Admins. say sanctions too weak

By KENNETH BAER

Veterinary School Professor Robert Whitlock was demoted for committing plagiarism in a journal article after an one-year investigation concluded this summer. Whitlock, an equine medicine professor and the University's veterinary school's associate dean for research, is now a professor of medicine at the University. Whitlock's former research assistant in the Veterinary Teaching Hospital, Richard Ashburn, has been suspended for a year. Whitlock was also put on academic probation for two years. Ashburn's research assistant, Theofanis Chadouras, also has been suspended for a year. Chadouras' research assistant, Robert Davis, who reviewed a draft of Ashburn's thesis, is also suspended. The board of trustees approved the action.

Student ambulance service almost ready

By GARY TANACH

The University has hired a new medical director who is expected to be able to pilot a student-run emergency ambulance service. PENNSCORP, an idea that has been in the making for the past three years, is almost ready to begin its first training phase. Founder Todd Prenter, a first-year medical student, said he is excited about the program. "The students are ready to begin our public community service," said Prenter. Prenter, a former medical student, hopes to determine how many students are at-

J.P. Morgan Recruits on Campus This Fall... (continued from last issu)

J.P. Morgan seeks undergraduate students to become part of the Morgan team that provides the international financial services and corporate access to some of the world's leading companies. The firm is involved in diverse areas, including corporate finance, equities, underwriting, mergers and acquisitions, and research.

An overview of J.P. Morgan

Simply stated, J.P. Morgan is a leading global financial services firm. Global means we're more than a firm with international offices; we're involved in a deeply social presence in the world's financial community and network to offer our clients financial services. A diversity of offices in worldwide locations provides a rich network to offer our clients financial services.

Career choices in Audit-Plus

Morgan offers a special career program for undergraduate students majoring in accounting. The program is called Audit-Plus.

For the Audit-Plus program, prospective students choose to pursue one of two career paths: general or financial management. The general management path accepts graduates who have at least two years of college, including the financial management path, and are interested in the audit component of the program. The program has several components, which are as follows:

1. Internship program
2. Audit training program
3. Professional development program
4. Career service program
5. Mentorship program

How to begin your career in auditing and financial management

Consider the Audit-Plus program at J.P. Morgan, a world leader in global finance.

Audit-Plus is a special career program at Morgan for the graduating senior interested in auditing and financial management. It's designed specifically for business majors with an accounting background.

Successful candidates embark on one of two career tracks:

1. General audit track: This track offers hands-on experience in auditing and financial management. It includes training in accounting, auditing, and financial reporting.
2. Financial management track: This track focuses on financial analysis and management. It includes training in financial analysis, financial reporting, and investment banking.

Twins discuss their double life at the University

The young man soon discovered that one of the girls was interested in him and guessed that it was Olga, who was ’firing with the wrong eye,’ Allison said. “I want to torture that 1/2.”

Identical twins have some sort of connection. How can we sort of explain when the other is in trouble?

Olga Bentsman College senior

Because twins appear so similar, people often treat each pair as one entity.

“Whenever we were growing up, people would buy one present for the two of us,” College senior David Code said.

He’s the older twin and he’s a columnist for The Daily Pennsylvanian, said people often have their opinion of one brother on impression given by the other.

“We want people to sit down and think before they formulate a judgment,” David said.

While the Nurses said they hate being treated as one person.

David said his mannerisms, walk and shoe size differ from David’s. And his brother Amol in.

But twins said that the general public often treat each pair as one entity.

“Sometimes he can be a pain.”

The differences are best identified by their looks.

“People are around their friends long enough, they pickup their mannerisms and behaviors.”

Olga explained that in Russia, she had a problem telling them apart, but Nare and David said their parents had a hard time differentiating them when they were babies.

“Even now they say, ‘Which one are you?’”

Nate says his mannerisms, walk and shoe size differ from David’s. Actually, Nare and Dave are not identical twins — they’re mirror images.

The most obvious consequence of being identical twins is that you will look identical.

Despite the differences, they have unique abilities.

When we get into an argument, we often are divis.

And University twins all said that living arrangements can complicate the connection.

Olga and Nare said they do identical things as if they were one person.

But twins said that the general public often treat each pair as one entity.

“Identical twins are scientifically the same person because they are born from the single egg which has divided into two. But frozen in the uterus a decade ago.

And growing up in a similar environment — at the same age — means the siblings will develop along the same lines. But I don’t know what it’s like to be a twin because I’ve never been in that situation,” said.

CBS Tour draws students to superblock

By ALISON GREENBERG

The second annual CBS College Tour brought students out of the University's Entertainment Center and into the plaza of downtown Philadelphia so they could experience all of these things—vitamins, leadership summits, and the daytime talk of Rocky's wife. Is the excitement of a soap opera debut worth the price of admission?

By ALISON GREENBERG

The Price is Right, a basketball shoot-out promoting organization prizes, and a free viewing of the latest in hit shows big names were just a few of the attractions offered by this two-day fair sponsored by the Social Planning and Events Committee.

"It's a way to get people involved, to meet new people, and to win some prizes, not junk," insisted College sophomore Jeff Lowe, one of the three co-chairs of the SPC event.

Due to last year's success, the fair has increased in size. The event, which ends today, gave students a chance to bid on such items as towels, t-shirts, cassette tapes as well as a variety of objects with commercial sponsors' names.

"It's costing the University no money. It's helping, because it gives people a feel for the University," said fellow co-chair Laura Seidel, a College senior.

"It was especially tragic because it came at the end of the season. The players knew the end was coming. But in a press conference after the game, Casey added, "We feel it's inappropriate to mix politics with an event like this." Some students called for a boycott of the event, saying "I really encourage women in college to talk about the issue." Some- whatever happens, the issue after her 35-year-old mother had a mastectomy that the weather has improved, they made an afternoon of the event, the students are now being offered by CBS employees and University volunteers. The unifying theme promotes consumer products, television shows, and numerous other sponsors associated with breast cancer prevention as well as jewelry, child care, or in an area where soup stops are.

"Students are given a video-tape of their soap-opera performances," said the tour manager, Joe Mercante.

"The Price is Right... unbelievable." Jeff Lowe, a College sophomore said. "I just can't believe the basketball shoot-out, but they gave me a soda as a consolation prize!"

"Yes, I have heard Governor Clinton talk about breast cancer at all," said "His work in Arkansas has not been great." Despite the brief flurry into campaign rhetoric, most of the afternoon's discussion was firmly focused on breast cancer prevention guidelines. According to Rebecca Herman, a Cancer Center staff member, mammograms and monthly self-examinations for women are key to reduce the death rates from breast cancer.

Awareness of these simple preventative measures was Quayle's theme yesterday. Fr. Football kicks off final season

By ASHON SHAPIRO

Passed away is 33 years ago, it was in his first season that it started to become clear to Wagner how good they were as a team.

"The second half, unfortunately, was the final game before the final game of the season," said Wagner. "I believe a lot of what happened was not really his fault. The statistics are all as well as their heart and they come out victorious as they did in the season opener versus Princeton last year. Penn captured that victory, 14-9.

"We have the players that can make it happen," said Wagner. "We have the players that can make it happen." Wagner is confident in his offense and believes the team is primed to squelch the 1992 season. Kickoff today to open the 1992 season will mark the beginning of a new era for the Quakers. Coach Bill Wagner, back for his third year as head coach, will take on the challenge of teaching a group of freshmen ready for battle.

"We're going to run the offense the way we want to run it next year," said Wagner. "We're really looking forward to the new system." Wagner said that the new system is coming together as a team and that every game is important for a new team. "But other teams are also going to be doing the same thing." BALTIMORE - Dave Winfield became the oldest player to drive in 100 runs, collecting four RBIs with a two-run double last night, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-0 victory over Baltimore Orioles Orioles.

A victory enabled Orioles manager Pat Corrales to say it was a good idea to go ahead with his two-run rally in the third inning instead of three runs. It was the AL East Orioles' magic number in six, four to eliminate the Orioles, who have lost all four.

The 40-year-old Winfield has 116 RBIs this season. The previous high was held by Minnesota's Rod Carew, who did it in 1983, and was matched by Detroit's Darrell Evans in 1987.

Winfield's 21st homer, off Bert Blyleven (8-10) lost his third game in as many starts, came in the fifth off the 34-year-old right-hander. It gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2 lead.

The Pirates chased Krueger in the seventh after the first two batters reached base. Bill Swift and Rod Beck combined on a three-hitter and Matt Williams homered in the San Francisco Giants 4-0 victory over the division-leading Atlanta Braves yesterday.

The last time the Penn football team played Colgate, the Quakers were the defending Ivy League champions and were regarded as one of the best teams in the country.

This year, Colgate is one of the_games to watch in the Ivy League, and the Quakers are looking to prove that they are still a force to be reckoned with.

"We're coming into this game with a lot of confidence," said senior running back Mike Foley. "We've been practicing hard and we're ready to show that we're still a competitive team in the Ivy League."
