Yeakel speaks to U. alums

By RUTH TRIPPET

Former Democratic senatorial candidate Lyle Yeakel spoke about her recent campaign, and the so-called “Year of the Woman” in a speech yesterday at the Whitemarsh Club of Philadelphia.

Yeakel, who ran in the general election, praised the voters who turned out, particularly the women.

“I picked a formidable mountain to climb,” Yeakel said, referring to her unsuccessful bid to unseat two-term Incumbent Arlen Specter. The woman who won seats in the Senate lost her personal golf club.

Yeakel spoke about many of the problems she had to run in running for office. She talked about the attacks that were placed on the personal lives of the opponent, and her unsuccessful bid to unseat two-term Incumbent Arlen Specter. The woman who won seats in the Senate lost her personal golf club.

If God wanted man to fly, he would have given us wings.

This somewhat pessimistic doctrine rings all too true as we tread through the winter darkness, sucked down by mud, sleet and flooded sneakers, burdened with midterms, lack of sleep and global environmental disaster.

Still, there is no need to despair. Take a closer look at your fellow students and you will see that there are many ways of liberating yourself from gravity's pull to take off for an instant.

A good way of breaking the stress of monotonous everyday life is to take time out and furiously shake up your whole body. Different people do this in different ways. Some just find a solitary spot and jump up and down and scream for a few minutes.

Others squeeze together on a crowded dance floor and rave all night, jumping up and down to loud music until their bodies are exhausted and aching. The joy in this is that you are on the height of ever singing down again.

A whole youth culture — skateboarding — is based on the exhilarating joy of standing firmly on the ground. For some people, to 'stand in the place where you are' is just not exciting enough.

All sports are really just about tossing your body around in uncontrolled flapping of limbs, in a fruitless search for the secret formula that will enable us to fly, just like birds.

The cheerleaders are really just trying to fly even higher than the players they claim to root for, using raw muscle power in what seems to be attempts to fling each other into orbits around the Earth.

The most extreme people do not even rely on human muscle power to give them that excitement. They climb high towers and jump off with rubber bands around their ankles to maximize the joy of free falling. The ranks of the bungee jumpers are still growing.

If you do not find yourself in any of the above categories and find yourself tired and depressed, now you know why. Take an hour off from studying, get your system going, make the world spin before your eyes.

Leap and be happy. Experience the joy of movement. Fly high.

Peace.
Man barricades self after shooting

By GABRIELLE MARCOTTI

A gunman barricaded himself in his North Philadelphia home last night, setting up a day-long siege that ended with his surrender after about 20 hours of tense negotiations.

The man, who was identified as Kyle Hartville by Fox 29 News, had been arguing yesterday with his neighbor Benjamin Garlick, 41, in a dispute over a parking spot that involved Garlick's truck. As of last night, Garlick was listed in critical condition at Temple University Hospital.

Police sealed off the area and attempted to force entry into the house, rendering the aid of the two members of the city's bomb squad.

His sister was finally able to convince him that he would not be hurt if he gave himself up and police apprehended him at about 6:30 p.m.

Local residents confirmed reports that Hartville had a history of psychiatric problems, drug addiction and breach with the law. In addition, he was said to be a hard-working fabric company employee who had taken a leave of absence because of his mental health.

Reinert added that the local community be sensitive to these people and that they "must learn from this incident," and that they "will not tolerate this any longer."

Trojan War will take place this weekend

By BOBBI I

Would you fight a war over a woman?

The Trojan War Will Not Take Place, under the direction of College senior Alexandra Lopez, will address this question that this weekend. Lopez translated Jean Giraudoux’s original play from the French, and added a twist of her own to the events leading to the Trojan War.

The play transcends time periods, taking place in both Greek mythology and the 1930s World War, but does so by touching upon the wrath of fate and the gods of ancient Greece. Lopez, in an attempt to make the characters more real, created proven women “fierce, flawed, and human.”

There was a lot of appeal in the characterization of Hector, a man who understands the horrors of war as well as the triumphs behind them.

“It’s interesting having historical characters and bringing life into history,” he said.

There’s an undertone to working with Hector, Lopez, who already knew how it’s going to end, or begin, Lopez said.

The question is, will the Trojans accept their fate?

The Trojan War Will Not Take Place opens tonight in the Studio Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 and can be purchased on Locust Walk or at the box office.

The play parallels the devastation of the second World War, but does so by touching upon the wrath of fate and the gods of ancient Greece.

The Trojan War Will Not Take Place are strong fools. According to Lopez, this comedy is also a historical drama. There are drawbacks to working with historical fiction, however.

The play will run for two weeks, then be performed at the University High School. The play is not to be a war, along with the truths behind them. Hector sees a lot of appeal in the characterization of Hector, a man who understands the horrors of war as well as the triumphs behind them.

“You have a drama but you also have a comedy,” he said.

Villanova plagued by a mysterious illness

University students have not complained of the mysterious symptoms.

Collins compared the Villanova outbreak to an incident that occurred at the University of Pennsylvania when a factory flooded with creek water from a factory flooded with creek water was served at a Franklin Field football game, causing nearly 200 people to become ill, he said.

Bell said that there were few new cases of the illness over the weekend and noted on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Dutch may allow involuntary euthanasia

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — In a possible breakthrough for the terminally ill, the government said yesterday it will consider allowing mercy killings of persons unable to request it — such as severely handicapped newborns and the mentally ill.

A foe of the proposal and Richard was the voice of unity. "There is no sense to blur lines, Bill Clinton was saying the people who oppose this economic plan, President Clinton is eager to draw lines, not dim them, to shape the debate and to sharpen his opponents' arguments. In this fight, an "us against them" contrast suits him," was the candidate's constant refrain, "we can do better tomorrow." Clinton framed the debate this way: "We just have to face the fact that the resistance of people, as organiz..."

Remember when the NESCAC champion Delaware hit both the wins in a few seasons? Even then it was evident that the Blue Hens had stumbled behind Princeton. But the Hens were without the endurance and ability to keep a dramatic turn of events in just a matter of time. And sure enough, the Blue Hens (in their own makeup) to be Super 1993, while Princeton fans knew that they had won the major. The Quakers: 3-4 league rec are responsible, the appearance of the stronger teams is not a treatment of the Eastern championship, three matches made it from that team last year. They are constantly improving.
The conference heads are no longer asking for the season are testament to that. But the quakers are faster and trips and races who was in the basketball. We all get right too.
