Plan gets tough on parties

By DANIEL GINGERS

If a proposed new Alcohol Management Plan gets on tough party policies, members of the IFC Executive Board will be facing tougher regulations for parties and other social events if they do not comply.

The policy, which was submitted to the council on the University for approval would change parts of the current alcohol policy including the amount of alcohol each person is permitted to bring to a fraternity party.

“We find it hard to accept these policies,” Morris Massel, IFC President being to a fraternity party.

Inter fraternity Council President Morris Massel, said that the members of the IFC Executive Board would be consulted before it was proposed.

“If we go out on a limb creating this policy, we don’t want some students to beat us up on it,” Massel said.

If approved, the policy would make a number of changes to the current alcohol management policy including the amount of alcohol each person is permitted to bring to a fraternity party.

“We are not consulting before it was proposed,” Massel said.

Search widened for Victim Support head

By CHARLES ONGSTEIN
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

A regional search to fill the position of Director of Victim Support Services is underway, said Ruth Wein last November, who was an early summer, University Police Commissioner John Kuprevich said that Wein has been from her position since November, citing her health as the reason for her departure.

The regional search, which began November, is aimed to focus specifically on the campus community, will follow a departmental search that Kuprevich announced in November.

“I think there is potential on this campus for a new director,” Kuprevich said in November, “I think we should look internally.”

Kuprevich said that the position will have a new director.

He promised to invoke the audience that evening and put the thrill in “in case care.”

“I will give you the glory,” he said to the crowd, “Tonight it’s going to explode.”

"My position is to help liberate Christianity and the church from the deterministic viewpoint of women in our culture," said. "I am striving for a positive sexual, cultural and religious perspective." "The focus is to try to provide people with a framework about sexual and cultural standards."

 Hamm, who spoke to an intimate audience in the Christian Association, talked about the psychological damage created by the dominant emphasis on the "passivity" regarding sexual behavior. "The passivity is about establishing externally oriented ideals, whereas in order to remain power players, we must understand the role of the individual's will power."

Stemmler said that while University admissions offices receive limited questions about crime rates, there has been a significant increase in questions from prospective students and parents. "Students and parents are more concerned about the University's response to the issue of security, and we're working closely together to make sure that the University is aware of the potential for bringing in negative feedback from prospective students and parents, as well as from the subject and that's reassuring to both students and parents."

Looking for a miracle? The University of Pennsylvania was the perfect location for all those who attended Chinese Culture Night in the University's 34th Street Auditorium on Tuesday, February 23. The event included various performances ranging from traditional Chinese dances, music, and storytelling to modern art installations, providing a unique experience for attendees.

Dancers performed traditional Chinese dances, including the famous fan dance, which is known for its intricate movements and beautiful hand gestures. The audience was captivated by the dancers' skill and grace as they effortlessly moved to the music, creating a mesmerizing visual spectacle.

Music also played a significant role in the night's events. Performers showcased Chinese instruments such as the pipa and the erhu, playing a variety of melodies that filled the auditorium with a sense of culture and history.

In addition to the performances, Chinese music and culture were also celebrated through art installations. These installations featured modern interpretations of traditional Chinese symbols and motifs, reflecting the fusion of old and new.

The event aimed to educate and entertain, providing attendees with a comprehensive understanding of Chinese culture. Attendees had the opportunity to witness the diversity and richness of Chinese traditions, making it a memorable night for all who attended.

• For "Date Only Events," the number of guests would be limited to one per member. For other events, the number of guests would be limited to more than 125 percent of the recommended capacity of the house's common areas.

• Abiding by the Bring Your Own Beer policy, a guest would be limited to a six-pack of beer or wine. The policy allows guests to bring a bottle of alcohol, but no more than one bottle of alcohol per event.

• All individuals attending an event would be carded at the door by a professional doorperson who is a member of the sponsoring chapter.

"Whatever else I am, I am an American," Williams added. The debate also touched on the validity of drawing a parallel between the military's segregation and the current situation for blacks in the country.

"There are regulations in the service that regulate behavior," he said.

Reaction to the program was positive.

"I have not received a formal presentation of the new policy, but I think the policy will be obvious in their best interest to listen to the IFC's complaints and take them into consideration," Massel said.

"They realize my representation of the fraternity is discredited, obviously the system is going to be very displeased and probably have complaints," he said. "It's obviously in their best interest to listen to us as we come up with a better policy in the end."

Our short list of internal candidates for the next Provost.

With visions of history cold winters and Big Ten football dancing in his head, Provost Michael Allen is packing his bags for the job as the head of the University of Illinois at Champaign Urbana.

As Allen heads to the Land of Lincoln, the Trustees have turned on their last furnace waiting for the first signs of resumes.

Since it seems that everyone is trying to land a cushy appointment inside the University, our research shows that there have been a hard time finding applicants.

So it's our list of worthy and not so worthy applicants - all from within the University - who, as followers of the Red and Blue, would make dandy provosts.

Engineering Dean Gregory Farrington, once a mighty supporter with students makes a candidate who will only make waves in the 10th floor hall and be ignored by the College. But past ignominy is, as they say, history.

Graduate School for Education School Dean Herbert Laurenz. Laurenz has placed the Ed the Res solidly in the black this year. The lack of anyiegoned unprofitability of teaching. Coming down is his background, we feel his priorities will be in order.

One of my strongest memories of my freshman year at Penn was watching line-ups of students in the dorms and finding racial epithets and symbols during the cold months of winter.

Since then, several radio shows have been held to discuss the issue and more and more programs have been set up within the University. But not one of the Penn University groups have had a list of LP services available to them.

Yet four years later, that same racism that already seemed so distant seems to persist for others elsewhere. As I near graduation, I wonder about my role, and why nothing is being done to correct this situation.

I do not mean a militant approach or simply through indifference, all of the discriminatory, divisive, and intolerant acts towards the real world are perpetuated by the majority of persons around with Penn.

But, colleges and universities should be better than the real world. The University should attract those people who desire true independence and freedom, and teach their students issues.

Now, the Penn University, the University in the surrounding world, at Penn there is a movement to find out exactly what goes on, this simply should not be happening.

My time at Penn has convinced me that it is possible and acceptable for a person to spend four years at this University and be ignorant to the basic minimal knowledge concerning the life of non-whites and their heritage.

Then we grew up and learned the real facts of the universe and the facts of the universe. We did not like it at all, but at least we could all be friends.

I have a very good friend who just happened to be aافق. He was Jewish and I had planned to go to SUNY Binghamton together. When he left the University, I would share an apartment with our people to marry, and I could get a ride to another side. We would keep the Southern states.

When you were supposed to get out of the experience was that we all have to get along and work together to ensure everyone's safety and peace of mind.

The subtext was that it was perfectly acceptable to have a gay couple to live together on campus.

The problem was that if I were a woman, I could live with anyone on campus, but because my significant other was male, joint housing was desired. We thought a heterosexual couple was better than a mixed-gender group.

One thing we have to keep in mind is that not all of the mixed-gender groups on the off-campus housing are necessarily involved in romantic relationships.

There are some students living in off-campus housing who share a suite of roommates. The women are expected to remain in the same apartment even if roommates are changed.

If there was something romantic going on among these people, no one knew and no one was known to be interested.

I live with a girl in my house in a house across campus. Her parents have two boys, four and female are here. We happen to get along just fine. None of them, or our friends, the group of one of the others due to problems. To date, I haven't been made in the same social circle.

You can live with share housing without any of those parties and you can live in on-campus housing. It's as simple as that.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A U.S. envoy held up days for battle bled migrants and mixed meals directly delivered food to a besieged eastern town yesterday, but there was still no aid distributed in Sarajevo today.

A universal, nationwide cease-fire went into effect by Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, appeared to be holding around the capital, but already was fading elsewhere.

As the representative of U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia headed for consultations with British and French leaders agreed to try to conciliate the warring sides, at least 18 people were reported killed in separate fighting in Sarajevo today. Muslims, Serbs and Croats were all reported to be running troops or diggers in for more fighting around the former Yugoslavia.

Efforts to deliver aid to besieged enclaves in eastern Bosnia have resulted in violations within the United Nations and have been met with widespread indignation by the Bosnian Muslims.

The U.N. high commissioner for refuges, Lakhdar Brahimi, canceled all meetings to meet with Muslims last week, frustrated that Serbs were killing Muslims, and some of the U.N. residents in the east and tearing down the fence delivering relief until U.N. convoys get past the Serbs.

On Friday, U.S. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali reopened (Ogla and received order. Ogla said you will have to wait for the news from the warning bulletins that they would not allow U.S. diplomatic relief for the Bosnian Muslims. At least one aid agency has said aid operations could be restored as early as today.

Against Harvard, Rivers was the key factor. The Quakers' victory from an enormous deficit was a result of the foul shot by Rivers with 1:33 remaining in the game. The foul shot by Rivers gave the Quakers a 99-99 tie over Harvard and sent the game into overtime. In overtime, the Quakers were able to outscore the Crimson 10-7 and secure the win.

Although the Quakers made a late run against Dartmouth on the year, they were not able to carry that momentum into the game against Harvard. Rivers had 24 points, while Zipperer had 17 points and 11 assists, including two key three-pointers to help keep the Quakers in the game.

The game was played in front of a packed crowd at the Palestra and drew many loyal fans to the game. The Quakers were able to carry the momentum they had against Dartmouth and secure a victory over Harvard.

Against the Crimson, the three-pointer figured heavily into the Quakers' comeback. Four of Penn's last seven field goals came from three-pointers. The Quakers scored 23 three-pointers in the game, while the Crimson scored only 10. The three-pointers were a key factor in the Quakers' victory.

Michigan State scored 70 points in the game, while the Quakers scored 76. The Quakers were able to outscore the Spartans in the second half and secure the win.

The Quakers were able to carry the momentum they had against Dartmouth and secure a victory over Harvard. Rivers had 24 points, while Zipperer had 17 points and 11 assists, including two key three-pointers to help keep the Quakers in the game.

Although the Quakers made a late run against Dartmouth on the year, they were not able to carry that momentum into the game against Harvard. Rivers had 24 points, while Zipperer had 17 points and 11 assists, including two key three-pointers to help keep the Quakers in the game.

The game was played in front of a packed crowd at the Palestra and drew many loyal fans to the game. The Quakers were able to carry the momentum they had against Dartmouth and secure a victory over Harvard.

It was a first half of dreams for the Quakers as they ran through the first half controls, scoring 41 points and outscoring the Crimson, 25-11. Perhaps still caught up in the excite- ment of the Harvard win, the Quakers put the ball into the basket, scoring 20 points on 16 shots.

The win was just a taste of what was to come for Borealis, as for his next match, the Penn coup changed the game's rules. Knowing that the Tigers' penalty, he put the ball into the basket, scoring 20 points on 16 shots.
