An in-depth look at issues affecting the University community

By DANIEL GINGISS
The Student Planning and Events Committee held an introductory meeting earlier this month for students interested in planning the annual Spring Fling extravaganza.

Committee members said they wanted to attract 75 "good" people to help them choose bands, games and activities for the weekend-long party in April.

"That's a lot," one member said. "But I think we can do it.

"We didn't do as well as we could have," said one member. "But we're going to try again.

SPEC is trying again last week, and drew 10 people this time, still for short of the number the organization needed.

And SPEC is not alone.

While most student leaders are not vocal about the dwindling support in their organizations, many agree that the number of students willing to spend a significant portion of their time in a certain activity has diminished.

"From my experience, students are not interested in participating in student activities," said one member. "They don't want to do it.

"We try to advertise the event, but not many people show up.

"We're trying to be more innovative," said another member. "But it's hard to get people interested in our events.

"We need to think of new ways to attract people," said one member. "But it's not easy.

In the past month alone, several other organizations have suffered because of a lack of student interest and participation in events or in the organization itself.

"Last month, the Undergraduate Council (UC) held its annual elections for next year," said one member. "But only a few people showed up.

"We're trying to be more innovative," said another member. "But it's hard to get people interested in our events.

"We need to think of new ways to attract people," said one member. "But it's not easy.

Another reason for the low attendance may be that students are willing to participate in activities and have a significant time commitment.

According to student leaders, organizations often face the problem of attracting students to meetings and rallies, but they do have trouble finding students who are willing to devote more time.

"A lot of time people tend to think, 'If I don't do it, someone else will,'" said one member. "But it's hard to get people interested in our events.

Vice Provost airs dismay about bid night

READ from page 4 has been heavily involved in awareness programs, asking that he was "the percent certain" that opportunism in the Greek system would not exhibit similar behavior.

Despite his objections, Morrisson said that he would not take any action towards the IFC.

"It's an educational process, partly, and the system itself has to expand and take some leadership in that process," she said. "There is leadership within those houses that presumably should be working with new members."

"I think that an educational process takes time," she added. "I hope it is enough. If it is not, I think that would be a very sad statement and would only add to my disappointment."

But Piggee said that these programs may not be enough to prevent a repeat of the bid night behavior, especially because the freshmen are often unfamiliar members of the system.

And she said that Greek leaders who were present bear some of the responsibility for the behavior because they should have done more to stop the whistling and hooting.

"I think that they at least had a responsibility to do something, should have taken the opportunity," she said. "From our point of view, we would expect them to do something."

Blatant Bias

To the Editor:

I was encouraged to read the Daily Pennsylvanian's article on the murder of Lucy Hackney, on the page 10 of the October 26 issue, and was so thankful that the author took the time to recognize the enormity of the loss of the life of Lucy Hackney. It is, however, a few headlines however, a few headlines have been written.

I am not a journalist, we don't assume that I know anything about journalism. However, I believe that there is a certain level of objectivity that must be maintained a new way to receive and express new ideas. Therefore, I would like to make some specific recommendations to people who are involved in the Daily Pennsylvanian's editorial board.

Caught in the Act

When Daily Pennsylvania columnist Marga Shea found she couldn't unlock her bike from the rack it was attached to, she decided to "strip" the bicycle before it was stripped from her.

She removed the wheels and other parts from the frame securely attached to the bike rack. "It was a three-layer cake," she said. "The bottom layer was the bike with its seat attached to the bike rack. The top layer was the bike seat and the middle layer was the frame of the bike." As she walked her bike home with her assisted bike parts, "Hey, nice haul!" one remarked.

Marga's evidently worried about being mistaken for a bike thief, got defensive.

"No, these are mines," she insisted. "I'm one of the teenagers. "Yeah, that's what we always say."

In fact, I believe everyone is secret to get everyone else.

But, thanks to paranoia, we have increased the public awareness of other's subversive actions.

We can stop them in time.

By Mark Frederick

A chair on the Undergraduate Admissions and Security Committee, I have been working closely with the University Police Department to handle the bike crisis as it affects Penn. They have been very successful in many of their endeavors, and the University Police is currently in charge of the bike thefts.

Today recently awarded Penn's highest level of security to prevent and for rape crisis response.

I am not the only one who has noticed the University Police has been making more arrests and patrols are being increased in light of the thefts, the Undergraduate Athletics Department and University Police has been coordinating its bike registration drive to provide a more effective way to combat bike thefts. (From the Daily Pennsylvanian, 10/23/92)

According to the November 3 issue of the Daily Pennsylvanian, the University Police has been making more arrests and patrols are being increased in light of the thefts, the Undergraduate Athletics Department and University Police has been coordinating its bike registration drive to provide a more effective way to combat bike thefts.

Spring Fling coordinators hold second meeting

Anapolsky, Matt Jacobson and Terry Horstmann. who is also in Wharton and the University's Assistant Director of Recreation, spoke at last night's meeting after only holding their first meeting last week.

Assistant Director of Student Life Programs Bob Schoenberg said he agrees with Anapolsky and said there is an enormous difference between high school and college participation.

"I just find it hard to believe that some people can't choose to be involved in any one activity and devote more time to it."

Anapolsky added that people may not be participating because they do not have enough time to devote to something.

"The intramural activities ultimately might be studying hard and practicing, which might not leave much time for volunteer work or involvement in student organizations.

Police authorize prison improvements

Jerusalem — Police Minister Moshe Shahal yesterday authorized some improved prison conditions for Palestinian security prisoners who staged a hunger strike last month, a ministry spokesman said.

The more than two-week strike for better conditions led to violent clashes between Arabs demonstrating solidarity with the prisoners and Israeli troops throughout the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in October.

Ministry spokesman Tsvi Paul-Cohen said the list of conditions approved includes allowing prisons to visit children under the age of 16 without a permit and allowing those over 16 to hold impor-

There are two kinds of heart attack victims.

The quick and the dead.

A heart attack doesn't have to be pain. Getting in a hospital quickly can make the difference between life and death. The quicker you get there, the more likely you are to survive.

1. There are three symptoms. They are:

- the quickness of pain (in the chest, and sometimes in the shoulders, neck, jaw, arms or back);

- the quality of pain (whether it's squeezing or aching); and

- whether you feel these symptoms daily (it's usually worse

after the age of 55, and May is Heart Health Month).

If you know what symptoms to look for, you can help prevent heart disease. We call it: A Heart Attack;

Football assures itself of winning season with 21-19 win

Harvard drove the length of the field...
Eagles can't hold on to ball, fall 27-24

Patriots beat Colts in OT for first win; Steelers, rally, 17-14

MILWAUKEE - Chris Jacke kicked a 43-yard field goal with just 1:27 left in overtime to give the Green Bay Packers a 27-24 victory yesterday.

The Packers took a 21-10 lead, rallying from a 27-3 deficit, with two fourth-quarter touchdowns as Randall Cunningham took advantage of three interceptions of John Fassel's fourth.

Two runs by Jon Vaughn and a 24-yard pass from Zolak to Vaughn in the second quarter got the Patriots off to a fast start. The Packers' offense then went into high gear in the second half. They scored 10 unanswered points to take the lead.

The Packers took a 17-10 lead with 12:50 left in the game, but couldn't hold on to the ball. The Packers' lead was cut to 17-14 with 9:40 left in the game on a 3-yard pass from Zolak to Vaughn.

The Patriots' defense then took over, holding the Packers to a field goal and a punt.

The Packers' offense was limited to 17 points, while the Patriots scored 14 points. The Packers' defense limited the Patriots to 17 points, while the Patriots scored 14 points.

Ground game olive without Rush

Junior receiver Bill Cobb tries to elude Harvard defender after reception. The Quakers won, 21-19, to guarantee a winning season.

On the Sidelines

With Rush out, it was up to sophomore Terrance Stokes and senior tailback Jason Trice to carry the load. While Stokes has been an integral part of the Quaker offense all season, Trice is expected to be the featured back after Sonne's interception.

Stokes was acrobatic with several of his shorts. One moment he draws the baseline, altered his sled is replaced by center Andy Baratta, and came up empty. Later in the game he came up with a better move as he went up for a shot, hugging in the air through the lane and picking up the basket and the foul. While many other players were controlled, Trice was a presence on the court. While Sonne's interception was a big one, it was a turnover.

With two minutes and two seconds to go in the game, the Red and Blue Game showed that the Quakers have a lot of weapons in their arsenal. They are the only ones to miss scoring opportunities.

There were some good things in the game and some bad things. There is a lot of work that needs to be done by December 1.

Quakers hold on – barely

By JONATHAN MAYO

After leaving a heartbreaker to Princeton, the Quaker ball team was looking to Saturday's game against Yale as an opportunity to bounce back with a winning record. At least it got the victory right.

The Quakers were anything but pretty at Franklin Field on Saturday afternoon. Coach Al Suggs managed to escape with a 21-19 win over Harvard (2-3, 1-0 Ivy League), 73-7.
