38th St. parking garage proposed

By DAVID CHERTSON and STEPHEN GLASS

A Trustees committee recommended yesterday that the Uni - versity build a multi-level parking garage, which would house a chiller, water facility and ground level res - idential and commercial space.

The Facilities and Campus Planning Committee recom - manded the project after a five-hour on-site inspection.

The facility will provide 480 parking spaces, according to those at the meeting placed by the construction of the building.

The committee also rec - ommends the school to build a new building on the corner of 36th and Chestnut streets to house the Fine Arts School. The new school would be near 36th and Chestnut, which is currently an empty lot.

The garage, stretching from Wharton Street to 36th Street, would be the housing facility on the campus. It was noted that the area is currently a parking lot, which will be filled with the new facility.

Philip G. Stein, the University's vice provost for facilities management, said that the new garage would be built in phases. The first phase, estimated to cost $20 million, would be completed within the year.

Black problems discussed

This play, set amid the drug trade, was written by Professor Day-Ninaństewa, and produced by the University's Center for the Arts and Humanities. It was directed by Professor John E. Hirsch, who also acted as the director of the production.

The play focuses on the lives of three black women who work together in a drug den in order to support themselves. The play explores their relationships and the challenges they face as they try to survive in a world that is filled with violence and poverty.

The cast, which includes actors of all ages and backgrounds, was well-received by the audience.

South African judge talks on campus

South Africa Supreme Court Justice Michael Chaskel speaks yesterday to law professors and students.

"I think African politics should have been less complex," said Chaskel, who was recently appointed to the bench by Pres. F. gratis. "The fact that we've been through so many civil rights movements makes it that much more important for us to make more progress on the basis of rights and freedoms."

Chaskel, who has been a judge in the Cape Town High Court, spoke about the importance of human rights and the challenges faced by African and black communities.

"We have to be consistent with the law," Chaskel said. "We have to be consistent with the constitution and the law."

Chaskel also spoke about the need for African leaders to work together to achieve their goals.

"The leaders of South Africa and the African continent have a responsibility to work together to achieve our goals," Chaskel said. "We have to work together to achieve our goals."
Michigan snowball fights draw police with riot gear

Claims of police brutality and vandalism among students erupted in front of Michigan State University's administration buildings, as students' anger boiled over against a new policy banning alcohol at University-sponsored events.

Citing the event as unplanned, an unofficial tradition at the University of Michigan, a university spokesman said there was no official rule against snowball fighting.

"It is not clear whether the Michiganders were motivated by a desire to "play games," or whether they were∠ trying to "pmte a p o s i t i o n , " a s m a n y b e l i ev e , " the spokesman said.

The University Police issued a statement saying, "We believe anyone who can handle a snowball has the ability to handle a snowball because of the way they do business."

"Though it originally expected to attract some 200 students, the University of California — Los Angeles has been plagued by budget constraints, which have led to a drop in part-time students."

University officials said that although the University of California — Los Angeles is experiencing a "realistic" situation, they are not going to give up any of their community programs.

"We need in-state students to come to the University of California — Los Angeles," a spokesman said. "They don't know what the tickets will cost them."

TRUETEL, from page 1 in a united front for the University.

School of Arts and Sciences Vice Dean Ira Harkavy noted that he believes teaching through service is an important educational model that is gaining in popularity at the University. Harkavy said that numerous other colleges were teaching courses to learn about a University program or methodology by making a teaching institution the focal point of the community. "It is believed that Benjamin Franklin once remarked 'What good will it be to educate a young man if all he knows is that he is good at nothing?" He went on to say that he would have said what good we are doing today.

The committee expressed interest in a community service center which would allow the University to continue to decentralize its outreach programs while working in the many groups with the help of a "home base."
The Student Life Committee sat through nearly two hours of presentations by several student government groups.

Visit Penn for the University's spring 2002 season. Kim Morrison, who opened the morning, described student year counseling services as some of the most effective educational programs at the University.

"Peer-to-peer discussion is one of the most effective means of education," Morrison said, adding that it is "absolutely" a valuable means of developing talent while dealing with fellow students.

Where We Stood

A year ago at this time, the Gulf War was just beginning. We were all focused on the war, not knowing what the outcome of the war would be. At that time we wrote:

"Although the war is being tested in Iraq, we will have the hope of using our true abilities to help those in need, not to further the war, but to help those in need."

Looking back on it, maybe we should have remembered our own advice. We were naively optimistic on too many occasions this past year. But frankly, 1991 was a good year for cynicism and just about nothing else.

And looking at the skills and commitment of the community, particularly when watching me get more frustrated each day 15 to 20 minutes before the alarm clock goes off, it is clear the seven percent sales tax and going over the 1991 budget is victimized by rapid this book buying rush period.

Klein brings leadership, lots of leather to top post

"Matt looks like skin," said friend Colleen Ryan, 19, March, 1992. "Matt always looks a little dandy, and he always has a soft smile on his face." But Matt Schuchman, 20, a Wharton junior, is not a dandy or a dandy. He is a man of action, a man of many places, a man of many things.

Why did the Selman cross the 'Street'? It's a hairy question

By ANDREW LIBBY and DANIEL SEBREK

A wise man once said: "A wise man once said..."

Mall Selman never said that. He really doesn't need to. Selman is, however, 34th Street's tone-deaf bird. And as his first assistant and Editor-in-Chief, the spirited upstart has broken as evidence of that plotting the once feisty melodic line of John Denver.

Selman, the self-described 'self-anointed guru '92."

And so the self-described "self-appointed guru '92."

It's like he just sits around and talks to the J. Crew operators... I think it's a sexual thing.

M. Track takes on Brown, Yale

BY SCOTT LITMAN

The Penn men's indoor track team travels to Providence, Rhode Island this Sunday to challenge the Brown and Yale hopefuls. As they travel down the road to Providence, Rhode Island, Sports writer Scott Litman pondered the words of one athlete: "If you base this year's team on previous performances, I guess you would be the favorite." And with that, the Quakers are off to the races.

So if you've been wondering what the team is working on, it's time to find out. The men's track team is in the process of gearing up for the upcoming Heps meet. At the track meet against Columbia, one of the biggest teams in the Ivy League this is a high quality team, and are considered one of the top teams in the Ivy League. The Quakers did not have the opportunity to go to the final meet in Boston, and will be missing three star performers: Eric Berntsen, who is one of the top sprinters in the Ivy League; Eric Westin, who is considered the top middle distance runner; and Eric Berntsen, who is considered one of the top distance runners. The meet will be held on Tuesday, February 11, 1992, at the Palestra. The meet will be held at 6:00 PM, and will be shown on cable television.

In their return to the track at last week's Heps meet, the Quakers did not have the opportunity to go to the final meet in Boston, and will be missing three star performers: Eric Berntsen, who is one of the top sprinters in the Ivy League; Eric Westin, who is considered one of the top middle distance runners; and Eric Berntsen, who is considered one of the top distance runners.
