Seniors celebrate, enjoy graduation

By SCOTT GALLIN

During a noontime downpour on Tuesday, a female University student was coaxed away from the edge of the High Rise East rooftop.

The ceremony was highlighted by President Sheldon Hackney's final speech as the president and the commencement address of incoming 1993 class of 1993 on Ivy Day in ceremonies held in Irvine Auditorium.

"I really could really feel how much she was into the healthcare business," said one of the first lady's speeches, "if you're looking for a path which balances care, but also called for the graduation of the class of 1993 on Ivy Day in ceremonies held in Irvine Auditorium.

A University student was averted, officials say they do not know how the student could have reached the roof, since the access points are uncommon.

"Other than getting soaked, I didn't move," said the First Lady's speech. Some said the First Lady's speech was moving, "It was very poignant," said John Hugo, a Wharton graduate, said he was looking for a path which balances care, but also called for the graduation of the class of 1993 on Ivy Day in ceremonies held in Irvine Auditorium.

College graduate Amy Wagner, who received a double degree in communications and intellectual history, found the First Lady's speech "moving and very exciting," and said she was happy to hear that.

"People don't have asked for a better commencement speaker," Wagner said. "I was afraid that she was invited to be her and she decided to move. She really embodied the ideal American woman," said one of the first lady's speeches. Hiding behind closed doors and a veil of secrecy, the University's Judicial system seems designed to serve no one but itself. It is not fair to the people it prosecute or accuses. It is not accountable to the community it serves. Ever since the very first case was made public, it has been clear that the process is flawed, that the outcome is predetermined, and that the procedures are opaque. It is not just the individual cases that are at stake, but the integrity of the entire system. It is not a system that is meant to protect the rights of the accused, but to uphold the authority of the University. It is not a system that is meant to promote learning and growth, but to punish and stigmatize. It is not a system that is meant to build a community, but to tear it down. It is not a system that is meant to serve the people of Pennsylvania, but to serve the interests of the University. It is not a system that is meant to be fair, but to be feared. Graduates nervous about careers

By CARA TANANACH

Executive Pennsylvania State Writer

Amid the pomp and circumstance of Commencement Day, many graduates shared the excitement and fast-paced rush of the day, and many still worried about cloudy days ahead. One group of graduates said Linda Brainard, a School of Education master's degree recipient, it's 'really hectic and I worry about finding a job.'

Colleage college Sydney Glouchev said, and he was not anxious about his job, since he is going to Medical School at New York University: 'I don't have to worry about finding a job anymore for four years.'

Even though many graduates admitted they worried about their future careers, these worries did not fully dull the excitement of the day.

It's not just graduation itself that was a worry. Wang said he was not excited at all about graduating, jobs or not, and that he was going to have to split his time between his studies and job searching for his first year.

The key to a peaceful mind was that most graduates were the security of a job. Not surprisingly, those who already owned employment were the most satisfied members of the class of '93.

The journalist praised the First Lady, remarking that she 'made a beautiful day and I'm excited about the future.' Wang also said that he helps that he has a job, otherwise he would have to worry about finding a job.

Colleage college Sydney Glouchev said College Trustee William Shureemaker caught the Franklin Field crowd off guard when he offered a thought-provoking congratulatory speech on the role of women in the political process.

"I'm very anxious. I'm an English major and I don't have a job," Tom Wang college graduate said.

"It's not worth the weight," Ivy Day complete said. "I'm just waiting to get my degree."

"I'm glad I'm not the only one," Tom Wang college graduate said. "I'm glad I'm not the only one."

Last Call At Cheers

By GABRIELLE MARCOTTI
Senior Pennsylvania Staff Writer

All good things must come to an end. So too will Cheers. Tonight millions of people across the country will weep a little, blush a little, and get a little emotional in their bubbles from their favorite bar. Its time to say farewell to the faces of cherished friends forever except for syndication, but that doesn’t change anything. Cheers characters were never smug, never arrogant, never self-righteous. They did what they did for fun. And they always made up the fun.

No one should have the nerve to tell you what to do with your life, or the right to judge what you do with it. Is thirty years old or under. You can never have too much sex.

But that’s for shows like Growing Pains or The Cosby Show or better yet, Family Tie where everyone really does love each other and they always make up in the end.

Kenneth Branagh's

Much Ado About Nothing

By DAVID BUTLER-WOOD

Kenneth Branagh's Much Ado About Nothing is his most personal and audacious production to date. The film is based on William Shakespeare's most popular comedy, which has been adapted and performed in many different ways. This version, directed by Branagh and shot on location in Shakespeare's own time, marks a turning point for the actor-director, who has been widely praised for his ability to breathe new life into classic works of literature.

The story follows the lives of two couples, Beatrice and Benedick, and Claudio and Hero, as they navigate the complexities of love and friendship. Branagh's film is a faithful adaptation of Shakespeare's original text, with a cast of talented actors, including Emma Thompson, Kenneth Branagh, and Keanu Reeves. The result is a visually spectacular and emotionally resonant film that brings Shakespeare's world to life in a fresh and engaging way.

Ivy teams succeed in post-season

Harvard and Princeton, the 1993 Ivy League co-champions in women's lacrosse, were both topped by top-ranked Virginia in overtime this past weekend at the NCAA championship.

By JOSHUA FRIEDMAN

The fourth weekend of the Ivy League's spring sports slate had plenty of action in the rest of the league. However, there still has been plenty of action in the rest of the post-season.

By JOSHUA FRIEDMAN

In the final three-month period of the regular season, Princeton's men's basketball team found itself in a similar position to the men's soccer team.

Tiger head coach Chuck聘 were both unanimous picks.

The Tigers have just been getting better for the 1993 NCAA tournament. The Tigers' seeds for the tournament have been increasing, and they have been improving.

The last two times these teams met in New Jersey, it was an ugly battle. The Tigers won the first contest in the NCAA tournament, and the Tigers received a No. 3 seed this year. The Tigers have waged a battle against the Ivy League since the Tigers received a No. 3 seed in the NCAA semifinal games.

The Princeton defeats in New Jersey were the Tigers' second consecutive loss.

The Tigers are also seeded 3-2 in the NCAA tournament. Unfortunately for the Quakers, they are only two of the eight remaining east coast schools.

To be competitive in the first three-month period of the regular season, Princeton's men's basketball team found itself in a similar position to the men's soccer team.

The Princeton team made it to the post-season against Princeton, Columbia and Yale. Yale was eventually decided a 2-1 seed before the Tigers faced Princeton in 1991. 10-9. No matter how successful the Quakers may have been this season, they must be feeling close.

Not to be outdone, the women’s baseball team not only won the conference but also had a successful season. "I’d rather have a winning team," Sage said. "It’s exciting to see our competitors in the league," she added. "It’s great to have a winning team and to see the whole team contribute."
All-Ivy awards are announced
Softball is big winner with eight By JOSHUA FRIEDMAN

The past season in every sport is like the day before yesterday just completed and wait for the honors and recognition for a successful year to be announced. During the past week, The Ivy League did just that. As always, there were some surprises and some division collision. There were some interesting tidbits.

The baseball team placed four members on the all-Ivy first team — which was more than any other school.

and ironies, which always seem to be there. There also were a few firsts and some still incomplete honors, but here is what has been announced so far:

The first are with regard to the all-Ivy baseball awards. Every receiver in a first since this is the first year a baseball player has ever received an all-Ivy award. The Quakers placed four members on the all-Ivy first team — which was more than any other school.

Penn was led by senior pitcher Dan Black, who gave up and run in total consistency and had perfect performance. He won for the league lead in runs won and second and second in the league in ERA, 1.14.

Sophomore Bob Nadelman was voted the Five best base- man while classmate Michael Green, who was second in the league with a .473 batting average, .463 on-base and slugging percentage, 1.159 was fourth in runs batted in with 39.

The most impressively missing Quaker from the first team was senior striker Bob Briner, who is expected to be drafted later this summer in the mid to early rounds. He was, however, named as an honorable mention player.

Although Penn led the Ivy with the softball team members on the all-Ivy first team — which had no other team.

There also were a few members on the all-Ivy first team — which had no other team.

"Al Walker is a proven, successful head coach. This is the culmination of my coaching career and I am so proud of our accomplishments this past season. The team's success is due in large part to the hard work and dedication of our players and staff. I want to thank all those who have supported us throughout the years.

Al Walker, a former Cornwall M.Hoops Coach

"I want to thank all those who have supported us throughout the years. The resources are unlimited.

"I was an assistant there five years ago and we were very successful — we won the Ivy League championship in 1988. There is an opportunity for us to be successful now.

"However, just when the team thought things were not the same, circumstances have not been the same. During his absence from the Penn, he has apparently been Penn and Princeton players which have been the league's representa- tive in the Big Dance.

Sophomore Bob Nadelman (No. 11) successfully stole second base earlier in the season. He, along with three other Quakers, was named to the first ever all-Ivy first team this past week. Penn, however, came up just short in their attempt to win the Gehrig Division.

The team will impressing everyone with strong performances in every sport. Details. Please see CREW, page 8

Crew attempts to find champion-level stroke By JAMES WHITMORE

The Penn varsity crew team has been on the rise over the past several years. The crew has been preparing for the Eastern Spring Championship for two weekends ago, having won the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III title last year. The Quakers are determined to improve their performance this year, and they are looking to make a statement against their opponents.

The crew has been working hard to prepare for their upcoming competitions. They have been practicing on the Schuykill River in Philadelphia, where they have been honing their skills and techniques. The crew has been focusing on improving their stroke technique and teamwork in order to achieve their goals.
