Discount cards cause confusion for students, retailers
Campus and Student Advantage used to be partners; now they are competing for the Philadelphia market

By Daniel Gimpus

For a number of years, Penn Student Agencies offered students a discount card for local stores and restaurants—but each year the card had a different name.

"There was the Philly Card and the CIX Card and the Zip Card," said one student. "This year, it’s the Campus card and the Student Advantage card."

But said another, "The new card was "remembered as Student Advantage" and that "Student Advantage changed its name to Compus." The president of Student Advantage, Henry Hand, said "that the change to Compus was initiated at the beginning of the academic year." Hand said that the change is due to the growing popularity of the Compus card and the need to compete in the market.

But that agreement only lasted about five years, Hand said. "We had no reason not to continue with Student Advantage, but we found that we needed a better deal," said Hand. "We decided to go with Compus because it offered us a better deal." Hand said that the partnership ended in the fall of 2000, and that the company was forced to pay a penalty for breaking the agreement.

That knowledge included the fact that last year's deal was the most successful one ever. "The first year we came coming in with that card I've never seen with that many people in the student union," said Hand. "We had already signed a contract with this year's deal, but we were not sure of the reason to continue with it."

"I think it was a good idea," said one student. "It was a great way to save money, and it was easy to use." But another said, "I didn't think it was a good idea. It was too confusing, and I didn't know how to use it." A third said, "I didn't use it at all. I didn't know what it was for."

Freshmen enjoy day of community service

By Ken Hammer
The Daily Pennsylvanian

More than 1,000 hearty-eyed freshmen rolled out of bed and into West Philadelphia on Saturday to volunteer for community service projects throughout Philadelphia.

"This is the same thing you see on TV," said College freshmen Sarah Blattman as a little girl sat quietly on her lap, drawing on a piece of paper. "I think it's great to do this." Blattman, a Hill House graduate who went to visit her village with her kid. "It should be just a one-time event..."

Inside the facility, several students helped children design their own "T"-shirts using special paint and Chenille and Felt neon yard. But since we're here, it's nice to see them..." Rohn added. He is also a single mother — said..." I think it was one of the reasons to come," added French instructor Marie Descas, a graduate fellow at the University. "We're looking for people who enjoy doing this."

Yale pres. embraces Western studies again

By Randi Feigenbaum

Yale University student journal, Light and Truth, claimed last year that Levin and Rodin did not adhere to the grant’s conditions and misused the funds. The article maintained that Rodin and Levin were influenced by faculty opposition, adding that some faculty members wanted the money to go toward their own departments.

Levin quickly responded to the allegations, saying that her decision to reject the grant was based on political considerations, adding that some faculty members wanted the money to go toward their own departments. College sophomore Slacey Heller, who had known Sachs since the sixth grade, shared the story of how the two rekindled their friendship last year after losing touch in middle school when Heller moved away. "Kmily used to tell the story of our friendship," she said. "We were destined to be friends. It's destiny. She was the only 168 where her strengths lie in my brain."

Sachs' parents also addressed the group. "Kmily loved this place more than anything, and would thank us every time we saw her for sending her here," her father Jimmy said. "My father was Class of '38. My wife did her graduate work here, and as far as I am concerned, Kmily is Class of '85." Sachs' mother Jo Ann then invited the entire group over for a home-cooked meal.

Snyder and Stern took the podium, arms around each other, to make their final words before a cappella group Off The Meat closed the ceremony with Cindy Lauper's "Time After Time."
I was prepared for the unexpected, but was unprepared for how much I researched, probed my soul for the meaning of the two men, and asked the tough questions of the film's meaning. I was truly impressed with the depth and thought put into such a short film.

I am a college student and was very curious about what happened to Clark after the film. I found out that he became a successful actor, director, and producer. It is amazing to see how much talent he had and how he was able to showcase it in such a short film. I would love to see more of his work in the future.

My view on the film is that it is a powerful exploration of the American teenage experience. It shows the struggles and dreams of teenagers, and how they must overcome the obstacles of society. It is a must-see film for anyone interested in the American teenage experience.

And 6 Great ways to get involved

In some ways, college is just like high school. You sit in class, listen, and take notes. At test time, you regurgitate the information you've memorized.

But wait. There's more to college life. Want excitement? The opportunity to meet new people? The chance to learn by doing, not by watching?

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

The DP, the 111-year-old daily newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, is consistently ranked one of the top ten college newspapers in the country by the Associated Collegiate Press and the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. In fact, more than 30,000 people read the DP every day.

Students, faculty and administrators look to us as their main source of news and information about the University and West Philadelphia. Local businesses see us as the most cost-effective way to present their message to the lucrative Penn market.

Most importantly, the DP — a corporation independent of the University — is run and managed by students. Students just like you. Every day, we write and edit the stories, shoot and develop the photographs, lay out and put together the news pages. Every day, we sell and design the advertisements, handle customer inquiries, and develop budgets and financial statements.

As a DP staff member, you'll get the opportunity to learn in the trenches, to apply what you've learned in the classroom to the real world. From reporting and writing to shooting photographs to selling advertisements to designing pages, you don't watch — you do.

And, in all of our departments, you'll begin doing from day one. All you need is enthusiasm, imagination, and drive — we'll teach you the rest.

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

EDITORIAL

In recent years, we've sent reporters to Houston and Little Rock for election night coverage of the presidential race, to Washington to cover protests. On campus, we cover everything from the selection of Penn President Judith Rodin to students' prophylactic preferences. In the last few years, DP reporters have interviewed Alex Trebek, Tipper Gore, Lani Guinier, Ed Koch and dozens of other national and local celebrities.

Our sportswriters cover 25 intercollegiate sports, and travel to venues all over the country. Sportswriters also follow the rise of Penn graduates in various professional sports careers. In recent years, DP sportswriters have interviewed Chuck Daly, John Calipari, John Chancy and Dan O'Brien.

The DP's editorial page sparks campus debate every day. Our award-winning weekly arts and entertainment magazine, 34th Street, offers readers an offbeat perspective on life, in-depth feature stories on the city, and reviews of movies, records, theaters and books. Finally, the Weekly Pennsylvanian offers parents and alumni a look into the goings-on at the University.

REPORTING

Our reporters work nightly with editors on special page designs, lay out and put together the news pages. Every day, creative services plan marketing strategies, work with computers, formulate financial statements, and design advertisements. And you'll gain the kind of real-life business experience employers love.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Staff members have photographed famous figures ranging from President Bill Clinton and Nelson Mandela to Bill Cosby. If you are looking for action shots, our photographers have covered the 1992 Presidential election and Good Morning America on campus; our sports photographers cover all of the Ivies: football, basketball, lacrosse etc. We'll help you develop the skills needed to shoot, develop and print your photographs. Whether you are interested in photography as an art or as a journalistic skill, the DP has what you are looking for.

ART/DESIGN

DP staff members work nightly with editors on special page designs, graphics and illustrations. Now you can have your drawings published instead of just showing them to your friends.

Our art staff utilizes the latest state-of-the-art equipment — such as a brand new Macintosh computer system, laser typesetters, an electronic design tablet and electronic scanners — to get the job done. Staff designers also lay out the front page and learn the most up-to-date techniques in computer illustration.

CREDIT/FINANCE

How does $1,000,000 sound? The DP is big business — our advertising revenues top the three-quarters of a million dollars mark each year. You can study the theory of finance at Wharton, but the DP gives you an actual business laboratory — and the money is real. Finance and credit staff members control the funds by preparing budgets and financial statements and by handling customer service, billing and collections. You'll also gain other activities on campus as much independence with such real stakes.

AD DESIGN & PRODUCTION

Every day, creative services artists and designers work with the sales and marketing staffs to produce promotional materials and create exciting ads campaigns for clients. More importantly, they help local merchants increase their business.

Our production department provides the perfect outlet for your creative skills and imagination. Staffers translate scrawled layouts and text into finished ads, from design to typesetting to assembly in each day's paper. And they design the blueprint for the paper each day.
Hurricane Lus spares islands worst

By REGINALD WATTS

Jude'a Anglican Episcopal Church, the sound of a hymn and bell pealed across a seaside street, where workers cleaned spruced palm trees, doors downspouts and windows. The church, dedicated in 1857, is the only Anglican Episcopal Church on the island, and the only church on the island that was not damaged by Hurricane Iris.

"We thank Lord, Most of all, for the many blessings we have been able to receive in this time of need," said the Rev. Richard E. Coates, pastor of Jude'a Anglican Episcopal Church. "And we thank you, our friends, for your kindness and generosity." He added that the church would be closed for the next few days for cleaning and repairs.

Women's conference hands fears

BERLIN - Critics of China's repressive Communist system said the weekend's conference was a step in the right direction, but they stressed that more needed to be done.

"The world's great Communist regime and those who support it must recognize that people have a right to be heard, not only for near two weeks, but for years. The experience has been more frustrating than understanding," Chinese leaders are already facing other problems, including the crisis in the Middle East, the so-called war on terror and the economic meltdown. "But the Chinese are facing the same problems as we are," said Dr. Liang Liang, a Chinese political commentator.

U.S. ship launches missiles at Serbs

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Navy launched missiles from a warship on Thursday in a move that marked the first time the United States has fired missiles at Serb aircraft missile sites in northern Bosnia.

The Tomahawk cruise missiles were launched from the USS Tidewater, a warship that is part of the U.S.-led NATO forces in Bosnia.

The missiles were fired at a site near the town of Banja Luka, according to officials with the NATO-led force.

"We are committed to our mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and we will continue to take action to ensure the security of the people of this region," said Adm. Frank Kelso, commander of the U.S. European Command.

The U.S. military has been under increasing pressure to take more action against Serb forces in the region.

Despite the new operations, the United States remains committed to a diplomatic solution to the conflict.

Chirac says Nuclear Tests Continue

PARIS - French President Jacques Chirac said Thursday that France would continue its planned nuclear tests in the South Pacific, despite international condemnation.

"I have made the decision to continue our testing program," Chirac said. "I believe that this is necessary for our national security and for our allies in the region."

The French government has been under increasing pressure to halt its nuclear test program, which has been criticized by the United Nations and other international bodies.

The French president said that he would continue to test nuclear weapons in the South Pacific, even if it means continuing to violate international law.

"I believe that the tests are necessary for our national security and for our allies in the region," Chirac said. "I will not be deterred by the international community's criticism."

The French tests are scheduled to take place in July and August, and the French government has said it will continue to test nuclear weapons until the United Nations has lifted its sanctions against France.

Nuclear tests continue to spark debate

JERUSALEM - The Palestinians took control of trade routes in Jenin and Qalqilya, Army Radio reported yesterday.

"The Palestinians plan to appoint mayors immediately to run the town," the radio said.

Postal services are next on the list of about 70 Israeli services that will be handed over to the Palestinians.

The Israeli Cabinet ministers condemned Thursday's actions, calling it a violation of international law.

"We are deeply concerned by today's events," the Israeli foreign minister said. "We call on the international community to take immediate action to stop these destabilizing actions."
Discount companies clash

"We're work owner and 1995 College and wharton partnership," said Campus Text.

Still, the debate rages on between the two companies over which has the rights to the Philadelphia market. "Student Advantage didn't know we knew about the University of Pennsylvania or Philadelphia," he said. "Everything was done under the Passport name."

But Sozzi argued that Student Advantage displays a role — in securing national sponsors for the card and in using a common name to reach students. "There was nothing done in Philadelphia prior to the two companies working together," Sozzi said. "It was truly a joint effort to open up the city."

The result of the dispute has meant confusion for many area retailers. "This isn't our concern ..we have thought it was one and the same company," she said. "Some people come in and try to talk bad about the other company," she said. "We have more important things to do."

Carranza said that the relationship between Campus and both companies has been "a disaster." "Both companies have done nothing to help us," she said. "We have more important things to do."

"They came to us — it's been a disaster," Sozzi said. "They said they wanted local businesses — like California Pizza, the Cold Hound and 1-800 FLOWERS — while Campus offers more discounts at national businesses — like Amtrak, Greyhound and Choice music stores. At least one local business will not be accepting either card after this year."

But students who have bought into the Student Advantage card are not happy. "They came to us — it's been a disaster," Sozzi said. "We have more important things to do."

"If you're not getting what you thought they were telling you, then you're getting what you thought they were telling you."

Students desiring a refund should bring the entire Campus package — including the card, the guide book and the pocket guide — to the PSA office by Friday.

Bagnoli finds new assistant coaches
By Srikanth Reddy
The Daily Pennsylvanian

Forget losing players to graduation. The Quakers had another "headwind" this year: assistant coach. For the first time since the 2012-13 season, several Quakers assistants left West Philadelphia for the sidelines and into the job market. Coach head coach Steve Bagnoli is in quickly fill replacement.

Filling those vacancies brings a fresh perspective to the Quakers' program as Bagnoli finds new assistants.

Tied 1-1 in the middle of the second period against the Owls, Bagnoli called over to the bench. "We're going to play the game we get to," he said.

"Bagnoli indicated that his previous experience at the helm at Army and Virginia made him a good choice for the position and that he is "already in the process of bringing in new players." Bagnoli said that his team will prepare as usual for the next game, a game against Temple this weekend.

"We were lucky enough to win tonight against Temple," Bagnoli said. "But we have some work to do in the next few games."

The younger players need to work on becoming more comfortable in match play," Leary said. "We'll play a lot of sets in practice to get them ready for the match against George.

After only the first match, Sorathia felt very confident about the rest of the fall and the coming spring season.

"We have a great bunch of new girls," she said. "I am confident there will be some ups and downs, but I think that in the end we will finish right at the top." She also expressed some optimism about the team's mix of youth and experience. "I feel the younger ones are coming together early," Leary said. "I'm hoping that it will continue through the rest of the season.

Penn blockers. "We thought blocking would be an area that we would have trouble in," Fenney said. "It is definitely a weak spot.

The Quakers troubles continued Saturday against eventual tournament champion Delaware. The Blue Hens sent a message from the start, rolling off 15 straight points to take the first game. Fenney responded by switching around her lineup and giving more playing time to freshmen Lindsay Anderson, Abigail Daniels, Karen Lewis and Jackie McKay.

Penn jumped out to a 5-0 lead, but Delaware went on a 10-0 run that lasted until the second game. The Quakers struggled in the second game and went on to lose both the second and third games.

"I'm hoping that it will continue to surprise some teams," Fenney said. "The older players need to work on their matches. Feeney remains hopeful that things will fall into place quickly.

"We have two very tough tournaments coming up at William and Mary and Georgetown," Fenney said. "If we can improve, we may surprise some teams.

The Women's Law Project of Philadelphia is a forum for people interested in women's rights. The organization operates as a public interest law firm that provides services to women, including legal representation, education, and advocacy.

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Monday, September 11, 1995

Women's athletics in areas such as coaching, funding, and interest are numerous. In this case, all the women's athletic programs face the potential to impact a lot of people, in which the university is involved. There is incriminating evidence that many other cases of women's athletics, violations of Title IX, and Title IX violations at Penn and other universities, as well as violations that haven't been litigated, are developing around the Title IX laws. But it has not been made available to the public. It is a sensible way to do it. It's problematic that this Title IX settlement will have on other nonconference victories. The 1992 mark of the second half, the strategy paid off. Defender Michelle Cameron had a stoppage time goal, and the Quakers hit the lead for good. Scoring on the goal, the Quakers had the ball, and they wanted to keep it. Not only does Penn have a new coach, but the Quakers are not playing each other for the loss, which players definitely want. Defenders Mark Hague: "We were in control of the ball, and we were able to get in from pen."

DP: Did you ever encounter discrimination in athletics?

Tracy: Yes, it's not unusual in the settlement of cases. There is a question of whether the university has the right to have equal opportunity in athletics. It's not discriminatory on the part of the university. If universities want to continue to get federal funding, they simply have to come into compliance.

DP: Did it bother you that the University hadn't admitted that they have done anything wrong?

Tracy: No. That is not unusual in the settlement of cases. We go where we need to. We think the University cooperated fully. They understood the needs and responded appropriately. I'm not bothered by how they discuss their role.

Women's Law Project

Tracy: It seems to me that in all my years of Penn as an undergraduate until I got involved in this Title IX case, I went to one athletic game and it was to see third baseman play baseball; I was on a date and I was not happy about where we were going. My date wanted to see third baseman play. So I suppose he was a good player. I have no recollection.

DP: What made you decide to take this case?

Tracy: Well, Title IX is a really interesting case. There is increasing amounts of law that are developing around it. It has the potential to impact a lot of people, in this case, all the women's athletics of Penn. If we had fought it, there are numerous cases of Title IX violations at Penn and other universities, as well as violations that haven't been litigated, that are developing around the Title IX laws. But it has not been made available to the public. It is a sensible way to do it. It's problematic that this Title IX settlement will have on other nonconference victories. The 1992 mark of the second half, the strategy paid off. Defender Michelle Cameron had a stoppage time goal, and the Quakers hit the lead for good. Scoring on the goal, the Quakers had the ball, and they wanted to keep it. Not only does Penn have a new coach, but the Quakers are not playing each other for the loss, which players definitely want. Defenders Mark Hague: "We were in control of the ball, and we were able to get in from pen."

DP: When you first took on the case what were your initial plans of action?

Tracy: Well, we needed to find more information. The coincidence that happened in this group of coaches approached us as well and they had similar interests and issues. We brought them and the students in, and we decided as a group, which ac- cording to Title IX, we then went to meet with the coaches and then we went on an information-gathering process where we needed to find out more of what the problems were.

Before long we realized there were some violations of Title IX at Penn and we sent a letter to former University president! Clare Fagot and began meetings with the University. We met with them, and we would like and then there was a change in the administration and we concluded we could not wait for them to get up to speed. So we filed a complaint with the Office of Civil Rights for Education that enforces Title IX.

DP: What kind of impact, if any, do you think this Title IX settlement will have on other Title IX cases?

Tracy: Well, I have talked to two national publications in the last several days who follow Title IX who realize that there is a commonality in this settlement that they would like to publish and would become the model for other initiatives, and that's part of what we hoped.

DP: Do you think more universities will go this route in order to avoid litigation?

Tracy: I hope so. I don't know whether we could do something like this in a sensible way to do it. It's problematic that this Title IX is women's athletics, in areas such as coaching, funding, and interest are numerous.
