I wondered if I was going to die

Now recovering, shooting victim recalls Monday night's incident

By CHARLES ORNSTEIN

A bullet came within a centimeter of ending John Saito's life. As The Temple University junior waited for a Tuesday morning train at the SEPTA station at 36th and Sansom streets, he was shot in the neck and leg by two youths.

Saito said Friday night from his hospital bed in the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania that he feels lucky to be alive after the shooting.

"Fortunately, I wasn't a statistic," Saito said. "On Monday, it was me who was shot and the action is taken, other people will be hit," Saito said. "People are totally ignorant of the dangers." He decided to take the Green Line subway-train trip for the return trip to Temple.

"I took all the precautions I thought I could," Saito said, describing what he did before entering the subway train. "I looked around me and made sure no one was following me." Saito was at the University Monday night using an MCT course and studying at the Biomedical Library. He decided to take the Green Line subway-train trip for the return trip to Temple.

He predicts that most of the males who had allegedly beaten a South Asian doctor senseless five years ago in South Philadelphia also will be able to buy copies of the software "at a reasonable price" by next year, he said. "Almost everybody at the University [of Pennsylvania]" has bought the software. "The idea is to sell to everyone," he said. "If this idea works, we want to sell to everyone." Saito was at the University Monday night using an MCT course and studying at the Biomedical Library. He decided to take the Green Line subway-train trip for the return trip to Temple.

He also said that a new "Introduction to Calculus" class, Math 130, must teach to students in the case of Saito who was at the University Monday night using an MCT course and studying at the Biomedical Library. He decided to take the Green Line subway-train trip for the return trip to Temple. "Fortunately, I wasn't a statistic," Saito said. Hackney thought the ROTC debate was settled.

But Clinton could leave Hackney with a tough political decision after all.

Sheldon Hackney, President

He could ignore the recommendations since Council is an advisory body that cannot control University policy, but the political costs for Hackney could be huge. Hackney would have to ignore the recommendations of a large group of University faculty, staff, and students. The recommendations could also be used against Hackney if he is not acting quickly.

The policy's discriminatory nature might be more conspicuous.

It was never a large problem.

Friend of Malcolm X discusses Islam in U.S.

By STEPHANIE PENA-SY

Former Nation of Islam minister and Malcolm X's friend and close confidante Muhammad addressed the history and potential dangers of Islam in the United States before nearly 40 students and several professors in the New College Forum at the University.

Muhammad, who grew up in the 1940s, called himself at that time a "black nationalist," adding the controversial moniker to his name "so that people would understand what I stood for." Muhammad, who was the first to introduce Malcolm X to the Nation of Islam, said that when he and Malcolm started working together, "they were just advertising for merchants." Muhammad said that he and Malcolm were "just advertising for merchants."

"We couldn't stop advertising for merchants because that's what we had to do," he said. "Do you know how much respect we had to have to be able to make a living in this society?" Muhammad added that, for him Malcolm X was "just advertising for merchants." Muhammad said that he and Malcolm were "just advertising for merchants."

Don't Abandon Ship

In less than a year, three of the University's top administrators have left West Philadelphia resulting in a leadership vacuum.

Last Friday, Senior Vice President for Finance Thomas Black Nahm, the University's top fundraiser, announced he was leaving to assume the presidency of Rensselaer College in Illinois.

And over the last week, there were rumors that President Michael Hackney was being considered to head the University — and the students — though he was hired by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

As I stroll down Locust Walk, Of the gossipers standing there.

I scurry home at eight o'clock, Laying on her futon,

For you looked frightened and alone.

As your fingers traced my spine,

And headed for your room.

So I ventured to safely walk you home,

And I overlooked the squalor.

And I told you that my workouts leave me sore

As your hands traced my spine, And headed for your room.

And I wrapped myself in rubber

And you filled yourself with

Our clothes we soon shed

On your bill from Peco

And caused me to leave you here.

A nine o'clock history seminar did await,

ThPn we fell into a tongue-twisting kiss.

Time is an enemy of true love, my dear,

Pleasure came to us both oh so easily.

As your voice said, "We can't stay together forever,"

I found your recently forgotten name.

But you really weren't jealous that she dated

Her boyfriend would call too late.

Greasy, grimy food we bought.

The repast done, the garbage canned

We exited the diner.

I found myself in love with you.

I told you that my workouts leave me sore

And I remembered the squalor.

As your fingers traced my spine, And headed for your room.

And I told you that my workouts leave me sore

As your fingers traced my spine, And headed for your room.

We weren't used to having a lead in the hospital for a cut on her head, and with a short-handed team it's hard to know what to do. We panicked. "It's almost like that. When we did get it we were evenly throughout the entire game, but on the uneven bars, where it's not much, but it adds up."

PARIS - The chief deputy mayor of Paris said he strangled in an apparent robbery and her body left in a park, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The death was not reported in Cairo newspapers and appeared to be unrelated to recent attacks on tourists blamed on Muslim fundamentalists. The terrorist, who was killed in a gun battle, wanted to create Egypt's lucrative tourism industry.

Germans and Poles protest prejudice BERLIN - Jeremy Glick of Germany and Piotr Plesz candles yesterday along at least eight sites on their nation's border in a protest against prejudice and violence.

At a border-crossing point at Hothenstein in western Germany, a few thousand people formed a chain of lights across the Oder River bridge, police said. The slogan of the border demonstrations was "One nation two states - and we are foreigners." It aimed to reduce prejudice in the area, which experienced violent destruction and loss of life in World War II.

In western Germany, police in the Rhine River city of Koblenz were investigating an arson attack on a Turkish-owned grocery store early yesterday. There were no arrests, said the police official. Similar attacks in Germany last year, in which 17 people died.

Quintuplets born ten weeks early ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The Saxton quintuplets were given names yesterday, a day after they were delivered by Caesarean section at a Rochester hospital. Maria Elizabeth, Bianca Diana, Philip William, Anneke Elizabeth and Lucas William were delivered to their parents.

A team of 35 doctors and nurses helped to deliver the babies. "There were no complications with the Caesarian section," said Dr. Robert R. Loring, a neonatologist. "The five babies are all in excellent condition and are expected to do very well."

The babies, who were born as yet, each weighed between 2.5 and 3 pounds. They breathed with the help of ventilators and will require intensive therapy for the next several days. "They're doing very well," Dr. Loring said. "They're going to be fine."

Doctors said it was unusual for prematurity babies to arrive on the same day because their lungs were not fully developed.

Clinton wants to cut committees WASHINGTON - Now every and then, a government needs a little advice, a little help, or some understanding of some tangled issues that could affect everyday Americans.

To one end of 1,146 panels and committees that exist simply to give guidance to Washington, like the National Board for the Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency, the President's Commission on Physical Fitness and Sports or the Advisory Committee on the American Indian and Alaska Native Population for the 1990 Census.

Some of the panels are high-profile, like the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, which is headed by movie star Arnold Schwarzenegger. Others have names that the public has no idea what they are or what they do. "The most recent could be the President's Commission on Prevention of the One-drink司机..."

"Even the smallest group has to report to the White House and has to report to Congress. And it's made up of volunteers. Some of these groups are made up of a few hundred people. But the biggest ones, they have as many as 2,000 people."

"Some members of advisory committees volunteer their services. Some others get a daily fee of $100 to $150."

Drunk driving laws becoming stricter MONTREAL, Que. — Many state lawmakers are pondering new sanctions in the latest round of legislative assaults on the drunken driver. The driving laws, enacted at a clip of about 150 a year between 1982 and 1990, are aimed to reduce the number of annual drunk driving fatalities. But the number of drivers who are stopped for drunk driving is increasing.

"There are some advisory committees that do some very important work," said Paul Light, professor of public affairs at the University of Minnesota's Humphrey Institute.

"I am not going to tell you that this package is going to eliminate alcohol-related fatalities." White House budget director Leon Panetta said on CBS's "Face the Nation." As part of a stepped-up anti-drug effort, the administration announced that Clinton would ask the nation from the Oval Office at 9 p.m. EST Monday. Officials said Clinton would speak for only 10 minutes and would not reveal any specifics of the package that he will unveil Wednesday in his State of the Union address.

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's chief speechwriter, told the American people, "We are all in this together. Everybody is going to be in this to the end of the game."

Mild scare, but halfway there

Penn pounds Columbia and slides by Cornell to stay perfect in Ivies

By ZACH COHEN

If Friday's game was a Pi-cam, then Saturday night was the building of Zeus.

Fortunately for the Penn men's basketball team, it was the latter — not the former — in the same place — the win remains.

By discussing Columbia on Friday night, the Quakers readied themself the following evening, 64-62, the Ivy League game of the weekend. Columbia is 7-0 in the league, and Cornell is 5-2.

Penn and Cornell both needed wins to remain at the top of the standings. Both teams entered the game with 5-1 records (12-6 overall), Penn slightly ahead in the Ivy League.

"I think we sent the message that we wanted," Penn coach Fran Dun-ph said. "And that we're going to play hard and give everybody as much as possible for whatever he got. I wanted to make him work as hard as we couldn't stop them," Columbia coach Bob Knight added. "Penn never played in this overtime. Columbia very nearly threatened. "I think we had the same intensity but we couldn't stop them," Columbia coach Bob Knight added. "Penn never played in this overtime. Columbia very nearly threatened.

The Quakers did indeed make the game a simple, fast-paced game with a ball and a sense of efficiency that evaded theオスマン team on speed. Layup after layup enabled the Quakers to build their lead to 33-21, 17-17 through the second half.

"We're just not getting that kind of ball and a key to the game all year," Dunphy said. "This is just an awfully good team. I think they understood that — that wasn't as patient as we can be, th

klm. "I don't know if we've done anything as well as we did tonight," Dunphy said. "This was the kind of game we've been waiting for all season long. It's not complicated". It's so simple. It's not something we couldn't stop them," Columbia coach Bob Knight added. "Penn never played in this overtime. Columbia very nearly threatened.

The Penn women's basketball team picked up its second Ivy win of the season with a 68-45 victory over Cornell on Saturday night.

Junior forward Barry Pierce got inside for two points. Pierce had 16 points in this weekend's sweep with a career-high 21 points on Saturday night in the 68-45 win over Cornell.

W. Hoops has gut-check win and close loss
