Minority leaders wary of suit deal

By JORDANA RUBIN and MARK McGINN

Minority leaders of the Student Congress have asked the University to reconsider a plan to allow PennCard use by student workers in the student union.

"I am extremely wary of this political and economic collusion. It appears that the University is trying to do a deal when politicians and heads of universities get together," said Black Student League President Martin Dias.

In the suit, a group of labor unions and black community leaders filed a class-action suit alleging that the University has engaged in a "suspicious" financial arrangement "to secure additional income for the University's bottom line.

"The defendants have created a scheme that is designed to exploit the University's students and workers," the suit states.

The suit claims that the use of PennCards by students and workers will "constitute a violation of the University's obligations to its students and workers, and is a breach of the fiduciary duty owed to them.

The case, filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, seeks unspecified damages for the plaintiffs.

UA to run voter registration drive

By ALISSA KAYE

The Undergraduate Assembly will organize a voter registration drive for students and community residents starting Monday, said Neil Giardino, UA president.

The UA — in conjunction with MTV's Rock the Vote — will register students and community members at the student center and other campus buildings.

"We want to increase voter turnout and encourage students to vote," Giardino said.

The drive will run until the election in November.

LCEF asks U. for PennCards

Board later rescinds request

By STEPHANIE DESMOND and JOSHUA GOLDBRINT

The Student Congress has voted to ask the University to provide PennCard access to student employees in the student union.

"We should be able to use our cards anywhere on campus," said Martin Dias, BSL president.

The request was made in response to a lawsuit filed by the University in January 2013 alleging that PennCard access could be used to launder money.

"I think it's a way to give students more control over their own finances," said Dias.

UA to organize voter registration drive

"Hopefully the voter registration drive, which is a coordinated effort, will really show that student groups care and that we can accomplish something if we work together," Kirsten Bartok, UA Voice Chairperson said.

UA Chairperson Jeff Lehman will try to sell more student groups' support for the registration drive.

Upstairs, in the Towne Library, renovations began in July and have nearly completed. Engineering Librarian Gretchen Steff said

"We have added a new study area and renovated some of the old space."

New tables, study carrels, lounge furniture and lights have made the library a more comfortable place to work, Steff said.

She added that students have been pleased with the Macintosh computer lab that opened in the library last spring.

Also, a $30,000 gift from Aravind Joshi, a computer and cognitive science professor, has "made a big difference in the collection in those areas," Steff said.

Special to the Inquirer

Students returning to campus this month may have noticed that The Philadelphia Inquirer has taken on a new look from when they left last May.

Editor Maxwell King and Mario Garcia, the Inquirer's design consultant, spoke to members of the Philadelphia chapter of the American Institute of Graphic Arts last night at the Harold Pratt Theater about these changes. The paper will maintain its "character and design" while being "straight forward and hard hitting," King said.

King, who became editor of the Inquirer in 1990, said that when a new editor takes over a newspaper it gets a dramatic new design - one which he said is frequently met with angry reactions from the readers. And King said that he was already happy with the small changes that began appearing in the paper a few weeks ago, and that he does not intend to make such radical departures as those made in the past.

King said he began working with Garcia in early 1991 to plan for the design changes so they would affect the content of the newspaper, Garcia, who works for the Portland, Me., office for Media Studios in Florida, and the changes are designed so they will work with the story structure.

Many of the changes are also being made to accommodate the wide capabilities of the Inquirer's new printing plant in Montgomery County. King said. Other changes include the addition of more regional sections for suburban Philadelphia areas to improve readership. King devoted much of his speech to a history of the design changes at the Inquirer since 1905 when it featured about 13 stories on the front page. King said the number was steadily reduced in an effort to "clean up the front page."

He supplemented the lecture with a slide show of two pages of the newspaper throughout the years.

King also said that there has been little reader reaction to the design changes - which is said to be exactly his intention.

And although circulation figures have remained flat, King added that he hopes that the overall design and editorial changes will lead to a 10 percent increase in circulation over the next two years.

After King spoke, Garcia stressed that one of the most important components in the new design was the color palette. He added that the Inquirer's pastel colors match the city of Philadelphia.

Garcia said that he determined the city's color palette by visiting local art galleries. Garcia said he chose to work on the Inquirer because of its reputation and found the job challenging.

"It's one of the greatest newspapers," Garcia said. "It was an interesting experience."

Playin' Poker on a Tightrope

It's a Monday night. As usual, there is nothing good on television, so my roommates and I decided to go watch a couple of classic movies. My roommate, who is a huge fan of noir films, suggested we watch "Double Indemnity." However, I was hesitant because I had heard that the movie was very slow and boring. But my roommate assured me that it was a classic and that I would enjoy it.

We settled in for a night of entertainment, but things didn't quite go as planned. My roommate kept getting distracted by his phone and wouldn't stop checking messages or answering texts. It was like he was playing poker on a tightrope, trying to concentrate on the movie while also trying to keep up with all the notifications on his phone.

The other movie we decided to watch was "Casablanca." This was a classic that I had been meaning to watch for a long time. We started off with high hopes, but the movie didn't quite live up to our expectations. The pacing was slow, and the dialogue didn't flow as smoothly as we had hoped.

Despite the setbacks, we managed to finish both movies and even had a good laugh at the end. It was a night of entertainment that we will never forget. Just like playing poker on a tightrope, we had to stay focused and keep our game strong to win.

"Far from making Penn students "take some responsibility for themselves," as one teacher told me, the new system begs people to take advantage of it. Escort exists for safety reasons, not as a taxi service for one person's convenience at the expense of others.

India opens stock market to foreigners

NEW DELHI, India — India opened up its stock markets to foreign investors yesterday as part of a series of steps announced this year to make the country more market-oriented.

Foreign investors will be able to trade in stock, government bonds and real estate in India's newly opened real estate market this year under a government announcement. The changes are also expected to be announced by the Finance Ministry.

The announcement, including plans and milestones, will be held up to 14 percent of a company's equity sold for foreign investors. It is not clear how much equity a company could set aside for overseas investors, but said they could buy up to a percentage of a company's total stock, the announcement said.

Syria rules out interim settlement

WASHINGTON — Syria's latest indication Monday that it would not settle for an interim peace agreement was made yesterday when it announced it would not agree to a peace agreement unless Israel withdraws from the land it won in the 1967 Middle East war.

“Peace cannot be an interim agreement unless the land is returned to its original owners,” Syria's Foreign Minister, Mr. Hafez al-Assad, said in an interview with The New York Times. “We are not interested in any peace that does not address the problem of Israel’s occupation of the Golan Heights.”

Syria's announcement follows the United Nations resolution, last week, that called for an end to the Israeli occupation of the Golan Heights. But Syria has never recognized Israel or its 1967 borders. The United Nations resolution did not address the issue of peace between the two countries.

“Thus it is necessary to address the Israeli demands for a total withdrawal from the Golan Heights,” Syria said.

Aid agencies in the region said they would be heartened by Syria's announcement, which would allow them to plan for peace and resume aid operations in the region.

“I am happy that we have an agreement with the Syrian government,” Mr. Schreiber said.

The announcement is likely to be welcomed by aid agencies in the region, who have been working in the region for years and who have been frustrated by the lack of progress in the region.

“Peace is possible only if the Israeli government agrees to withdraw from the Golan Heights,” Mr. Schreiber said. "We are not interested in any peace that does not address the problem of Israel’s occupation of the Golan Heights. Germ bank cuts interest rates to spur recovery

MUNICH, Germany — Germany cut key interest rates for the first time in five years yesterday as the German economy and the European Community's monetary policies remained in recession. The cut in the key rate to 1.75 percent was expected to lift the German economy and help spur a world economic recovery.

The cut was made at a meeting of the Bundesbank, the country's central bank, and would mean pressures on the U.S. economy and improve the prospects for French approval of a treaty for European political and monetary union in a referendum next month.

A great university.
A great newspaper.

And 6 Great ways to get involved.

In some ways, college is just like high school. You sit in class, listen, and take notes. At test time, you regurgitate the information you've memorized.

But wait. There's more to college life.
Want excitement? The opportunity to meet new people? The chance to learn by doing, not by watching?

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

The 'DP, the 108-year-old daily newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, is consistently rated one of the top ten college newspapers in the country by the Associated Collegiate Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Up to 34,000 people read the DP every day.

Students, faculty and administrators look to us as their main source of news and information about the University and West Philadelphia. Local businesses see us as the most cost-effective way to present their message to the lucrative Penn market.

Most importantly, the DP — a corporation independent of the University — is run and managed by students. Students just like you.

Every day, we write and edit the stories, shoot and develop the photographs, lay out and put together the news pages. Every day, we sell and design the advertisements, handle customer inquiries, and develop budgets and financial statements.

As a DP staff member, you'll get the opportunity to learn in the trenches, to apply what you've learned in the classroom to the real world. From reporting and writing to shooting photographs to selling advertisements to designing pages, you don't watch — you do.

And, in all of our departments, you'll begin doing from day one. All you need is enthusiasm, imagination, and drive — we'll teach you the rest.

REPORTING

In recent years, we've sent reporters to Pittsburgh for election night coverage of the Wolford-Thornburgh senatorial race, to New York City to cover the controversial trial of former Wharton student Christopher Clements, and to Washington to cover anti-war protests.

On campus, we cover everything from Penn spending federal research funds on flowers and detergent to students' prophylactic preferences. In the last few years, DP reporters have interviewed Michael Milken, Jerry Brown, Mario Cuomo, Arlen Specter, Harris Wofford, and dozens of other national and local celebrities. Overall, we generate more original stories than any other college newspaper in the country.

Our sportswriters cover 25 intercollegiate sports, and travel to venues all over the country, including basketball games in Tennessee and Louisiana. Sportswriters also follow the rise of Penn graduates in various professional sports careers, and onto teams such as the Kansas City Chiefs and the Chicago Cubs.

The DP's editorial page sparks campus debate every day. And our award-winning weekly arts and entertainment magazine, 34th Street, offers readers its own distinctive spin on life, death, feature stories on the city, and reviews of movies, records, theaters and books.

Many of our writers had never written for a newspaper before they came to the DP. Now they interview everyone from mayors to governors to University administrators to homeless people to rock singers.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Staff members have photographed famous figures ranging from President George Bush to the president of Turkey to homeless people on the streets of Philadelphia.

If you are looking for action shots, our photographers have covered the 1991 Philadelphia mayoral elections and Gulf War demonstrations in downtown D. C. Our sports photography covers all the big: shooting football, basketball, lacrosse etc. We'll help you develop the skills needed to shoot, develop and print your photographs. Whether you are interested in photography as an art or as a journalistic skill, the DP has what you are looking for. So for images that last... come join DP photo.

ART

DP artists work nightly with editors on special page designs, graphics, and illustrations. Now you can have your drawings published instead of just showing them to your friends.

Our art staff utilizes the latest state-of-the-art equipment — such as Macintosh computers, laser printers, and electronic scanners — to get the job done.

And if you're interested in entering the advertising or graphic design fields, the DP is the best place to learn.

SALES/MARKETING

After undergoing an in-depth training program, DP sales representatives hit the streets running. Their clients are a wide-ranging group, from the owner of the local drugstore to the advertising director of Welter's Stadium. But whether the client has $100 or $10,000 to spend on advertising, our salespeople help the customer produce the most effective ad campaign for the money. Businesses depend on us to help them succeed in the competitive marketplace.

And DP representatives receive generous rewards for their hours spent with clients: with commissions and bonuses, most earn several hundred dollars per month.

Our marketing department brainstorm for new ways to promote the paper to attract readers and advertisers. To increase community awareness, staffers conduct market research, design promotional materials, write advertising copy and cultivate new clients.

CREDIT/FINANCE

How does $800,000 sound?

The DP is a big business — our advertising revenues top the three-quarters of a million dollars mark each year. You can study the theory of finance at Wharton, but the DP gives you an ideal business laboratory — and the money is real. Finance and credit staff members control the funds by preparing budgets and financial statements and by handling customer service, billing and collections. Few other activities on campus offer as much independence and responsibility.

AD DESIGN & PRODUCTION

Last year, a team of DP artists won first place in a national college newspaper contest for design of a promotional advertising campaign, and several other ads also won awards. More importantly, they helped local merchants increase their business.

Every day, creative services artists and designers work with the sales and marketing staffs to produce promotional materials and create exciting ads for clients.

Our production department provides the perfect outlet for your creative skills and imagination. Staffers translate scrawled layouts and text into finished ads, from design to typesetting to assembly in each day's paper.

Penn lands V'bilt transfer Maloney

Penn men's basketball coach Fran Dunphy confirmed yesterday that Matt Maloney, who played at Vanderbilt two years ago in his freshman season, will be transferring to Pennsylvania from the Big Ten Conference school that received an at-large bid to the NCAA Tournament on Saturday. Although the victory was expected, Penn coach Charlie Lahey was pleased with her team's performance.

"We won — and we did it with a defense.

Maloney is a favorite to crack the starting lineup for the Quakers at point guard, where a huge void has been left by the departure of former Ivy League Rookie of the Year Wil McCarthy, who transferred to academic reasons.

According to Dunphy, Maloney, who visited Penn with Dunphy, turned down a number of scholarship offers before deciding to transfer for a second time, this time to Pennsylvania.

"Maloney chose Penn because of the attrition of the education, the high quality of our program and an opportunity to play in Philadelphia — he lives right across the bridge in Haddonfield (N.J.)," Dunphy said.

Maloney has three years of eligibility left at Penn.

Penn's assistant coach Mike Martorella said Maloney is "a young man who can right away plug into the team and be a valuable player."

Maloney was a starter for the Commodores in their NCAA Championship game in the Southeast Conference, one of the most competitive conferences in college basketball. At Vanderbilt in 1990-91, Maloney saw significant playing time at point guard and at shooting guard. He averaged 13.2 and 13.5 points in his junior and senior seasons, respectively.

Penn's defense has been formidable this season, giving up a total of 1,000 points in 27 games.

Maloney played in 38 of 40 games last season, averaged 13.5 points, and started in 25 of those contests. He led the team in three-pointers with 41, and was second in free-throw percentage at 87.4. The Commodores outscored their opponents by an average 12 points per game.

The Quakers will try to advance as far as possible in history in their quest to keep their opponents from being "on the other side of the ball." They've had to call upon their defense in each game they have played.

Hockey takes on Rams

The Penn field hockey team leaves today for the University of Richmond for the opening of the Slim Asian Flight Tournament at the University of Richmond. The game will be at 2:30 p.m.

The Quakers opened the season yesterday with a 2-1 victory over the University of Vermont. The victory came behind a solid defensive effort and several scoring opportunities.

The Quakers scored in the first 10 minutes of the game and held on to their lead for the rest of the game. The victory was the first for the Quakers in the season, and it was a major milestone for the program.

"We're very excited about this win," said head coach Jerry Hathaway. "We've been working hard all year, and we're finally starting to see the results of our efforts."

The Quakers played well against the Rams, and they were able to keep the score within range throughout the game. The Rams were unable to score against the Quakers, and they were forced to rely on their defense to keep the game close.

"I think we did a good job of limiting their scoring opportunities," said Hathaway. "We have a solid defense, and we were able to hold our own against a strong team."

The Quakers will try to continue their winning streak against the Rams and look for another victory in their next game.

Penn's defense has been solid all season, and they have been able to keep the score close in most games.

"We have a lot of confidence in our defense," said Hathaway. "We've been working hard all year, and we're finally starting to see the results of our efforts."
"My Mom, she thinks all I ever do is go through 'phases.' ‘You changed your major again? Now it’s Ethnic Dance Forms? When are you going to come to your senses and pick something sensible?’ (Sigh) Well, I guess it’s just another phase.’ So I told her, ‘Give me a break Ma. I mean I kept the same phone company all four years... She was impressed.’

W. Soccer opens with win

BY JASON GORENCE
Daily Pennsylvania Student Wire
As Penn women’s soccer found out on Sunday, history does indeed repeat itself.

For the second straight year, the Quakers opened their season with a 3-1 victory over American University.

With the game de facto locked at 1-1 after 90 minutes, the Quakers scored twice in the final minutes to claim the victory.

The first goal came off of a cross from outside the box by senior co-captain Liz Rizen. The ball deflected off of the American goalie and into the goal. The second goal came off of a pass from senior captain Ail Leary, who was able to take advantage of a breakdown in the American defense.

"Liz played an excellent game," said Quaker coach Suzcttc Wolf. "She was a constant threat and contributed both offensively and defensively.

"It was a good win for us and it's a good start to the season." Wolf said.

The Quakers are now 1-0 on the season and look to continue their strong play in future matches.

Not so, it's more of an aggressive defense for Penn compared to what they're used to. We want them to be under pressure at all times. It's our job to make them work for it. It turns them into little "niques.

Perhaps the biggest concern left to the team is their lack of experience. The Quakers boast a winning record and have the potential to be a force in the Ivy League.

The team will have to play a lot better to win their next two matches against a very big and powerful offense.

"We really need to improve our defensive play," Wolf said. "We have to be able to hold up the ball at the back and use our passing game.

"We'll be able to hold up the ball and keep the game within reach." Freshman goalkeeper Becca Gaspari said.
