Welfare reform debate at Center City forum

By MILLY REID

People from all walks of life crammed into Center City gutters Thursday to hear a panel discuss the impact of welfare reforms on women, children and families.

"It is part of the struggle for social control," said university provost Alma GPA Quigley, "and will affect the state in a patrician system. We don't talk about it.

The panel members were introduced by Pitt's president, a glint in his eye.

Although she is currently a former social worker with a degree in social work, University, she is also a former welfare recipient.

Quigley's speech concluded with a "quote of the day": "Anything you do for me is not going to be taken away."

Budget

"We're going to spend more on child care, education, the elderly and the disabled," Governor Robert P. Casey Jr. said in his 1998 budget address Wednesday. "We're going to spend more on the disabled, we're going to spend more on the elderly, we're going to spend more on the education system."

"And the one thing we are not going to spend more money on is welfare," Casey added, "and that's a point of diminishing returns.

Speaking out against homosexuality

BY JAYNE PEARCE

Bible hunting has taken on a new meaning at the University of Tulsa, where gays have been hounded and beaten with bikes by students involved in a gay-bashing group.

And although there have been no reports of violence against gays at the University, some homosexuals on campus feel threatened by what they perceive as intolerance.

Last Thursday, at the weekly meeting of the Homosexuality and Religious Groups, some gay students expressed their anger over what they saw as religiously motivated attacks.

"I don't know of anyone who has been physically threatened," said one gay student. "But there have been incidents where people have felt threatened."
Attention Graduate and Professional Students:

Congress is currently considering legislation that would eliminate the Patricia Roberts Harris and Javits fellowships as well as the in-school interest exemption on federal student loans. The in-school interest exemption currently prevents interest from accumulating on student loans while one is a student. If this exemption is eliminated, a typical student in a Masters program would owe an additional $33,028 in loan costs (a 48% increase). Graduate student government at Penn opposes this legislation since it would create a significant disincentive against graduate and professional education.

We urge concerned members of the Penn community to write to Senator Arlen Specter (the chair of the Senate subcommittee on education appropriations) or Senator Rick Santorum (one of the principal supporters of this legislation) and voice their opposition. To facilitate this, GAPSA and GSAC are providing pre-addressed, pre-stamped envelopes as well as a form letter explaining why these cuts would be detrimental to graduate education and, in the long run, the American economy.

If you are a recipient of federal student loans (or plan to rely on such loans to help pay for graduate or professional school):

Please take a moment to sign a copy of the letter. Since hand-written notes are the most effective lobbying tool, please add a post-script explaining how cuts in this program would affect your plans for graduate or professional school.

If you are a Patricia Roberts Harris or Javits fellow:

Please take the time to write a note explaining how these programs have contributed to your graduate education and to voice your opposition to any legislation reducing or eliminating them.

For hours, UA debates buying copier

On Wednesday, the Undergraduate Assembly passed a line-item addition to the budget, allowing the Student Activities Committee to allocate $15,000 in escrow for the purchase of a copier. However, some members questioned the wisdom of allocating such a large sum for the purchase of office supplies.

Several members of the assembly expressed concern over the cost of the copier, with some estimating the price tag to be as high as $90,000. The copier was intended to be used by the Student Activities Committee for printing and copying purposes.

At the meeting, UA President Judith Rodin noted that the copier would be placed on theUA constitution. He also noted that the copier would be made available to all branch governments.

The debate was interspersed with the presentation of a proposal by Eric Tienou, a College junior, to amend the UA constitution to include a new, autonomous standing committee of the undergraduate student government. The proposal, which was introduced by the Nadel-Schorr plan, is intended to give the student activities council more autonomy.

Nadel and Schorr said they were pleased with the endorsements of the Performing Arts Council.

Proposals to amend the current UA Constitution:

- The Social Planning and Events Committee (SPEC) shall exist as an autonomous standing committee of the undergraduate student government (such as SAC, SCUE, and the NEC).
- SPEC shall serve as the programming board, the sole independent organization for formulating, implementing, and funding campus-wide social events.
- SPEC shall operate according to its own constitution.

The undergraduate student government shall guarantee SPEC a yearly allocation as it does the peer committees.

Rodin to meet state officials

President for Government and Public Affairs Peter Rodin will be in Harrisburg today to meet with legislative leaders and Governor Tom Ridge's budget director to discuss the University's state appropriation for the fiscal year 1996.

Penn Watch hits the streets

Penn Watch hit the streets again yesterday afternoon with a Jean Springfield outside the Norden building.

If you think this is a very feasible, safe way to stop the copier, said the Wharton junior.

Both plans call the new governing body the "Undergraduate Senate." The current Senate, however, is not intended to be on the lookout for a "rat the size of a Saucer cat."

I would like to protest Marc Tollefsen's and Shara Klein's columns, which you published on March 13 and 15. In these articles, you argue that the presidential candidates should not pursue campaign activities and should be held responsible for the personal lives of their supporters.

The candidates have the right to pursue their activities in the public eye. If they choose to engage in activities that involve issues of importance to voters, they should be held responsible for the consequences of those actions.

When Splendorbin recorded the tape for the seven-inch single recently re-issued in Elliott's studio, he found it "kind of tricky" to make mix the music on.

But no, he didn't run up and down the stairs really fast; he first recorded the instruments separately, then mixed by "overdubbing" the music. TOKYO -- Police seized five packs of sarin gas on a train in a Tokyo subway station on Tuesday.

According to the Police Station, the train was carrying a total of 20,000 people when it was stopped by the police.

The police said they were investigating the incident as a possible terrorist attack.

They seized five packs of sarin gas, which are considered to be dangerous chemicals, and immediately took them to the police station.

They also took samples of the gas for analysis.

The train was carrying a total of 20,000 people when it was stopped by the police.

Tied to the severed right buttock was a newspaper ad for a local restaurant. His hamburger was intact, but his right ear and part of his face were torn off. His neck and abdomen were bloodied.

"It's really hard to keep a straight face when you talk to police," said Big Boy's girlfriend, Tami Williams. "I'm just glad he's alive."

The authorities blamed sarin, a widely used military nerve agent, for the attack.

The attack has raised concerns about the possibility of a future terrorist attack in the city.

The authorities have not ruled out the possibility of a future terrorist attack in the city.

Lindros gets hot trick as streaking Flyers win again

Carey comes through again for Caps; Spurs win sans Rodman; Season over for Bonnies

Flyers extended their winning streak in the Eastern Conference with 35 of the third period. Going into the third period, Philadelphia's high-powered front line of Lindros, Mikael Renberg and Joe Blashill was struggling. But the Flyers started the third period. Going into the third period, Philadelphia's high-powered front line of Lindros, Mikael Renberg and Joe Blashill was struggling. But the Flyers started the third period with a bang, scoring the only goal of the period. The Flyers were able to hold on for the 3-1 win, improving their record to 35-13-4 on the season.

Capitals, 5; Whalers, 2

The Washington Capitals defeated the Carolina Hurricanes 5-2 on Saturday night in an Eastern Conference game. The Caps won their third consecutive game and improved their record to 31-19-5. The win was especially significant for forward Peter Bondra, who returned from a two-game suspension and recorded three points (one goal, two assists).

Although the Whalers outshot the Capitals, the Capitals were able to make the most of their scoring opportunities. Washington's star player was center Rod Brind'Amour, who scored his second goal in as many games and added an assist to lead the Caps to victory.

The Flyers, 5; Ducks, 2

Philadelphia defeated Anaheim 5-2 on Friday night in an Eastern Conference game. The Flyers improved to 34-13-6 with the win. Philadelphia's star player was left wing Jeremy Roenick, who scored a career-high four goals in the game. Roenick's performance was particularly impressive considering that he was playing against one of the top defenses in the NHL.

The Flyers started the game strong, scoring twice in the first period to take a 2-0 lead. Roenick scored his first goal of the game at 2:14 of the first period, and he added his second goal at 1:59 of the second period. Philadelphia continued its strong performance in the second period, scoring three more goals to increase their lead to 5-1. The Flyers were able to hold off a late surge by the Ducks and secure the victory.

Philadelphia's other top performer was center John LeClair, who recorded a goal and an assist in the game. Left wing Brendan Shanahan also contributed to the Flyers' offense with two goals.

The Ducks were unable to respond effectively to Philadelphia's scoring efforts. Anaheim's best performer was right wing Marian Hossa, who scored a goal in the first period, but his efforts were not enough to prevent the Flyers from earning the win.

The Flyers will face another strong opponent in their next game, as they host the New York Islanders on Saturday night. The Islanders are currently in second place in the Metropolitan Division, so Philadelphia will need to be on top of its game to emerge victorious.

The Flyers' victory was a welcome boost to their confidence after a recent string of losses. With a record of 34-13-6, Philadelphia is now among the top teams in the Eastern Conference. The Flyers will look to extend their winning streak when they take on the Islanders on Saturday.
W. Lax hopes to run past Greyhounds

BY SCOTT MULHAUSER

The Penn women's lacrosse team looks toward tonight's game against Loyola as an odometer, one with which they can gauge their distance traveled thus far on the winding, classless road that comprises this women's season season.

Loyola is one of the top teams we play," senior attacker Lori Frank said. "But we would love to get a loss against them. We've never won a game against them, and we're ready to start this season with a victory.

The Quakers (1-1) aim to run past a perennially ranked Greyhounds squad that is capable of winning a national championship, according to Penn coach Anne Lewis.

"They are a top-ranked team that is both talented and explosive," Lewis said. "They should be a tough game because they could potentially win the national championship."

Penn got to preview the Greyhounds when the two teams scrimmaged in Florida earlier this year, and the Quakers hope to use the information they gathered from their chances in tonight's 7 p.m. rematch at Franklin Field.

"Playing them in Florida gives us an idea of their weapons, most obviously their speed," senior defender Wendy Higgins said. "We know what we need to concentrate on: our fast break.

The Quakers return six seniors, all starters, to a squad that featured the national championship. Each player has a role to play. "I think they [each senior] are motivated to play. I think our young players are motivated to play. I think we have an amazing team, with both good and not so good senior players," Lewis said.

The Quakers have two midweek games — they host Temple on Tuesday at 7 p.m. and William and Mary on Friday at 3 p.m. — before Ivy League play begins April 27-29.

"It will be definitely different than a usual midweek game," senior goalkeeper Thomas Baker said. "It's certainly a little bit different than a usual midweek game."
