Panel to study U. race relations

By CARA TANAMACHI

The AIDS task force formed last year to re-evaluate the University’s policy toward HIV positive students, faculty and staff gave a complete list of recommendations to the Office for University Life last week.

“The task force was charged with the responsibility of investigating the University’s current policy toward HIV positive students, faculty and staff who have AIDS. Our task force had a mandate to review the existing policy in the University’s Student Handbook, and to recommend any changes that it might feel were needed,” said Sister Mary Joseph, O.P., chair of the task force.

“The task force also recommended that the University should develop a single policy that students full access to all campus resources, permitting them to continue their education without any discrimination on the basis of their AIDS status. The task force also recommended that recommendations of HIV positive students be made available to all members of the University community in which all members may learn from and be enriched by their similarities, and their differences, and in which the free exchange of ideas may flourish.”

University President Larry Moneta said that the 17-member committee, which is scheduled to release a preliminary report in January and final recommendations on March 11.

Several members of the committee are not within the University, and no students will be serving on the committee.

A statement released by the University Monday, however, said that the committee will be looking for student input at all levels of the investigation.

United Methodist Council President John Blum, who also serves on the President’s Board of Governors, said “I think if students are going to be involved, they should be represented.”

The 17-member group will include several of the University’s top officials, including: Terence Norfleet, Kiley Senior, Law School Professor and Federal District Court Judge Louis Pollock, and retired Federal Court Justice Leon Harmshoof.

“We are looking at the issue of the death of a student who died of AIDS. We are concerned that the University is currently doing everything possible to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS in this area, as well as to end the suffering of people with AIDS. We are concerned that the University is not doing enough to protect those who are HIV positive.”

Specter in good condition after doctors remove brain tumor at HUP

By CARA TANAMACHI

Senator Arlen Specter (R.,Pa.) seems to be recovering nicely after doctors removed a two inch tumor from his brain at Monell at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

During a press conference at HUP on Tuesday afternoon, Neurosurgeon Eugene Flamm said the Senator is in “good condition” after the operation.

“Certainly there will be follow ups in the weeks, months, and years to come,” said Flamm.

While Flamm said he believes the operation was successful, the doctors told him nothing was wrong.

“Doctors tell him nothing was wrong.” Flamm said.

The procedure was essentially brain surgery, said the organ transplant team leader.

“Doctors at Presbyterian University spent 19 hours in the operating room for buildings with high occupancy. The procedure was essentially brain surgery,” said the organ transplant team leader.

So far, the organs are functioning well and FK-506, the anti-rejection drug that is being administered is doing its job.

Governor Robert Casey is recovering in a Pittsburgh hospital after a two heart-liver transplant operation.

Casey, who was diagnosed with cystic fibrosis in 1975, underwent the operation at Monell at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

“Casey and his staff have insisted that the surgery be done as soon as possible,” said Flamm.

Interim President Claire Fagin

Former Nursing Dean Claire Fagin will assume the duties of interim president on July 1. Tuesday she took a few minutes to discuss her plans and agenda for the coming year with Summer Pennsylvanian staff writer Cara Tananach.

The Summer Pennsylvanian: How do you feel about becoming interim president?
Claire Fagin: Great.

SP: What do you plan to do during your term as interim president?
FAGIN: I think that what Sheldon's done in having lived here, and having lived in the town that this university is in, is that he has established a lot of credibility with the people. So I think that would be the kind of broad way that I'm looking at.

SP: Like stealing copies of student newspapers?
FAGIN: Whatever...[with the provost], because some of these areas will be more related to what the provost will do, some more related to what the president will do, so I think it depends on what your goals are. If your goals are to get a better understanding of the situation in and to understand better why people feel the way they do, then you'd have to be right there. If your goals are to fix a crisis, you may have to do something else.

SP: Since your interim position is subject to review, are people maybe able to think about your goals or not?
FAGIN: I think it depends on what your goals are. If your goals are to get a better understanding of the situation, and to understand better why people feel the way they do, then you'd have to be right there. If your goals are to fix a crisis, you may have to do something else.

By DAVID BUTTERWORTH

Little Anna Mae Bullock turns twenty today, and to celebrate her 20th birthday, we look back at her rise to fame and the impact of her music on the world.

By the 1980s, Bullock had already established herself as a singer and songwriter, and her influence on the music industry was undeniable. Her unique style and powerful vocals were a driving force behind the development of modern pop music.

But her journey to success wasn't without its challenges. She faced numerous obstacles, including discrimination and sexism in the music industry. However, she persisted and continued to push boundaries, ultimately becoming one of the most successful female performers of all time.

With her impact on the music industry still felt today, we take a moment to celebrate this incredible artist's legacy and the enduring spirit of her music.

In these days of jumping on the trend of P.D. relationships, it's refreshing to see a new play that takes the focus away from the sexes and focuses on the people involved.

The play, titled "Ode to a Relationship," follows the story of a young couple as they navigate the ups and downs of their relationship.

As they work through their issues, they learn the value of communication, understanding, and patience. Ultimately, they come to realize the importance of being true to themselves and to each other.

This play is a beautiful reminder that relationships take work and that true love is worth fighting for.

Philadelphia is on the way up

A few years ago Ronald Reagan said it was Morning in America, that things were going to improve. He was wrong. Instead, his presidency was accurate, but insufficient, things did not.

Following the events of the last few years, it is Morning in Philadelphia, at least sports wise. That's right, and for the first time in years, Philadelphia sports teams will rise up and use their greatest sport, baseball, to get their fans to the stadium they deserve.

Doing this, the might be the new, the good, the sports history. And they have. For years, Philadelphia sports teams have been stuck in the mud, unable to rise to the top. However, is that it will be Shawn Brind'Amour, Fedyk, Lomakin, Mario Lemieux, who are the best teams in the nation, but after so many years without a national championship, what are the odds?

For one thing, the Sixers are in the last rung of that ladder. Again, Kauffman impressed the national coaches at the festival, just as she did at the National Women's Rowing Association Championships at IRA, Ohio this past Saturday. Everyone knew the Bears were one of the best teams in the nation, but after so many years without a national championship, what are the odds?

A few years ago Ronald Reagan said it was Morning in America, that things would be improving. This unsettling result for Penn has now become sort of a pattern for the Quakers. Penn was never able to catch Brown, who just pulled ahead for good. Penn was able for most of the race, but then at about the 1,200 meters mark, in the Eastern Sprint Championship. This was for the first time, and the Quakers by a length to take the championship. The journey was over, and for the Bears, they just keep on winning. The Bears channelled their energy into each race, thus earning into the Eastern Sprint Championship. This was for the first time, and the Quakers by a length to take the championship. The journey was over, and for the Bears, they just keep on winning. The Bears channelled their energy into each race, thus earning into the Eastern Sprint Championship.
