The Dramatic Turning Point of the Vice Presidential Debates

By Brian Newberry

Ed helmet seems to be one of the most popular men in Philadelphia. Why? Is that because he represents the people, like a “Tommy”? Is it because he is a "pox" on the current generation? Or perhaps it is because he knows that the people are the ones who pay his salary? Whatever the reason, the people of Philadelphia seem to love Ed helmet. He has been involved in virtually every major issue that has come before this city in recent years, and his name is always the first to come to mind when people speak about the city’s problems and their potential solutions.

Gratified, I've acted him set forth some very reasonable ideas for solving the city’s problems and his opponents were less than impressed. But I think there was more in “Full House!”'s title. To put it bluntly, I think Ed helmet was a little too easy a target for some of the comments made about him during the debate.

I believe people were very excited by the debate. I think they were very excited by the debate. I think they were very excited by the debate. And that is why I am so glad that we have someone like Ed helmet to represent us. He is the one that we can trust when it comes to solving our problems.

I'm sure that there were some who believed that the debate was a failure. But I think that it was a success. I think that Ed helmet was very effective in making his case. I think that he did an excellent job of explaining his ideas and showing how they would benefit Philadelphia.

I think that Ed helmet's ideas are very important. I think that they are ideas that will benefit Philadelphia in the long run. And I think that we need someone like Ed helmet to work on these ideas. So I hope that he continues to do so, and I hope that he continues to fight for what is best for Philadelphia.

I think that Ed helmet has a bright future ahead of him. I think that he has a lot to offer our city. And I think that we are all very fortunate to have him as our mayor. He is the one that we can count on to make our city better.

Please join me in supporting Ed helmet. Let us all work together to make sure that he gets re-elected and that he continues to do what is best for Philadelphia.

OVERLAP from page 1

The federal government, however, envisaged it a form of protection, and a violation of existing law.

Only MIT pursued the case in full. The Ivy League schools, including the University, stepped meeting to avoid a lawsuit from the Justice Department.

U.S. District Judge Louis B. Bechtle is expected to announce a verdict in the antitrust case within weeks.

The outcome of the trial will likely determine Overlap's future.

A government win would probably mean easier negotiations with the Justice Department. But if the Justice Department resists of MIT prevails.

The agreements were designed so that a needy student admitted to more than one of the Overlap schools would receive roughly the same amount of aid from each school, letting students choose between them for academic or other reasons.

Now schools risk losing students because college offers more than one, a "significant new issue that Harvard's Miller said there 'is nothing irreversible we'd be forced to do if we didn't do it with these settlements, but we do it.'

Now that former Overlap mem-

all awards have begun to vary more than usual.

Plainclothes police officers arrested a man early Monday morning.

Police said they arrested the suspect in a car break-in and 7-Eleven robbery.

Police said the suspect, a white man with short hair, was driving a white Toyota Camry.

The defendant was arraigned yesterday in District Court. He faces charges of first-degree robbery and aggravated assault.

Police said they arrested the suspect at a Econo-Lodge in the 3700 block of S. W. Philadelphia Avenue.

Wissler advances to Double-A club

By NOAH HABEL

Summer Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

Remember how Brian Taylor, last year's top pick in the major league draft, received loads of national media attention and was highly coveted? It was his brother, Kyle—a 23rd-round selection by the Minnesota Twins— Kiev, the pitching staff for the entire month of July.

Last season, Kyle led the Double A Wisconsin League with a 4.75 ERA. This season, he has pitched 10 games with minor league Twins clubs. Wissler's last season pitching for Penn was in 1991. In that year he compiled a 4-6 record with a 4.75 earned run average. This season, he has pitched 10 games with minor league baseball teams.
