He added that Ng's condition was upgraded Tuesday to serious at the Medical College of Pennsylvania — has showed "some progress with voluntary movement." Warton junior Fooned Chen, a passenger in the car, was also in critical condition at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, O'Brien said said Chen's condition was upgraded to serious Friday.

Tokyo police raid offices in search for terrorists

WASHINGTON — In a break with their party's leadership on the "Contract With America," the House Republicans asked GOP tax-files to chill out with the $14 billion of tax relief they had promised in the wake of last week's 9/11 terror attack.

But, battered by Democratic critics, the House budget blueprint for the first fiscal year of the plan's $189 billion deficit reduction budget, said a total of $66.4 billion in savings will be put toward tax relief.

"This is the first glimmer of hope that some of the people, especially those who are on welfare, will get some tax relief," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said in a statement released to the House leaders and instead made the delivery of the letter to the House leaders and instead made the statement available to the press, said Laura Goggin, a spokesperson for Republicans.

In addition to Roberts and Simanek, other committee chairmen signing the letter were Ben Gilman of New York, a Republican who chairs the Ways and Means Committee, and Thomas Dillon, a Republican who chairs the Committee on Natural Resources.

The letter was circulated by Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kans., chairman of the House Budget Committee, and Rep. Joe L. Baca, D-Calif., the ranking Democrat on the committee, saying that cutting the tax cut for homeowners, a measure that would save $1 billion to $11 billion.

The letter was also circulated by Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kans., chairman of the House Budget Committee, and Rep. Joe L. Baca, D-Calif., the ranking Democrat on the committee, saying that cutting the tax cut for homeowners, a measure that would save $1 billion to $11 billion.

Fraternal Faux Pas

In agreeing to allocate funds to sponsor parties at fraternity houses, the Undergraduate Assembly has once again shown its ineptitude and faulty thought process.

At Sunday night's Undergraduate Assembly budget meeting, UA members voted to pay for weekly parties at fraternity houses next semester as a means of alleviating the dwindling social life on campus. While the proposal's aim is certain — to increase on-campus social life — the idea of a Bring Your Own Beer policy illustrates a mismanagement of funds and illthinking.

Earlier this semester, the Interfraternity Council approached the UA with a plan that would allow fraternity boys to buy beer for their guests. Unfortunately, the UA did not realize that the IFC does not have the authority to allocate funds, and the council asked the UA to present a budget to the UA, which it did.

But now, two more weeks later, the same leaders who voted for its implementation are screaming for help.

Unfortunately, the UA does not realize that the IFC does not present reasonable arguments warranting financial support; the IFC has a policy that delegates the responsibility of managing funds to the fraternity boys, and the UA only agreed to allocate funds to them.

As further substantiation for those who believe the UA should have been more critical of the proposal, many fraternities have been meeting and socializing to greater effect than ever before.

We even wonder whether plan

The Immaculate Perception?

A Generation Unknown

The troubling issue Jimmy raised was the problem that there aren't any black athletes dominating professional sports. In fact, the number of African-American professional athletes is far less than the percentage of African Americans in the population. This is a concern because African Americans make up a significant portion of the population and contribute to the success of professional sports. In addition, if African Americans are disproportionately underrepresented in professional sports, why aren't they represented in the media and in policy making at the highest levels of government? This is a problem that needs to be addressed to ensure that black athletes have equal opportunities to succeed in professional sports.

The problem of African-American athletes dominating professional sports is a complex issue. While the lack of diversity in professional sports may be caused by a lack of opportunities for African Americans to participate in sports at a young age, it may also be caused by systemic barriers that prevent African Americans from competing at the highest level of sports. These barriers may include a lack of access to quality coaching and training opportunities, as well as a lack of support from the media and fans. To address this issue, it is important to identify the root causes of the problem and develop strategies to address them. This may include increasing access to coaching and training opportunities, as well as increasing support for African American athletes from the media and fans.

Disney's plan to build a multi-million dollar theme park at the Philadelphia Naval Yard is now "dead in the water," Disney America President Bob Johnson said.

"I don't think we got into anything that would roughly approximate negotiations," Johnson said. "I'm not sure if anyone from the city talked to Disney." BOAKTON — A college teammate and friend of Reggie Lewis recalled statements last night that he had made on June 12, 1992, to the Celtics star during a practice at Boston Garden that the star had left the day before, saying he had been diagnosed with a brain tumor.

The Journal and The Boston Globe, Derick "Red" Barnett, a former teammate of Lewis's and a friend who played basketball with him at Northeastern University, said the comments were made after the Celtics star collapsed during a practice on June 11 and was taken to Children's Hospital, where doctors later found he had a brain tumor.

"We had dinner with Reggie on the night before he left to go to Children's Hospital and he told us that he was diagnosed with a brain tumor," Barnett said.

He said Lewis, a former Northeastern University basketball player, had been expected to play for the Celtics this season.

Barnett said Lewis had been told by doctors that he had a brain tumor and that he would be able to play in the league if he underwent surgery.

He said Lewis had been at Children's Hospital for three days and had been told that he would be unable to play in the league for at least six months.

Even though seniors Jerome Allen, Matt Brey, and Scott Kegler will be graduating in May, the Quakers are hoping to bring in more talent.

Penn coach Frank Dorsey and his staff are looking for a player who can fill the void left by the departing seniors.

With just two weeks left in the regular season, the Quakers need to improve their record to 4-3 in conference play.

Hodgson, a 6-foot-5 forward from Cathedral Prep in Erie, will attend Penn this fall.

The Quakers are looking to improve their record to 9-4 and are hoping to make a run in the Ivy League.

After the loss to the Big Red — the eventual Ivy League champions — Penn ended the season with a 1-3 record in Ivy League play.

The most difficult task of learning how to play the field after starting in left field last season. At all Ivey selection last season, Nester has enjoyed even an error per game this year.

"I am delighted by the team's intensity," Head coach Bob Dunphy said. "They know what it takes to get to the Palestra and in studying business."

GRAPPLERS Season Recap

The Quakers, who only have four starters returning from last season, are looking to improve their record to 8-2 and get some work out of thebanner.

Offensive production has not been a problem for the Quakers.

But the ball slipped elusively past the stick of just 11 midseason loss to Cornell, cost the Quakers the chance to beat the 20th ranked Bears, who entered the dual meet ranked No. 1 in the country.

The Quakers also won a memorable 16-15 thriller. The Quakers came back from a 9-0 deficit to win the game, and beat the Bears 11-10 on the line.

"Getting a young team to play together is going to take some time," she said.
