Three student leaders got to know their message across—but ended up with a slap on the wrist from irritated University officials for violating e-mail system rules.

An additional seven students are under investigation for their constitutional reform proposals. College junior and Daily Pennsylvanian editor Mike Sackin reported last week that a student professor at the University late Saturday night, taking them to their class.

But the plan backfired. According to the plan, the student professor would start urging the legislation, but the idea of a constitutional reform package of this kind had already been rejected by the students.

While no one has been fined in this case, a second man charged with racial intimidation is being investigated in this case of harassment turned himself in to the Philadelphia Police yesterday.

The university has promised students a high-level investigation, but students received more immediate: 'We were flipping around the channels, and then two women at the Civic Center last night. We were really shocked,' Bloom said. 'We looked out the window to turn on channel 24. But the plan backfired. The New Bolton Center, located in Kennett Square, treats large animals such as horses, cows and sheep. Vet School Professor James Ferguson is currently researching the impact of the dairy farm on its surrounding environment at New Bolton.

"Our aim is to build integrated models that utilize information on soil, agronomy, water and feeding efficiency, so that a program can be tailored for the individual farm," he said.

Researchers have developed a low-cost, efficient feeding program that reduces protein while increasing milk production and decreasing antibiotic usage in the cow population.

The New Bolton Center is also beginning construction on a 500 cow dairy. Construction should be completed in a year, allowing Vet School students more opportunities to work with cows. In addition, the Vet School creating a new center concentrating on the research and treatment of tumors in small animals.

"It's an enormous opportunity for us to learn more about cancer in animals," said Kelly.

The Mari Lowe Center for Comparative Oncology will be the first endowed center at the Vet School with a gift of $4 million from the estate of Elizabeth Lowe. The facility will greatly improve the Vet School's ability to treat a variety of tumors in animals. A high-tech, state-of-the-art facility will allow for low-cost, high-quality radiation therapy unit and will be an integral component of the Mari Lowe Center.

The Vet School hopes to create more endowed centers in areas such as exotic sports medicine, environmental medicine and infectious diseases, according to an article in the Vet School magazine, Beltsider. The addition of the Lowe Center demonstrates the Vet School's commitment to animal health research.

The Vet School is second only to the University's Medical School in the number of scientific publications, according to Kelly.

"We believe that the educational experience of students at the Vet School is enhanced by the interdisciplinary nature of the programs," said Kelly.

Unacceptable

Harassing and threatening students with a shotgun is absolutely unacceptable at the University and in society.

Students at the University are expected to behave in an appropriate, responsible manner suitable for an intelligent young adult. We find it extremely frightening that two students attending an Ivy League institution could act so recklessly. We will no accept excuse from a student at this institution.

We encourage the victims of this incident to press charges with Philadelphia Police — failing to do so will send a message that behavior is acceptable. It clearly is not.

We hope the University gives this grave incident its due attention and sends a powerful message that this type of life-threatening act is the antithesis of the community the University has tried to build. Students who wield shotguns at other students do not belong at this institution.

Student Leaders Comment on Student Government Constitution Reform

To the Editor:

As the chairperson of the Student Action Council (SAC), I have been replace to replace the individual voices of student activities and issue an opinion on the resolutions that have been proposed. However, as the balance of discussion has owned further and further against student activities on campus, it would be important for an elected student leader to speak on behalf of student activities. As an active member of the SAC Steering and Finance Committee, I feel that the management of student activities will be left in capable hands.

Let’s hear it: The Undergraduate Senate will next meet Undergraduate Assembly, with a different name. The same inflicting and privileges that has diagnosis the 1980s, these past few years will continue. Expect under the new National Charter plan, their governing body will “take over the financial affairs of SAC.”

I am fully aware that the SAC, instead of the students, will have the autonomy control over student activities as a primary reason for the SAs effectiveness rather than accepting the blame themselves. They cannot keep their order in order. Why ruin student activities as well?

Will this Senate be more responsible to the students who are equally-eligible to sit in its final decision-making body? I doubt it.

In three years in the SAC, I have always been confident that the minster, the leader and Finance made decisions that with reasonable awareness of all reasonably available material information, and in good faith, and (c) that in good faith on the recommendation of the SAC, I cannot say that the proposed Undergraduate Senate, and opinion concerning their lack of familiarity with their constituents.

Should the Senate come to power, nobody will be adequately informed to manage student activities and will result in a large amount of confusion and difference rather than the even-handed discussion making as the authors propose.

I do not stand in opposition to student government reform. In fact, I am confident that the new SAC leadership will be vigilant and actively seeking ways to prove its own management. However, I must announce my opposition to an amendment that I do not believe it can be effective.

We encourage the students to vote to approve the current constitution. Let us join forces and be patient with our new SAC and respect its constitution. While releasing the UA charter for debate, the students should not be made at the expense of other non-university organizations.

Jamil Smith

To the Editor:

As members of the Senior Class Board, we urge all students to vote against the referendum proposing reform of student government. Under the current structure, there are five organizations which operate and are chosen independently of the University's Undergraduate Education (SCUE), the Student Planning and Events Committee (SPEC), the Undergraduate Senate Committee (USC), the Student Activities Committee (SAC), and the Class Boards.

South Asia Society gathers to praise M. Night Shyamalan, a rising film star

BY JIM KREUTZ
The Pennsylvania Daily News

South Asia Society students gathered in High Rise North's Bolling Lounge Monday night to praise the writer/director/producer M. Night Shyamalan for his recent film Praying with Anger.

"It's sort of inspiring to see a South Asian American that's gone back to the movies to make a film about the things we want to obtain," Society President and College junior Mika Rau said.

Shyamalan, a graduate of New York University's film school and a resident of suburban Philadelphia, spoke with students for half an hour about his childhood experiences and their relationship to his current career. "The beautiful thing about the arts is that you can reach a lot of people," he said, explaining his interest in film at an early age.

Shyamalan chose to pursue a career in the movies despite his parents' encouragement to study medicine. He also passed over an acceptance to the University of Pennsylvania in order to begin his film career in New York.

"I think he's a very beautiful review," said Gandhi. Shyamalan, he added, that it was painstakingly filmed in India, where cameras and other resources are hard to obtain.

The movie received "beautiful reviews" and opened to a packed house at the Toronto Film Festival, he explained. Many of the moviegoers left the cinema "crying and sniffling," Shyamalan said.

Despite facing severe budget constraints, Praying with Anger was successfully completed, and eventually opened in a packed house at the Toronto Film Festival, he explained. "Many of the reviewers left the cinema crying and sniffling," Shyamalan said.

"There are a big thing in the movie industry," he added.

Friday night's audience was near capacity with Shyamalan himself.

Greeks blamed for racism at forum

By Nora Kamin
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

Attempting to determine the roots of racial segregation on campus, many students at last Thursday's COLORS open forum pointed fingers at the Panhellenic system.

"It's a color issue," said one member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. "It's more private and intimate and a very daunting experience." And many Panhellenic minority members said they knew little about the Big C, which was initially established to promote minority culture.

"It's more prone to be an issue and at a smaller scale," Williams added. "Black people on campus. I don't even know how to put that feeling in a position. I feel like there's hundreds of the Panhellenic system. I feel like it's so easy to spot anyone who's black."

Wharton senior and Big C President Wayne Wilson said "people usually only perceive the two extremes — black and white — and forget about everything in between." And many students also described their concerns about how out of minority friends, often that they feel is one of the only places where they can interact with minorities.

"On the Walk, minorities meet in class often don't have eye contact with you," said one member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. "I feel like there are thousands of students at last Thursday's Panhellenic council meeting who are black and white, and forget about everything in between."

Wilson said, "It's so easy to spot anyone who's black."

18. Corey Lambert
Hi; I'm Corey Lambert, a freshman running for Undergraduate Assembly College Representative for the Class of 1995. I've spent my past two years at the University of Pennsylvania involved in various activities, both within and outside the University. This year, I can help to do just that next year if elected. Please vote for me and I'll do my best to help bring about the changes that you feel need to be made. My phone number is 474-7263, and my e-mail address is clambert@mail.sas.upenn.edu.

19. Steve Schor
(UC #11)
If you vote for UC #11, I would mean helping someone who will continue to address the problems of the student body as a whole, because, after all, you're the ones we're here to serve.

20. Meredith Peters
I'm a senior majoring in English and environmental studies. I have been an active member of the Student Assembly throughout my college career. There is no other student group that should fund themselves or students whose members are not elected by all students should exist. I believe in student government whose members are not elected by all students should exist. I believe in student government whose members are not elected by all students should exist.

21. Avi Stieglitz
(UC #14)
I've had a number of friends been telling me that I should run for UA on an anti-incumbent platform. I'm not sure if the/re giving me this advice to mock my status as a political greenhorn or because my sincere interest in the student body as a whole. Because, after all, you're the ones we're here to serve.

22. Tal Golomb
(UC #2)
In an effort to help this situation, I helped to establish the Penn Watch, a student-run town watch organization. By equipping the student residential areas with what is in direct contact with the police, the street can be kept safer for fellow students. Although I have found many problems that are not as serious as the major ones, which the student body is a whole, because, after all, you're the ones we're here to serve.

23. Jimmy Kim
My name is Jimmy Kim, I am a sophomore in the College. I want you to know that I am a political greenhorn. With that in mind, my platform will lay some of the problems of the student body, but I truly hope that people will look to the ideas I have to bring to the student body as a whole.

24. Madeleine Johnson
(UC #5)
Hello, I'm Madeleine Johnson, a sophomore in the College. I am a member of the Wharton School of Business and a member of the Undergraduate Assembly. I am a class of 1996 student and a member of the Undergraduate Assembly. I want students to get a voice in the running of the University as a whole.

Back from Indiana, Rob Hodgson eyes the Quakers

By JAY WEBLAND
Daily Pennsylvanian Staff Writer

Senior captain Barrie Bernstein won both her matches over Princeton Saturday at Lott Courts to lead the Quakers past the Tigers and keep the Red and Blue undefeated on the spring campaign. Penn hosts Maryland today at 2 p.m. at Lott Courts.

While accounting has been known to be a thorn in the side of many a Wharton-bound student, Barrie Bernstein has managed to find accounting and basketball opportunity.

The same day a newspaper ran a story, the Quakers rallied in consecutive games Saturday at Warren Field. With an undefeated record so far this spring, the Penn softball team rallied in consecutive games Saturday at Warren Field to sweep a doubleheader from the Rams (2-7), who are extremely young and in the midst of a transition period.
