IAST project to start this summer

By Ranise Federico-Lund

The Institute for Advanced Science and Tech- nology (IAST) has begun construction on a new hor- rizontal bar pendulum standing in the main commer- cial and administrative building of Smith Hall. The project has been on hold since last fall due to financial, stud- ious, discussion and debate be- tween the renovation and the U.S. Air Force.

Yesterday, Vice President for Re- search Joyce Cooperman released the Environmental Impact Statement that the Air Force has finally com- pleted after three years of work in order to secure $80 million in funds. The report analyzed the historical impact report, indicates that the result will allow the Department of Defense to demolish Smith Hall and build the IAST facility.

Cooperman said Smith Hall’s de- stuction will probably begin this summer.

The drawn out history of the IAST began in 1991 when the federal govern- ment selected the University as the potential IAST site to be located in the area.

The project has been the focus of many years of debate and research. The University has been involved in the planning and construction of the IAST facility since 1991.

The second constitutional reform refer- endum will be on the ballot.

The second constitutional reform refer- endum was the second proposal ever graced the UA ballot, Nadel said last night.

The second proposal added that the second plan proposes a constitution amendment for the University Under- graduate Assembly con- stitution. The proposal would change the way a constitution amendment is proposed.

The proposal would allow the Under- graduate Assembly to propose the amendment itself.

The proposal was first introduced in February 1995 and was subsequently amended.

The proposal was amended to allow the Under- graduate Assembly to propose the amendment itself.

The proposal was later amended to allow the Under- graduate Assembly to propose the amendment itself.

The proposal was finally amended to allow the Under- graduate Assembly to propose the amendment itself.

The hunt is on.

When you graduate from college, a job search can be a difficult and daunting task, especially when it comes to finding meaningful and fulfilling employment. This year, the job market is particularly competitive, with many students facing stiff competition and uncertain prospects.

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, the unemployment rate for college graduates in May was 5.3%, up from 4.9% in the previous year. This is the highest unemployment rate for college graduates in over a decade, and it is expected to remain high for the foreseeable future.

The job market is particularly tough for those with majors in humanities, education, and social sciences, as these fields have experienced a significant decrease in job opportunities. On the other hand, fields such as technology, healthcare, and finance continue to offer a greater number of jobs and better pay.

Despite the challenges, many students are determined to find a job that aligns with their values and interests. According to a recent survey by the National Association of Colleges and Employers, 63% of college graduates plan to work in a job related to their major.

The job search process can be long and arduous, and it is important for students to be prepared and to develop effective strategies for finding employment. This includes networking, attending career fairs, and using online resources, such as job boards and social media.

In conclusion, while the job market is challenging, there are many opportunities available for college graduates who are willing to put in the effort and to be open to new possibilities. With persistence and determination, students can find meaningful employment and take the first step towards achieving their career goals.
Ronald McDonald House expands with new wing

By Chris Maneza

On the fifth anniversary of its founding, the Ronald McDonald House is completing construction of an addition that will double its current capacity.

The Ronald McDonald House — operated by Ronald McDonald House Charities — serves children and their families who travel from all 50 states and has served as a model for 160 other houses around the world. The $4 million addition, cited the U.S. Healthcare Center, will feature 24 additional bedrooms as well as living space and a 16-car underground garage.

"We're very excited we can be of use," Executive Director of the Philadelphia Ronald McDonald House Robyn Sole said. "The need is desperate, and we're happy to be there." Construction began last summer and completion of the expansion is expected to be operational sometime this fall.

The land for the expansion, that had previously been used as a parking lot, was acquired from the Institute of Sacred Heart.

"If ever there was going to be a case where you could do this, this is it," Cooperman said.

The Memorandum of Agreement indicates that it is up to the University to determine whether there is anything from the building that should be salvaged for potential use. In addition, Cooperman said the building and the historical aspects of the area will be photographed. The memorandum provides for a design review process to ensure the compatibility of new construction with the surrounding district.

The agreement also requires the University to develop a plan for the University's contribution to the IAST project.

According to McClelland, the construction phase of the project will cost between $44 and $58 million. Three additions phased over a few years would total over $100 million. The cost would be covered by contributions from corporations, foundations and local government. The IAST project is expected to turn a profit once it is operational.

Against Racism

By Walter Palmer

The Daily Pennsylvania/Editor

They are engaged in dialogue, both written and oral, in the attempt to question the issues of "White American Racism" and all of its institutional practices. It would seem that we should be engaged in dialogue with ourselves at this point and question why we may be perpetuating the same patterns of behavior that we so fervently learned as evil behavior.

"White American Racism" has and continues to be a subject on the minds of those who are concerned with the social and economic conditions in the country.

I think that our illegitimacy, our lack of power in this world, is the result of our own actions. Everyone can see the existence of a class of people that are not able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives. But it is among those who are least able to influence policy decisions that we can find the greatest fear and the most urgent need to change.

It is clear that we are all in a position to act on our own behalf and to support others who are struggling to make a better life for themselves and their families. As individuals, we can make a difference. We can choose to stand up for what we believe in, and we can help others do the same.

I would respectfully suggest that Janice Steinmetz, the author of the article, make changes to her proposal in order to better reflect the needs and concerns of those who have been negatively affected by racism. It is important to consider the impact of her policies on different groups and to ensure that they are inclusive and equitable.

Cast in the role of a repeat offender who commits some form of burglary or theft, the DP is referring to the article on the subject of shoplifting and the consequences of the theft.

In the 1980s, the data show a decrease in the number of reported burglaries, which is likely due to increased surveillance and security measures. However, the rate of shoplifting has remained relatively stable, with some variations depending on the location and type of store.

While the test does not necessarily represent the current state of the art in testing, it is evident that there is a need for more research and development in this area. There are many factors that contribute to human behavior, and it is important to consider these in order to develop effective strategies for reducing crime.

The nation and the world have been waiting for this moment for a long time. In the wake of so many tragedies and hardships, it is time for us to come together and find a way forward.

In the end, it is about time that administrators, faculty, and students all work together to create a safe and supportive environment for all.

This is why we must continue to push for greater understanding and action in the fight against racism and all forms of discrimination.

In Response to Marc Teillon’s Column On B-GLAD

To the Editor:

Marc Teillon has been so far a disgrace to this campus. The statement that many dogs have been heard on your campus, I don't have to look it up, thanks. The obnoxiousness of this is in response to the scathing column on B-GLAD if we just accepted the behavior. Of course, we have to follow societal norms, since, after all, “stirring up specifically certain emotions in men so as to make them desire to be dispersed.” At least we have to adhere to include slavery, racism, sexism, violence as a solution to conflict, rape, and religious persecution. Somehow, I find societal norms to be any other or more acceptable than human instinct.

Marc Teillon is entitled to have opinions and to publish them. The Daily Pennsylvanian, however, need not print them. Particularly, when such opinions contain violence and hatred toward so vastly stigmatized part of our population. If Mr. Teillon respected facts and authority, he would know better than to claim to know what “human nature,” “deviance,” and “normal” he also would know that sodomy is barely limited to gay men, and that pedophilia is more often practiced by “normal” heterosexual men on young people. Moreover, the historical prevalence of sodomy is never too late to give up your prejudices.”

Basketball Heartbreaks from Back Page
The lead line-to-line Tuesday for Tim (14 points, 14 rebounds) put his man in the air, thus passed to Anthony (20 points) McDoress, who laid the ball to the floor, and Bowman, who looked shaky for the last three minutes. The Tide victory was 65-61.

The Tide came into the last shot, which Marvin Orange (14 points, six assists) missed from the left of the top of the circle. The Quakers got within three points immediately followed a McDyess steal and Faulkner got the rebound. But the Tide victory was 65-61.

The Crimson Tide bounced the Quakers with key rebounds, as the fifth seeded Crimson Tide won last night's overtime thriller at Baltimore Arena. The Crimson Tide prevailed 91-85.

Alabama's Jamal Faulkner and Penn forward Ira Bowman fight for a loose ball during last night's overtime thriller at Baltimore Arena. The Crimson Tide prevailed 91-85.

Penn senior guards Jerome Allen and Matt Maloney try to steal the ball in the waning minutes of their final games last night in Baltimore. As the Quakers' immediate concern is the match tonight against a very competitive Yale. This weekend, Penn will also have to keep an eye on senior attackers Nick Deans, who had 16 goals and 10 assists.

The Penn men's tennis team is home for four match-ups this weekend after a trip to California over break.
