Residential Living employees cited for over 100 violations

BY RANDI PELINOSK

Many high-rise residents complained about the noise generated by a Greek student organization in Schanck Park early Sunday morning. Although less than 10 recently initiated student fraternity members were present with University Police and Allied personnel monitored the activity, it was not classified as a disturbance — "just noise," according to the Allentown police on duty that Sunday morning.

Power to the People

As Saloky

Kwame Ture was once the face in the 1960s as a black activist. This question of conscious, you must unterstand, of course, is more difficult. But the more people who are correcting now. For instance, in the early 1960s there was not an example, in the early 1960s there was not an example of the struggle for liberation movement, all its splinters and facces which the enemy is using against the people in the 1960s it was very the situation there?

Res. Living employees cited for breaking policies

In other instances, employees have even abandoned their posts without filling replacements.

Several residence halls, except for the Castle, have been affected by these problems, according to the documents dated since September.

Simeone said that she was stationed at her desk at 4 p.m. to monitor the guard stations and desks in several halls throughout the building.

"With a staff that large, there are always problems that occur," she said. "Public Safety and Residential Living have been working closely to improve the levels of desk and security coverage."

Simeone said that in Residential Living employees have been disciplined because of their poor job performance.

Examples of policies that often infringe on proper behavior vary depending on the severity and type of resident, she added.

"This problem has gone beyond late and sickness," the acknowldged. However, the documents indicate that on

In addition, the guard who had taken the unit to 11 a.m. left his post at 11 a.m., without waiting for a replacement.

DENVER — A conga line of snowplows, tugs and trucks loaded with equipment wound its way from Denver’s old airport to Denver International Airport along Front Range highways, cutting to enforce the amendment and to forbid spending Social Security tax money on it.

The force had been on 32 ships off Mogadishu and the last units out and that’s probably preparing for the amphibious return.

Critically wounded Sunday, and one Somali policeman was killed. The force had been on 32 ships off Mogadishu. The force had been on 32 ships off Mogadishu. A key part of the discussion, according to several senators, was the question of the Glass Steagall Act.

The Glass Steagall Act, which forbids commercial banks from entering the securities underwriting business or acting as underwriters, was sought to restrict banks from engaging in such activities. The legislation’s authors argued that it would prevent banks from becoming too risky.

Helping Hands

We applaud the administrators of the Pennsylvania Service Scholars program and the University students for their efforts to serve the community.

Two weeks ago, the University had only seven of 13 positions in the Pennsylvania Service Scholars Division filled by AmeriCorps programs.

But after hearing of the deadline to fill the remaining positions, University students responded.

We also urge the Pennsylvania Service Scholars division of AmeriCorps to work with University students to find unique opportunities for serving community. By finding new ways to assist the Pennsylvania Service Scholars in the surrounding areas, the participating students can truly expand the influence of the program.

I was told not too long ago, that I did not have many friends. I was told by too many people I could wave to across the bar at a local restaurant. People who I trusted might not be as trustworthy as I thought.

So why is it something I am proud of? It sounds lonely, it sounds shameful. But in my trustworthiness, my being able to have faith in others, I learned that friendship is not as easy as one might think.

I collected friends in the way one picks up a stone from the ground. The friends I ended up with were not the friends I had intended for myself. I learned that friendship is not about using a person to get somewhere where you need to be. It is about learning from each other. It is about leaning on each other in times of need.

The cycle of behavior supporting sexual harassment and assault can be stopped Men who assault the women he knows and is revered by other males The success of a relationship, friendship, or any other interaction, should never be predicated on a person's gender or orientation.

Men who fail to see that a woman's worth is not predicated on her gender or orientation should not be allowed to continue their behavior. Rape is an incredibly difficult issue for everyone involved. While rape is most often a violent crime, it can also take the form of emotional or psychological abuse, such as emotional or verbal threats.

We are holding each other accountable for our actions and inaction. We are holding each other responsible for our words and actions.

The Buck Stops Now

Chris Iorillo

Men Must Be Responsible

Rape is an incredibly difficult issue for men to confront. While men use their sexuality as a weapon against women, they are also victims of sexual harassment and assault.

A National Institute of Mental Health study of 12 universities reported that one out of every 100 women will be the victim of rape or attempted rape by the time they graduate from college. One out of four women will report that at least one percent of these reports will be repeated.

As a man, I feel that I am more at risk when I don't know how to react. I feel that I am more at risk when I don't know what to do. I feel that I am more at risk when I don't know who to turn to. I feel that I am more at risk when I don't know how to react.

The Pennsylvania Service Scholars program and the University students did not just serve the Pennsylvania Service Scholars; they were a testament to the sincere concern students have for their community. They were a testament to the sincere concern students have for their community.
Although club teams do not generate the same amount of notoriety varsity sports have attained, schools such as Penn State, Bucknell and West Virginia have extremely strong regular seasons. When fatigue set in, the Quakers began to buoyed them to an impressive start "us."

The tournament was not over for those four Quakers, however. On the basis of their seeded fielding in the team competition, they earned automatic bids for the individual player of the IFCS. After an up and down season with great exceptions, there was a little season high as well.

The Penn men's squash team finally put the past behind and made an immediate move.

In what coach Edward Davids called "one of the worst losses I've ever had," the Quakers finished fifth out of 16 teams in the US Squash Association (U.S.A.) National Championships. The team played three matches over the weekend, losing to No. 16 Yale, 6-3 and defeating Williams 5-4 on Sunday. Williams, which had lost to Western on Wednesday, is currently in the consolation bracket. The team won the 4-4 and the deciding match was played by No. 6 Andy Taub, who won in five games after being

W. Track third at Heps

The Penn women's track team finished third out of nine teams in the season-ending Ivy League Championships this past weekend at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York.

The host Big Red triumphed to victory with 138 points, Brown took second with 108 points, and the Quakers had 102 points. In the women's 5000 meter run, Harvard University swept all first places. Sophomore Leslie Miller broke the 15:5-5.8 second record set last year and ran the 16.5 meter hurdles in 6.12 sec-

M. Fencers fourth in an ISA strong field

Without trophies or awards to take home at this year's exhibition Intercollegiate Fencing Association championships, the Penn women's fencing team appeared slightly lackluster in this year's competition.

A 10-year tradition, the IFA competition has been strongly for men's teams only until this season, when a women's program was added for the anticipated start of the inaugural official tournament next year.

This year the IFA competition was split into one competition for the men and another for the women.

As usual, the men continued their dominance, coming through most of the bouts and capturing numerous individual championships. The Penn team was captained by junior captain Eric Murphy, and the team placed first overall.

The Quakers showed themselves surprisingly slight on the evening, but managed to emerge in second place overall in the seven team competition.
