Church may be renovated

Anne Curley Harrison, who works with the University's Office of Campus Planning, said the University Church may be renovated. "There are currently plans to add 600-800 seats," she said. "The next steps will be to find the money." The renovations are expected to begin within the next two months.

However, the cost of the renovations is currently unknown. "The University needs to find money to fund the renovations," Harrison said. "The cost is estimated to be around $5 million." The renovations will include the addition of a new wing to the church, which will provide more space for meetings and events. The renovations are expected to be completed within the next year.

The lightweight football team, which squared off against Princeton in the season opener last fall, has lost its other two games this season, and the Quakers opened their year with a poor performance against Cornell. But then they went on an impressive run for these games and began themselves thinking of a share of the ELFU title for the first time in years. Last week, with the emotional roller coaster, the team was consistently displayed.

Two prominent symbols of this unity for the Quakers are Gordy Hotchkiss, Who recently announced his resignation, and Sharon Frazee. "Our inconsistency was mainly due to youth," Scotl said. "But we have made some strides in the area and hope we'll make some more in another big step."

The University should provide University Police officers with semiautomatic weapons.

In a trend that continues to gain momentum nationally, Penn Public Safety Manager Director Thomas Seamon is seriously considering arming University Police officers with semiautomatic weapons. This move, already made by numerous urban colleges, would demonstrate that the administration is serious about protecting the community. We are encouraged by Seamon's desire to take aggressive measures in order to prevent crime on campus and hope he decides to trust his officers with these new weapons.

For far too long University Police officers have had to protect campuses and themselves with .38 caliber revolvers, while criminals threaten them with blazing automatic weapons. The time has come to arm University Police officers with the necessary resources to protect us.

The men’s cross country team will try to end the season on a high note when it runs in the Ivy League Championships this weekend. The Quakers have shown in the races. The biggest challenge will be the top finishers in tomorrow’s meet are nationally ranked. Georgetown's, William and Mary and Villanova are expected to be strong.

Coming off a poor performance at the Heptagonal, the Quakers hope to put things right this time around. "The goal for the team is to win," said Penn coach Charlie Powell. "We are in much better condition than we were a year ago." The Quakers hope to try to end the season on a high note, but they need to get their timing right this time.

Junior Michelle Betsley, who finished 54th, said, "I hope to break 15 minutes." Betsley disappointing last place finish at the Heptagonal Championships two weeks ago, is ready to get back on track. "The very best runners in the country are coming to tomorrow’s ECACs in Boston. After a disappointing last-place finish at Wake Forest two weeks ago, coach Betsley Columbus and Tony Powell opted not to send any of the team’s athletes to the ECACs, said Powell.

Federal deficit appears more likely

GOP and Clinton continue to differ on budget

WASHINGTON — With a potential budgle deficit and government shutdown at stake, Congress bowed over a pair of budguttle protests yesterday by passing over a two-tier version of a roll call to a pitting veto showdown with President Clinton.

The White House because of unacceptable provisions, even though the government's subsidies to borrow and spend issue next week.

This declaration prompted furious response from the president, who said the bill would cut back on the federal work force.

Clinton vetoed 351-194 for another bill extending federal bureaucracy authority down to December 12. Leaders hoped the Senate would complete both bills in a weekender.

Administration officials pledged that both bills would meet vetoes at the White House.

V-Ball takes a shot at Ivy title

By Brett Cohen

The Daily Pennsylvanian

It has been the ultimate goal all season for the Penn women's volleyball team: play the Ivy league. Every league game was matched up to play at least once. Every season has been played to prepare to help the team improve in various ways for these three days. Twenty six matches and hundreds of points leading up to one weekend of action at the Palestra. The basis for a successful season is the Ivy league tournaments. These days. Five games. One title. Penn, which enters the event as the fourth seed, begins its bid to improve its standing in the league on Friday with a 1 p.m. match against fifth seeded Harvard. After last week's disappointing 22-9 loss to Princeton, Penn is playing solely for pride.

The Quakers believe they have as good a shot at winning Ivy title as any team. This tournament could not have come at a better time for the Quakers. Last weekend, at the Ivy league tournament, Penn defeated the Ivy league champion and defeated five other Ivy league teams. It was a great weekend for the Quakers. Most of the time it was Penn allowing other teams to come at a better time for the Quakers. Last weekend, Murphy said we still think we're a good football team, and we are a good team with nine goals, which is good enough for fifth in the overall Ivy league standings.

It's a good, well-organized team that's building for the future, said Penn co-captain Andrew Krakul. "But if we come out and play our game, they're going to have to deal with us and not the other way around."

Steve Marchikewicz is hoping the Penn men's soccer team can end its disappointing season with a victory over Dartmouth tomorrow.

Penn playing out string for pride alone

By Lee Goldsmith

Penn senior wide receiver and captain Miles Mack has played games for Ivy league opponents. He has played games in different settings all season. After last week's 22-9 loss to Princeton, Penn is playing solely for pride.

Penn is playing its final game of the season tonight against Harvard in the Palestra. The Quakers are looking to end the season with a victory over Dartmouth tomorrow. The Quakers will try to control the ball on the ground with running backs like Jasen Scott (shown here at William & Mary Oct. 14) when they visit Harvard tomorrow at 1 p.m. After last week's disappointing 22-9 loss to Princeton, Penn is playing solely for pride.

asesf M. Soccer eager to improve on last year

By Ana Balakrishna

It’s a long and winding road for the 15 sessions on the Penn men’s soccer team, and since they fed a way past Dartmouth tomorrow, they’ll end right back where they started three years ago — in last place.

In 1998 the Quakers (5-10, 1) by Longhorns at the bottom of the Ivy League with only one conference victory. History doesn’t have to repeat itself. With one game remaining, the Quakers are one win away from finishing the season with a winning record. The Quakers have held their own against nationally ranked teams such as Brown and Cornell. What sports the players most is what possibility of might have been. "Maybe we’re not focusing enough at practice," said co-captain Steve Marchikewicz. "The season has been very disappointing. Still, it would be nice to end with a win. I’m looking forward to it."

Penn soccer has a strong tradition of pigskin prognostication. The quotes are real. So are the turbans.

"Ifie quotes are real. So are the turbans."
