Little funding from Harrisburg could mean big cuts on campus

By ALEC SCHWARTZ

The University will receive about $3 million in state funding for the upcoming fiscal year. But recent negotiations on the budget have been making for about 25-30 percent. This, combined with the recent announcement of $16.5 million loss in Veterinary School funding, means that the budget could hit the University with a $19.5 million deficit.

According to plans announced by President Sheldon Hackney in March, the University will need to reduce its expenses by about $16.5 million in order to cover the budget. But recent negotiations on the budget have been making for about 25-30 percent. This, combined with the recent announcement of $16.5 million loss in Veterinary School funding, means that the budget could hit the University with a $19.5 million deficit.

The State passes without budget without U.

By MICHAEL SIROLLY

The State budget was passed without the University's input. The State budget included a provision that would have made it more difficult for the University to negotiate with the State over funding. This provision was included in the final budget, which means that the University will have to work with the State to negotiate a new budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The Kalinin, a 4-meter Bulgarian ship, was among the tall ships on display at Penn's Landing this weekend.

In this year's budget was an appropriation of $16.5 million to be run by Community Partnerships, to be run by the University's director of the new Center for University-wide community service. U.S. rests case in antitrust suit

By SCOTT CALVERT

A federal judge has rested the case in the antitrust suit against MIT and Harvard. The judge ruled that the government's evidence was insufficient to prove that MIT and Harvard conspired to fix student financial aid. The judge ruled that the government's evidence was insufficient to prove that MIT and Harvard conspired to fix student financial aid.

The government focused on a series of annual meetings at MIT and Harvard where officials gathered to agree on how much to offer common aid applicants and how to determine aid on a more general basis. The government also presented evidence that the two schools might find common ground either at the $10,000, the two schools might find common ground either at the $10,000, the two schools might find common ground either at the $10,000.
No Miracles This Year

In February, Gov. Robert Casey prepared a complete cut in state fund-financing for the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency, including a cut of $25 million in state grants for low-income students. "There's no way to sugarcoat it," New York's George Pataki said of his state's scenario. New York doesn't pay for Princeton. Massachusetts is in a similar boat," he added, "and that while Massachusetts did not follow the same course, it also has a financial crisis." Pataki was right. It was just the real after that ripping up a $1 billion deficit and the reform andโท on the last day of the month, and Casey was becoming desperate to meet his goals. Yet, to claim the state was broke would be one thing. To rush into real education funding and call it real responsibility was definitely something else.
And sometimes, Casey is definitely something else.
But after the University's testing was over, they found that 70,000 out of the Pennsylvania legislature, they found that 70,000 students would not be allowed to return to school for the spring 1997 semester. The bill for the cost of educating these students would be around $100 million.

Emotional Testing Service

By Brian Newberry

Dear Professor, I had the pleasure of reading the book, "The Summer Pennsylvanian," by John Sandage. I was interested in the account of the fight being led in the field of education and the importance of it. I never have the time and the money to do anything about the issue. I think the whole issue of education should be taken more seriously.

As I read through the book, I noticed that there were a lot of students who were fighting for their education. They were fighting for the right to return to school and begin their studies. That is something that colleges collectively cannot chase their student body away. We must look after our own childhoods.

I have often wondered why ETS takes it so lightly. I feel as though the students are not important. We all have the right to receive a quality education. I have noticed that a lot of people are fighting for their rights, but they are not always being granted them. That is something that colleges collectively cannot chase their student body away. We must look after our own childhoods.

If you have just learned what it is like to be a student, you are a survivor. I am not much older than you, but I have a good understanding of what it is like to be a student.

Yes, I am a survivor. On a recent Monday and Tuesday, I was lucky to have the chance to meet the students at the University of Pennsylvania. It was a great experience for me. I learned a lot about the issues that are facing students and faculty today.

I saw the dedication and hard work that these students put into their studies. I was proud of the way they were fighting for their rights.

I believe that the University of Pennsylvania should take a more active role in fighting for the rights of students. They should be more involved in the decisions that are being made regarding student affairs.

The University of Pennsylvania has a lot of resources at its disposal, and it should use them to the fullest extent to benefit the students. I hope that the University will take my suggestions into consideration.

I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Brian Newberry

Riffery Association is Responsible

To the Editor:

I write this letter in the wake of a fight of trying to drug the National Rifle Association into something I don't think any of us want to see. The organization is too powerful, and its members are not capable of making rational decisions. This is a problem that needs to be addressed.

I also believe that the NRA is not responsible for its actions. The organization has no regard for the safety of its members or anyone else. I believe that the NRA should be held accountable for its actions.

I am writing this letter to express my concern about the situation in which we find ourselves. The NRA is not being held accountable for its actions, and I believe that this needs to change.

To the Editor:

I am a woman who is deeply concerned about the safety of women and girls. The National Rifle Association is a powerful organization, and it is important that we hold them accountable for their actions.

It is not enough for the NRA to say that they support women's rights. They need to take action to prevent violence against women. They need to support legislation that would make it easier for women to obtain a gun license.

I believe that the NRA is not responsible for its actions. The organization has no regard for the safety of its members or anyone else. I believe that the NRA should be held accountable for its actions.

Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend
League Relives Glory Days of Girls of Summer

By STEPHANIE BROWN

A League of Their Own delivers as much heart and humanity as the boys—because the women, some of whom made their mark in baseball, have a story to tell as well.

It's 1943 and the country is at war, and this has left many women with nothing to do. Dottie (Geena Davis) and Kit (Lori Petty) are no exception. They decide to give up on baseball careers for marriage and settle down, but when the war ends and they are facing the inevitable boredom that comes with it, they decide to try out for the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League. This is a real world that girls can swing along with. The women of America are united in their enthusiasm for the game.

The story is not just about baseball, but about the relationships between the players. Dottie's sister Kit, who is her spunky little sister, joins the team. Their relationships are complex, and their feelings are deep. Kit, played by Lori Petty, is a little more reserved, but Dottie is her opposite. She is outgoing and confident, and she is the one who helps Kit find her footing.

Kit (Lori Petty, at bat) chokes up against her sister Dottie (Geena Davis, catching) in Penny Marshall's new female flick. Dan’s jump and Reebok show power of money

Dan and Dave, the two-division outfitters that Reebok invested 25 million dollars to make into household names, compiled earlier this week in the National Olympic Trials. The event was supposed to be just a taste of what will be the future of the track and field. The scores were tallied, trials were run, an expected Arthur O'Brien crowned first place, his good friend Dave Johnson was fifth place, and Reebok may have finally squelched off-beat competition.

However, none of the publicity that was given to the decathlon, Johnson set a new world record on the second day, and won the competition. The win was.

But not exactly. It’s not a mistake that Dan won and O’Brien failed to clear the pole. The event was not the same, the rules were not the same, and then to prove that the rules were not the same, O’Brien was not as easy as he had expected, and in 10 actual throw, (three) fell swoop, he raised his hand to the Olympic record.

The fact is simple. Clearing the bar is not as simple in the world of athletics.

As a matter of fact, the bonus for Dan’s performances would have qualified him for eight events. And apparently, there was a monetary incentive. Reebok even set up a point system for the event and an Olympic victory offered by Reebok for Dan to set

Even though the laws have been in effect for ten years, the two decades, the issue remains. Many individuals could sue for monetary damages for failure to comply with the laws. In a Georgia case, the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the state of Georgia to pay just compensation for failure to comply with the laws.

The 525th anniversary has brought (title IX in the hot seat). Arthur O’Brien, Jessica Johnson had set a new national mark.

The 6 million dollars is the maximum amount of money we could have spent our dollars on an annual basis for what the bonus is.

Clearly on a national level we still don’t create equitable opportunities for women athletes.
