Student raped in off-campus house

Details of incident not released by U.

BY DAMON CHERTON

Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

Police are investigating a sexual assault off campus after a weekend in which seven University students and one University employee were targeted.

Commissioner John Kupresch said he has decided to deplore the University's quickness unit for its late shifts in the areas affected by the recent wave of crimes.

University Police placed two additional officers in a "tactical beat," scheduled from 12 p.m. to 3 a.m. effective yesterday.

Kupresch said he feels the officers will be able to handle most of the cases presents on from the more frequent patrols and increased shifts.

Kupresch also said University Police have the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority's assistance. The University will distribute 1,000 Police and Mask to the daily rental limit at the University tomorrow.

Mask and Wig said they are prepared to accept the maximum nude photo that launched a sexual harassment investigation against the University in the program to be released tomorrow.

"It said something like a single, short, dumb, Awkward, main-inter- esting picture," said one source who attended the meeting.

"It was the most important thing that happened," he said. "It was the most important thing that happened.

In Brief

Culture courses lacking enrollment

A series of new courses focusing on Asian American literature and culture are suffering from low enrollment, according to Associated Director for Advising and Retention. Sin said the courses were poorly advertised to become administrators made the decision to offer them two days before the end of registration. The course on Asian American Literature and Government Policy, which will examine Asian American issues such as education, health, and the environment, is scheduled to run Spring 1992 at the University. Asian American literature and a course on Asian American culture and history will also be offered. Students can enroll in the classes by using PAES.

Berg selected as Nominating chair

The Senate Executive Committee selected Social Sciences Associate Dean Catherine Berg as the Faculty Senate Nominating Committee at last night's meeting. Berg will chair the committee that is responsible for nominating faculty candidates for the various positions, as well as several committee and university posts.

Quotation of the Day

"Humorously or not, I think an opinion is being phased out. I think it’s not only important to tell them what we’re about, but to do something about it with our own words."

— College junior Yen-Le Kim, a member of the UA’s steering committee for new campus paper AI.
All I did was eat hot dogs, but these are sacrifices you have to make when working in a campaign."

Joe Watkins
White House Senior Staffer

``I did not think the student government would want us to portray the chest of another student who died from a gunshot wound. Praying for Mumford made me uncomfortable. I had to keep up the pretense that I was just praying, and I did not want to be known as being pro-religion."

``I was late to the meeting and had to spend a few minutes talking with a White House aide about a political incident."

``The reality of politics deals with mudslinging,"" Watkins said. ""Politics is a tough game."""

Students on campus:

The resolution also demands that the Walker Building's council vote represents a trend among faculty to let students out of the decision-making process at the University. "Intentionally or not, students are being excluded," Kim said. "I think it's not only important to let students know we're upset but to do something about it as well."

Department Overview

Disney Development Company (DDC) is the real estate development division of The Walt Disney Company, which works with other divisions of the parent company to master plan Disney's extensive land holdings. DDC is a key player in the development strategy area and is directly responsible for managing land acquisition, entitlement processing, governmental negotiations and construction of new resort projects. In addition, DDC works to develop and lease office and studio-related facilities to meet corporate space needs.

The DDC team applies a unique mix of economic and strategic analysis with architectural, planning and construction skills to approach major development opportunities. The group has significant interaction with the company's major operating groups (Walt Disney Attractions, Walt Disney Imagineering, and Walt Disney Studios), as well as various corporate groups.

Job Description

Disney Development Company is looking for highly qualified candidates to fill the position of Development Analyst.

The Development Analyst will play a significant role as a member of the project team and can expect to acquire a strong understanding of the development process. This two-to-three-year opportunity will expose the analyst to the executive decision-making process at one of the fastest growing and most successful companies in America. Qualifications include a record of top academic achievement as well as a strong analytical background.

Candidates should send a cover letter, resume and transcript by January 24 to:

While pots pour spring as a time of rejuvenation, March brought the University sorrow and struggle.

And in the week following Spring Break, the University faced the deaths of two students and two highly-regarded faculty and discussion of the University’s “need-blind” admissions policies.

College sophomore Jennifer Brown and College and Wharton sophomore Jonathan Pink were killed in a car accident while traveling from a weekend at Princeton University to become the provost of Princeton University, making him the fifth to leave his post in the University’s history.

The castle was vacated after the Wharton student Jonathan Ellis Pink was killed. The student had been on the university newspaper, the Daily Pennsylvanian, and was the editor of the student newspaper. He was also a member of the university’s debate team.

The administration, reacting to proposals to slash the University's state funds and decreases in federal aid, suggested that the Class of 1995 would not be admitted on a need-blind basis.

While the administration also suggested increasing the cost of tuition by 10 percent to compensate, the trustees lowered the tuition increase to 5 percent in the academic year.

And the newly selected Class of 1995 did not see too hot when the heat was turned down, but the United Way got in more hot water when it used tactics which were against University policy, in turn, a deficit for the next fiscal year.

Kudos

To School of Arts and Sciences Dean Rosemary Stevenson for (nearly) slowing down the revolving door at College Hall.

To the people who designed the "two con- ceptive terms" slogan in the City Charter.

To Chris Landry for becoming an All-American track star.

To the Social Planning and Events Committee for bringing a few good acts (i.e. Dennis Miller) on the Admissions tour.

Hiring so many guards to stand in all the empty hallways is a capricious method for selling Basketball season tickets.

To "surprised" at Coach Gary Steele's decision to give the All-American guard to someone else.

To the Committee to Diversify locust Walk for coming up with a modernistic monstrosity that looks like something to eat. "No." he said. "I thought it was a hot dog."" He said that the Barbershop quartet was The 107th Board: We beat the Inky.

It was a baptism by fire. George Bush decided to test our patience by calling for a "simple" board — to argue out our own elections, we came together. And we met the Gulf War. From a mayoral election to the case the editorial page fell through. We never did need that extra page three in service hoard to Hearty kill Rita.

But the excitement didn't stop with the end of the month. It was a baptism by fire.

"DP" publishes apology for ad

By MARGARET KANE

The Daily Pennsylvanian published a statement Friday apologizing for running an advertisement that contained discriminatory language against gay and lesbian couples.

The ad offered a Valentine's Day special for the Polo Hay nightclub which stated in fine print that the special was open to couples who "must be of the opposite sex.

A group of students and faculty calling itself the Valentine's Day Coalition protested the ad and filed complaints with the Philadelphia Human Relations Coalition against both the DP and the nightclub.

The group has since agreed to drop the complaints against the DP, which editors of the paper have maintained are groundless against the DP, which editors of the paper have maintained are groundless.

Penn vs. St. Joe's at Spectrum

By NOAH HAREL

 Penn (8-4, 1-2 PCAA) took on St. Joe's (2-10, 0-4 PCAA) in the Spectrum tonight. According to the presidents of the Big Four, the game was expected to be hotly contested. The game lived up to expectations and the final score was 71-63.

The Quakers had a difficult time against the top-scoring team in the PCAA, but they fought hard throughout the game. PA Daily Pennsylvanian Sports Writer

Quakers hold on for first victory Late charge by Middies falls short

By MICHAEL MISKIEW

The bottom line is the Penn men's basketball season: looking back at the first half of the season, Penn was able to get past the University of Richmond by a mere two points. Just two nights ago at the Palestra, as the Quakers were on the rise toward national competition, a win seemed like a possibility. But this game was not to be.

Penn was able to hold the Middies to only 24 points in the first half, but that was not enough. The Quakers could have easily won the game, but their poor shooting and inability to control the ball allowed the Middies to come back in the second half. The final score was 71-63.

The Quakers were led by senior guard Paul Chambers, who scored a team-high 18 points. Junior forward Jerry Berzanski also had a good game, scoring 14 points and 13 rebounds. The Quakers' defense was also a big factor in the game, holding the Middies to only 40% shooting.

At Courtside

With feet injured during the previous game, the Quakers' coach Roger Reina said, "It's been a tough week for us. Between the injuries and the loss of some key players, we're not where we want to be." But he was pleased with the team's effort tonight.

"The team fought hard, and I'm proud of them," Reina said. "They worked hard in practice this week, and it showed on the court." The Quakers had a 13-point lead at halftime, but the Middies came back to tie the game in the second half. The Quakers were able to hold on for the win, but it was a close call.

The team's next game will be against Dartmouth on Saturday. The Quakers are currently in fourth place in the PCAA, and a win against Dartmouth would help them climb the standings.

Charity stripe proves key in loss to 49ers

By MICHAEL LIEF

The Quakers' basketball season is coming to an end, and with it comes the end of one of the most exciting seasons in recent memory. The team had high expectations going into the season, but they never expected to be where they are now.

The season started off well, with a 10-2 record and a top-10 ranking in the polls. However, the team's confidence was shaken when they lost three straight games. But they were able to bounce back and win their last two games, setting up a potential championship game.

The Quakers were able to take down the top-ranked team in the league, but they were unable to hold on to their lead. The team's defense was a major factor in the loss, as they allowed too many easy shots and turnovers.

At Courtside

The Quakers were able to hold on for a win against the Middies, but they knew they had to be more focused in the second half. The team's leading scorer, senior guard Paul Chambers, had a strong performance, scoring 18 points.

Wrestlers notch fourth-place at Sheridan Invitational

By DEBORAH LYNCHER

Last Friday, the Penn wrestling team participated in the Sheridan Invitational, and the team finished fourth overall. The team was led by senior co-captain Steve Dabbs, who won his sixth straight match and defeated the number one ranked wrestler in the nation.

The team's performance was strong, with several wrestlers making it to the quarterfinals. However, the team was unable to secure a victory in the finals.

Last Friday, the Penn wrestling team participated in the Sheridan Invitational, and the team finished fourth overall. The team was led by senior co-captain Steve Dabbs, who won his sixth straight match and defeated the number one ranked wrestler in the nation.

The team's performance was strong, with several wrestlers making it to the quarterfinals. However, the team was unable to secure a victory in the finals.

The Quakers were able to take down the top-ranked team in the league, but they were unable to hold on to their lead. The team's defense was a major factor in the loss, as they allowed too many easy shots and turnovers.

At Courtside

The Quakers were able to hold on for a win against the Middies, but they knew they had to be more focused in the second half. The team's leading scorer, senior guard Paul Chambers, had a strong performance, scoring 18 points.

The team's next game will be against Dartmouth on Saturday. The Quakers are currently in fourth place in the PCAA, and a win against Dartmouth would help them climb the standings.

The Eagles beat Giants for sixth straight

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The New York Giants had eight field goals and a conversion in the final 15 minutes of play, but it wasn't enough to make up for a 41-yard kickoff that was returned for a touchdown on the first play of overtime. The Eagles' 18-7 victory was the sixth straight for the Eagles.

After Mark Brunell intercepted a long pass by Joe Montana on the opening play of overtime, the Eagles scored two straight field goals to tie the game at 7-7.

The Giants had one final chance to win the game in overtime, but Montana's pass went off the mark and the Eagles earned a 18-7 victory.

The Eagles' defense dominated the game, holding the Giants to 206 total yards and preventing them from scoring a touchdown. The Giants had only three first downs in the game and were held to 131 yards of total offense.

In overtime, the Eagles took over at their own 44-yard line and drove to the Giants' 10-yard line, where they kicked the game-winning field goal.

The Eagles now lead the NFC East by a game and are 6-0 for the first time since 1988. They are also 6-0 in the month of December for the first time in franchise history.

The Giants' defense allowed 411 total yards and were unable to stop the Eagles' offense.

In conclusion, the Eagles' victory was well-deserved and their defense played a crucial role in securing the win. The Giants, on the other hand, were unable to overcome the Eagles' defense and were ultimately defeated by a score of 18-7.

W. Swim overmatched by Yale

By STEPHEN KARANSK

Columbia University

Throughout the history of sports, there have been many amazing upsets. However, none are as weak as the Yale upset over the Eli team. Overconfidence, overrated teams, some of their most apparent

For the Yale's women's swimming team, Saturday's meet was not one of those times. A deep, highly talented Eli team cruised the Quakers, 157-78.

"When we went in there, we didn't know if we had the depth to go "Yale and beat them," Penn junior Kristy Colsberg said. "Yale has just a great team. We just tried to go there and win as many races as possible.

Unfortunately, for the Quakers, 1:0 by Leopold, 1:0 overall, the team didn't win that many races. But for the first place finishers of the Yale in the 300 yard backstroke and 500 meter free, Penn would have gone 1-2-3 for the day.

The Quakers were overmatched in every aspect of the meet, as the Eli's 1:6.4-6 overall team depth was too much for Penn to handle. "Yale has a talented team," Quaker's coach Robert W.泳ine said. "They're just programs that can give us a run for our money."

Even though those particular races may have made the score a little more respectable, the Eli's were in control throughout the meet. Even though the Quakers lost the meet to the Eli team, one factor which may have contributed to the overwhelming nature of the loss was the Eli's depth. Eli had over a week to prepare for the Quakers. Penn on the other hand was coming off only two days rest from its first win of the season on Wednesday against Columbia.

"We're not making excuses, but we were tired from the Columbia meet," Colsberg said. "I think the fact that Yale didn't have a meet was a reason that Yale beat us by 80." Although the Quakers were, in the true sense of the word, "No. 2" in the country, they insist their attitude and morale are stronger than ever. This is important, considering the Quaker's disappointing season last year. Although we lost, we still have a really good attitude going into the break," Byrne said.

This team is really close, which makes the winning of tape a lot easier. Although we know we don't have the depth to win some of the meets, we all know that every doing the team is pooling together and swimming the fastest time. "I think the team has some good things about it," Colsberg said. As for the break, I think we're gonna come out fighting against Dartmouth, and the rest of the Ivy League.

The team will have time to lick its wounds, as the Quakers have over a month until their next meet Janury 11 against Dartmouth at Sherry Vest. For the winter vacation, the team will travel to Puerto Rico. However, the team will return for just one week of training, to get the swimmers into shape for the rest of the tough Ivy League swimming schedule.

M. Swim relentlessly bombarded by Elis

As Adam Hertzog was raking in the votes for his "Year of the Pigeon" campaign, he received a call from Elis, the student body president, who wanted to discuss a "true indication of the tide of the times." The call was unannounced and left Hertzog feeling unprepared.

Elis, in her usual, unapologetic manner, said, "We are in a critical situation, Adam. The tide is against us this time. We need your support to turn this around."

"I don't understand what you mean," Hertzog said, his voice trembling.

"I mean, the tide of the times," Elis replied. "The students are voting against you."

Hertzog, who had never known Elis to be anything but confident, began to feel a sense of panic. "But why? What did I do wrong?"

Elis sighed deeply. "You were too nice to them. They want someone who will fight for them. You need to be more aggressive, Adam."
