

By DAVID CHESTNUT

Philadelphia's Police Division, the University Police department, and Bryn Mawr Police are currently collaborating to investigate an abduction that occurred near Bryn Mawr this year.

Police in the Philadelphia Police Department have arrested a suspect in the abduction of a 16-year-old girl near the Bryn Mawr station on Tuesday, November 5.

The victim, a female, was walking near the station when she was accosted by two men. One of the men, a white male, was driving a black car, and the other, a black male, was a passenger. The man in the passenger seat told the victim to get into the car, and she complied.

The victim was raped and then thrown from the car, dying from her injuries. The victim's body was discovered on the side of the road the following morning.

Police are currently searching for the two suspects, who are described as white males. Anyone with information is urged to contact the Philadelphia Police Department immediately.

The decision was made by former Associate Dean for Undergraduate Student Affairs Nicholas Condon, who is currently an assistant professor at the University of Washington.

Students did not seem to care who made the decision, as long as it was made.

"I don't understand why the University doesn't want to support the department," said one student.

And yet, others believe this change in policy is for the best. "I don't see how the department can function well with such a small budget," said another.

But Beeman said that it is "not possible" for the department to remain in its current state. "I am confident that the department can function well with a larger budget," he said.

And one student said that administrators fail to understand the importance of the Am Civ Program.

"It is my perception that at the advent of the forum, many alumni attended the symposium," he added. "I don't believe it was the only way to do it, but I think it was certainly the best way to do it."

Democratic mayoral candidate Edward Rendell has been making a last-minute push to convince the undecided voters that he is the best choice for the job. He has been hitting the campaign trail hard, trying to reach out to as many voters as possible. Rendell has been saying that he will focus on issues such as education, crime, and the economy. He has also been promising to bring a renewed sense of leadership to Philadelphia. Rendell's main focus has been on the need for a strong mayor system in Philadelphia. He believes that this would allow for more efficient decision making and a greater ability to get things done. Rendell has been critical of former Mayor Rendell's administration, saying that it was too slow to respond to problems and that it did not do enough to address the city's needs. He has also been critical of the city's budget, saying that it is too high and needs to be cut.

10 vying for seven at-large positions on City Council

As the University community hits the polls today, they will have a unique opportunity to shape Philadelphia's future. The University is one of the largest in the city, and its students and faculty have a vested interest in the outcome of the election. The University's representatives on the City Council will have the power to make important decisions about issues such as education, health care, and public safety.

In U.'s district, Council seat to stay in family

By KENNETH BARK

In an election year dominated by a changing political scene, a Philadelphia political dynasty will keep its seat in City Council.

James Kenney, a 27-year-old son of the late City Councilman James Kenney, will continue to represent the 3rd District. Kenney's father served on the council for 30 years and was known for his dedication to public service.

Kenney has been a member of City Council since 1991, and he has held various positions on the council, including as the chair of the Budget and Appropriations Committee. He has also been a vocal advocate for issues such as education and affordable housing.

Kenney has faced some challenges during his tenure on the council, including criticism from some members of the council and the public over his voting record. However, he has remained committed to the issues that he cares about, and he has been successful in getting things done.

Kenney's father passed away in 1998, and he has continued to represent the district in his memory.

I've heard them say that the Slaves freed, that many others said their experiences were beneficial, others said they did not find the walk to Student Health inconvenient and dangerous, especially at night.

Millions on strike in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG - South Africa's million-strong rand on strike yesterday as anti-apartheid groups that have called a full-blown general strike for the first time in 22 years took on the government.

Strikers were out in massive numbers throughout the country, paralyzing transport and production and theoretically shutting down some 12 percent of the economy.

"The government is a failure," said the militant black reflecting on the action, "but the world has never seen the like of what is happening here."

"The government anticipated that many blacks would be intimidated into staying in, a charge denied by opposition groups. Opponents led a call for the police to "show them no mercy." "If the government does not accept their demands, we will be forced to continue," said the voice of striker's leader.

The massive strike, which is expected to continue through tomorrow, was officially called to protest a bill that would make it illegal to strike. It was also called to protest the treatment of black workers in southern African countries.

"We're really excited," said Michael Teits, a Freshman. "It was a big decision for us this year." The decision wasn't as difficult for many students as it was for the freshmen. Many students have been living with the decision for several weeks, and many have made up their minds.

Denise Wolf, president of the PSU, also said many students neglect to vote because they "are just apathetic," she explained. "We're apathetic," Wolf said. "We're not voting, we're not protesting every day, it doesn't mean they don't want to be vocal about." In the past, Wolf said the big turnouts at every house made one year's rush particularly pronounced.

"In my mind, hazing is in contradiction with what we stand for," she said. "I'm sure we can unit a group in a positive way."

"I don't have any official action from any University office as of yet," Wolf said. "We're not sure what will happen if the case goes to the office or a settlement cannot be reached." The process of the investigation will follow a detailed in the Policy of the Fraternity and Sorority Advisory Board."

"In terms of interests and activities, students have gotten farther from looking at politics as some sort of an entertainment," Wolf said. "They're not just for mid-term elections." Freshman said deciding which fraternity to join was not just a matter of reputation, but a matter of personal choice. Many students have already decided which fraternity to join, and some have even made up their minds.

Freshman said deciding which fraternity to join was not just a matter of reputation, but a matter of personal choice. Many students have already decided which fraternity to join, and some have even made up their minds.
"Your eyes!" he said.

"Your hair!" she said.

We at Michael's Custom Cuts would like to offer a few observations on a subject of universal concern.

Love.

Now, we're not going to tell you that if you cut your hair, you'll suddenly become the object of every woman’s desire. Or that one of our perms will stroke the fires of the man you love.

But after almost 50 years in the salon business, we have noticed one thing.

A little grooming behavior can’t hurt.

Rendell solicits U. alumni

"The letter was pretty minicratic," Cohen said. "It failed a little bit about substance (of the Rendell campaign) and asked for support as a Penn alumnus." Cohen said it was impossible to determine how much money University alumni have given to Rendell's campaign. But he said a few alumni had given "substantial amounts" and that alumni had been instrumental in helping raise money.

Cohen said a University alumni helped organize a Rendell fundraiser in Chicago this summer. The fundraiser in Chicago this summer raised between $15,000 and $20,000. Director of Alumni Relations doris Cochran-Fine said last week she had not heard about Rendell's attempts to raise money from alumni.

Cochran-Fine added that the Re-dell campaign had not requested a list of the Rendell's contemporaries. The alumni office does not give out the names and addresses of alumni to people who are not affiliated with the University and only to University affiliates who need this information for alumni events.

"We do not disclose information," she said. "It is our job to protect the privacy of alumni." Therefore, she said, that the Rendells could have obtained a list of alumni another way.

Rendell campaigns for Wofford in city by EMILY CULBERTSON

Edward Rendell, the Democratic candidate for Governor, took his campaign to the streets last week. He and his running mate, Harry Martin, visited several City Council candidates and pledged to work with them if elected.

"We need your help more than you need it. If you're not prepared to support the City Council, then you might as well stay home," Rendell said.

He also urged the candidates to continue to work hard for the city.

"You're not going to win this election, but you can help to make sure that the people of Philadelphia have a voice in what's happening in City Hall," he said.

Rendell also spoke about the importance of education, public safety, and economic development.

"We need to invest in our schools, provide more police officers, and create jobs for our citizens," he said.

He concluded by thanking the candidates for their hard work and dedication.

Rendell mayoral campaign for Philadelphia -

In the race for mayor of Philadelphia, four candidates are vying for the position. They are Edward Rendell, Mary Sharpe, Will Price, and Robert F. Casey.

Edward Rendell, the Democratic candidate, is currently leading in the polls. He has been a prominent figure in Philadelphia politics for many years and is known for his commitment to public service.

Mary Sharpe, the Republican candidate, is a former state senator and is running on a platform of fiscal responsibility and law and order.

Will Price, the Libertarian candidate, is an attorney and is running on a platform of reducing government spending.

Robert F. Casey, the Green Party candidate, is a former U.S. senator and is running on a platform of environmental and social justice.

The race is hotly contested, and the outcome is uncertain. The election will be held on November 7.

For more information about the candidates, their platforms, and the upcoming election, please visit the website of the Philadelphia City Council or contact the Philadelphia Democratic Party.

Frosh edge Yale in offensive slugfest

"This was the first game all season where the defense didn't score and the offense put all of the points on the board," Morris said. The Quakers opened the stadium with a 23-yard drive, capped by a 23-yard touchdown run by quarterback Nick Fiedler. After Fiedler's first throw, the Eli offense was able to score the second touchdown of the game. Fiedler reported that he was a bit surprised by the Eli's defense, but wanted to show that he was ready to go. However, Yale could only manage a second-half safety, which came after a 23-yard drive by the Eli offense.

But when the Quakers take on La Salle today to conclude their participation in the Big Five Classic, they will face a formidable opponent in the form of the St. Joseph's University. The St. Joseph's University team has been on a roll, winning their last four matches, including last week's Big Five Classic against the Penn women's team.

The Penn women's team has been inconsistent throughout the season, and they will need to have a strong performance to maintain the regular-season win streak. The Big Five Classic provides an opportunity for the Penn women's team to showcase their skills and potentially maintain their regular-season win streak.

The College Alumni Society wants to support the Penn women's team in their quest to maintain the regular-season win streak. They are offering career advice and resources to help the team succeed.

Eagles shrug off Giants, 30-7

Eagles St. Giants
PHILADELPHIA — No matter what the record says, the Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants haven't been the same team since Jan. 1, 1994. The only thing that has been constant is the Eagles' undisputed claim of being the better team.

The Eagles (7-1-0) opened a three-game winning streak with their first shutout of the season and their first shutout of the season and 12-point margin of victory over the Giants (7-2-0) as they claimed the Eastern Division title for the first time in NFL history.

The Eagles scored the first and third quarter touchdowns and their defense forced four turnovers, including two interceptions and a fumble, as they cruised to a 30-7 shutout victory.

The Eagles victory over the Giants came two days after the Giants lost to the New England Patriots 29-19 in Foxborough, Mass.

Eagles-Shark Narrowly Missed Opportunity in First Half

The Eagles were leading 14-7 at halftime when Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski was intercepted by Giants free safety Alfred Kelly. But Eagles wide receiver Mike Potoski made the play after catching Jaworski's pass in the middle of the field and running it 50 yards for a touchdown.

The Giants were threatening to score on a pass from quarterback Phil Simms, but Eagles defensive tackle Kevin Mitchell intercepted the ball at the 1-yard line.

But the Eagles were unable to take advantage of the turnover and were forced to settle for a field goal from kicker J.P. Faggins. The Eagles led 14-7 at halftime.

Eagles Offense Catches Fire in Second Half

In the second half, it was a different story. The Eagles scored four touchdowns in the third quarter and Jaworski completed 17 of 25 passes for 225 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions.

The Eagles took a 24-7 lead on a 1-yard touchdown run by fullback Ron DeSantis and a 30-7 lead on Jaworski's 4-yard touchdown pass to tight end Kyle Reiff.

Eagles Defense Dominates in Second Half

The Eagles defense was also dominant in the second half, forcing one turnover and allowing just 74 total yards in the quarter.

Eagles' Offense Reaches New Heights in Second Half

The Eagles offense was also dominant in the second half, scoring 27 points and scoring on 9 of 13 possessions.

The Eagles finished with 473 total yards, including 364 passing yards and 109 rushing yards. The Eagles also had 25 first downs and 373 yards of total offense.

Eagles' Defense Stays Tight in Second Half

The Eagles defense was also dominant in the second half, allowing just 74 total yards and holding the Giants to 175 total yards.

The Eagles defense also forced one turnover, an interception by linebacker Brian Williams, and held the Giants to three field goals in the second half.

F. Hockey's season ends in a 1-0 win

By STEVEN COOK

Daily Pennsylvanian Sports Writer

There was nothing wrong with the Penn field hockey team's off-season plan that a good preseason victory mightn't succeed.

The Quakers closed out their exhibition campaign with a 1-0 win over Yale on Saturday at Red and White Field. Yale's offense produced an off-season high in the loss.

Frosh football wins high-scoring battle

By ADAM HEITZOG

Daily Pennsylvanian Sports Writer

The Penn Lightweight Football Team faced off against the Yale Elis last Friday at the Citrin Cup. The Citrin Cup was a classic battle in which blue and redshirts were exchanged and the redshirt was exchanged.

It was a battle of attrition, Quitmeyer said, as the Tigers blanked the Quakers on 19 penalties. That amount was more than expected for a team of this caliber.

Homes in to help it find a clue.

"The Quakers are a very good team," he said. "I think we did a good job of playing defense and limiting their scoring opportunities."
