Fake bills prompt strict money policy

By Garrett Edison  The Daily Pennsylvanian

Planning on paying the deposit on University housing this fall? You will have to bring exact change because you won't be able to use counterfeit bills.

Various University departments, especially those in the Marriott Lincon Center, don't accept counterfeit bills because they cannot be reimbursed for counterfeit bills by the bank. If you bring in a fake counterfeit bill, they lose money on that bill.

"Last year, counterfeiting was very prevalent, and you had to be careful," said a junior who was involved with the University's counterfeiting problem last year. "They had to hire security personnel to keep on top of the problem."

According to Prevost, counterfeiting was not rare last year, and the students are being extremely careful this year. "Students who are caught in possession of counterfeit bills are subject to scrutiny. They will lose $50, and the person who has knowledge of the crime is subject to two years in prison, and the person who is making the counterfeit bills is subject to five years in prison."

Each semester, transfer students from colleges around the world come to the University of Chicago to gain admission. The University of Chicago offers a variety of academic programs, and students from all over the world apply to the University. The University has a number of different programs, including undergraduate programs, graduate programs, and professional programs. The admission process is competitive, and students must meet certain requirements to be accepted. The University provides a wide range of resources to help students succeed, including academic support services, financial aid, and extracurricular activities. The University is committed to providing a diverse and inclusive community for all students.
National bioethics conference held at U.

Expert discusses ethics of health care

By Sarka Gorg

The nation's 150 most influential bioethicists, attorneys met for the second annual conference of the American Association for the Advancement of Bioethics, held at the University of Pennsylvania.

Arthur Caplan, AAB president and director of the University's Center for Bioethics, opened the convention by describing the benefits of bioethics. "Bioethics is the art and science of ethics in health care."

At the start of the meeting, several bioethicists addressed the creation of the new field, he added that it currently has one of the largest centers in the world for bioethics.

Dr. Caplan explained that the conference will address the agenda for addressing future issues in bioethics, such as the manipulation of genetic information and the use of virtual reality for therapy. Bioethics generally looks at issues ranging from rationing health care to physician assisted suicide, reproductive technologies, fetal tissue banking and genetic engineering.

Dr. Caplan also said that bioethics is an area that is often overlooked and not understood by the public. He stressed that resources must be allocated to bioethics centers around the country are thinking care and its impact on the patients in the future.

He said that for many people just entering the field of bioethics, the Center for Bioethics is ideal, adding that it is rapidly becoming one of the nation's largest centers.

Seniors to have first ‘Screamer’ Saturday

By Kara Blond

The Daily Pennsylvanian

After three years of paying their dues as underclassmen, seniors can finally look forward to enjoying drink specials and the best — party.

The event is scheduled to begin at 10 p.m.

Senior Screamer and fellow seniors said the Saturday Screamer was designed to hold the first Screamer on the night of the season’s first football game.

It’s kind of a bonding experience..." Senior Class President Chang said all seniors are encouraged to have fun and enjoy the party.

Chang said the Class Board is looking forward to the senior events for the year.

Offering an Unqualified Opinion

The Daily Pennsylvanian welcomes comments. In common with the rest of the city and culture, the Daily Pennsylvanian prefers pithy and to the point reactions.

Any letters submitted for publication must include the author's name, phone number and a description of university affiliation. Letters should be shorter than 300 words, and printed lightly in typewriter inside.

I cannot begin to explain how utterly disturbed I was when Charles Ornstein's columns for the "Kid's Myth: Pop Culture's Kids" series appeared. The Daily Pennsylvanian is an influential university newspaper, which functions as a mouthpiece for the student body. The context of the "Kid's Myth" series was disturbing, as the articles purported to analyze contemporary youth culture, particularly concerning the portrayal of children in media. The articles aimed to debunk stereotypes and highlight the dangers of reducing children to simplistic roles in society. However, the articles seemed to reinforce existing biases and stereotypes, thereby exerting a negative influence on the perception and treatment of children.

Ornstein's columns often accused society of treating the young as mere objects, devoid of agency and autonomy in their own actions. The articles often referred to children as "the kids," and in doing so, the Daily Pennsylvanian tacitly reinforced the idea that children are best viewed through the lens of their age rather than as individuals with complex, human emotions and experiences. The columns were written in such a way as to be evocative but also to encourage reader reflection and contemplation. The tone of the articles suggested an urgent need for societal change to address the exploitation and misrepresentation of children in media and popular culture.

Ornstein's analysis was thought-provoking and sparked debate among readers. The columns were characterized by a strong emphasis on responsible and ethical journalism, with a critical eye toward the portrayal of children in media, suggesting they could influence societal norms and practices. The articles addressed how media representations of children contribute to real-world implications, such as policies regarding child labor, education, and healthcare. The Daily Pennsylvanian continued to publish articles that addressed similar themes, emphasizing the need for a more nuanced portrayal of children in society. These columns contributed to a larger conversation about media ethics and the responsibilities of journalists in shaping public opinion.

The "Kid's Myth" series was well-received by readers, who appreciated the thought-provoking nature of the articles. However, there was also criticism, with some readers questioning the approach and methodology used by Ornstein. The series raised questions about the role of journalism in society, particularly in relation to the portrayal of children. The Daily Pennsylvanian continued to publish articles that addressed similar themes, emphasizing the need for a more nuanced portrayal of children in society. These columns contributed to a larger conversation about media ethics and the responsibilities of journalists in shaping public opinion.

Serb air defense damaged by missiles

NATO vows to continue air attacks until Serbs withdraw from Bosnia

SABARDOVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina: American cruise missiles badly dam- aged Bosnian Serb defenses. NATO said yesterday, warning to keep its at- tacks until the Serb forces in Bosnia are left in place for Western warplanes. The Serbs were battered, warning that it was showing no signs of an end to the fighting.

"The Tomahawk missiles fired from our aircraft hit hard and fast," NATO's general said. "They have no defenses to protect them or their civilians."

Serbian Field Marshal Pavle Bulatovic, who is in command of the Serb forces, said he had no intention of withdrawing his troops until the minimum sentence of a single objection. He claimed that his soldiers had no defenses to protect them from NATO's cruise missiles.

With the Serbs suffering from NATO's bombs, the Bosnian government took advantage of the situation to explore a strategic village and gain control of a route linking government buildings in northern and central Bosnia.

NATO's field marshal said that NATO was working with the government army, the Bosnian government, and the United Nations to prepare a joint strike. He said that the daring air attack will test the resolve of the Serb leadership.

The Serbs have so far resisted NATO's demands to take back control of the area and withdraw forces.

For the Serbs, removing weapons around Sarajevo appears to be a secondary issue, because the meeting of foreign ministers in Geneva on Fri- day already established the basic point.

The cruise missiles, used in Bosnia for the first time, were fired at direct, anti-aircraft missile sites and commu- nications stations near the northern stronghold of Buna. Luka.

Murray, the NATO spokesman, re- fused to say what the missiles hit. Al- though the damage was reported febrile, he said the air defenses were still work- ing, although some may be taken out.

Serb television in Banja Luka said Monday night that five of the Tomahawk- hawk's radio relay stations in the Sarajevo mountains, 30 miles north of Buna Luka. They caused mass-dam- age to life and other heavy weapons.

NATO's "stealth" fighters were based in Italy. There was no footage of the damage in northern New Mexico, pilot of I- T-1A "stealth" fighters at Holman Air Force Base were quoted that they might be called in for NATO missions over Bosnia, officials said. The officials gave no time line for deployment of the 24 million Tomahawks, which would take up a week.

Bosnian Prime Minister Izetbegovic said that despite the heavy Serb resistance, "NATO's military might has broken the back of the Serb army in Bosnia." He said the Serbs were now in their last days. The Bosnian government could continue the attacks with a series of bombings that would "leave them with no place to go."

The NATO air campaign is a war of attrition, "it is a war with no end," Murray said.

A great university. A great newspaper. And 6 Great ways to get involved

In some ways, college is just like high school. You sit in class, listen, and take notes. At test time, you regurgitate the information you've memorized.

But wait. There's more to college life.

Want excitement? The opportunity to meet new people? The chance to learn by doing, not by watching?

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

The 'DP', the 111-year-old daily newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, is consistently rated one of the top ten college newspapers in the country by the Associated Collegiate Press and the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. In fact, more than 30,000 people read the DP every day.

Students, faculty and administrators look to us as their main source of news and information about the University and West Philadelphia. Local businesses see us as the most cost-effective way to present their message to the lucrative Penn market.

Most importantly, the DP — a corporation independent of the University — is run and managed by students. Students just like you. Every day, we write and edit the stories, shoot and develop the photographs, lay out and put together the news pages. Every day, we sell and design the advertisements, handle customer inquiries, and develop budgets and financial statements.

As a DP staff member, you'll get the opportunity to learn in the trenches, to apply what you've learned in the classroom to the real world. From reporting and writing to shooting photographs to selling advertisements to designing pages, you don't watch — you do.

And, in all of our departments, you'll begin doing from day one. All you need is enthusiasm, imagination, and drive — we'll teach you the rest.

 REPORTING

In recent years, we've sent reporters to Houston and Little Rock for election night coverage of the presidential race, to Washington to cover protests. On campus, we cover everything from the selection of Penn President Judith Rodin to students' prophylactic preferences. In the last few years, DP reporters have interviewed Alex Trebek, Tipper Gore, Last Gainer, Ed Koch and dozens of other national and local celebrities.

Our sportswriters cover 25 intercollegiate sports, and travel to venues all over the country. Sportswriters also follow the rise of Pennsylvania's local and various professional sports careers. In recent years, DP sportswriters have interviewed Chuck Daly, John Calipari, John Chaeysy and Dan O'Brien.

The DP's editorial page sparks campus debate every day. Our award-winning weekly arts and entertainment magazine, 34th Street, offers readers the latest state-of-the-art equipment — such as a brand new Macintosh computer system, laser typesetters, an electronic design tablet and electronic scanners — to get the job done. Staff designers also lay out the front page and learn the most up-to-date techniques in computer illustration.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Staff members have photographed famous figures ranging from President Bill Clinton and Nelson Mandela to Bill Cosby. If you are looking for action shots, our photographers have covered the 1992 Presidential election and Good Morning America on campus. Our sports photographers cover all of the likes: football, basketball, lacrosse etc. We'll help you develop the skills needed to shoot, develop and print your photographs. Whether you are interested in photography as an art or as a journalistic skill, the DP has what you are looking for.

ART/DESIGN

DP staff members work nightly with editors on special page designs, graphics, and illustrations. Now you can have your drawings published instead of just showing them to your friends.

Our art staff utilizes the latest state-of-the art equipment — such as a brand new Macintosh computer system, laser typesetters, an electronic design tablet and electronic scanners — to get the job done.
