The newspaper "open talk" bills itself as a "forum on discussion of Penn issues." But to juniors in the class, it is an "intellectual nexus for the campus." "I've been involved with open talk for years," said Paul Lukasiak, one of the class organizers. Lukasiak said he posts so frequently because he feels that much of the content with fewer words also loses value.

He also likes the newspapers because "I'm not very articulate in person," he said.

Admin. asks students to give food vouchers to panhandlers

By Ben Hammer
The Daily Pennsylvanian

University officials are considering a new tactic in the war against panhandling around campus.

Carol Scheman, vice provost for government, community and public affairs, told the Daily Pennsylvanian that the University wants to stop well-meaning students from giving change to beggars who use the money to buy drugs.

"We don't think it's good for people to hand money to panhandlers," Scheman said. "We also don't think it's good for the University, because they can.

Under the plan, students who purchase vouchers for food and beverages from local homeless organizations and give the vouchers to panhandlers. Area businesses would donate the goods.

Glenn Bryan, director of community relations, said the plan is aimed at not stigmatizing students who give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts, it would encourage charities to give money to drug addicts.

Bryan said the plan would be beneficial to students, shelters and local businesses in hopes of garnering support for the plan.

According to Bryan, Penn ap

troduced the University City Hospital Coalition, a local soup kitchen, about fundraising by sel ing the vouchers.

And Bryan said the Wawa Food Market at 363 and Chestnut Street has expressed interest in participating in the program.

College senior Jennifer Lynch, who submitted an idea for the plan, said she was "ecstatic." Lynch, president of Pennsylvania Associated Students, said that she and Scheman have discussed the plan.

"There was a lot of support that one of the most important things that we could do was to help students understand that they might actually be doing more harm by giving them money," Lynch said.

Bryan said the plan will be presented to students, faculty and staff in December and the University is focusing on log

Human Resources has a new leader

Davidson adjusts to life at Penn

By Garrett Edison
The Daily Pennsylvanian

Like many freshmen, Clint Davidson is learning to cope with his new environment.

Davidson, a chemical engineering major, was named to the position of vice president for human resources in late October.

"I'm trying to make the transition to the new Penn," Davidson said.

Davidson, who has been a member of the mechanical engineering department at the University since 1994, said he is looking forward to his new role.

"I'm excited about the opportunity to work with some great people and to help make the University a better place," Davidson said.

Davidson said he hopes to work in human relations since age

The prom theme this year was the Great Gatsby. The students were dressed in tuxedos and gowns, and the theme was "The Rearing Twenties," which featured music from the 1920s through the 1960s playing in the background. The prom featured a sit-down dinner, a live band, and dancing, with music from the 1940s through the 1960s playing in the background. Malodorous Russians storm Palestra; Big Red find gorge

By Scott Miller

Well since most avid readers are probably already piss drunk at home in their Thursday joy binges, we humbly present the Wise-Carins-Because-No-One-In-Reading-This-Anytime Edition of Ivy Roundup.

So, while they're sitting in Long Island driving their BMWs to the Hamptons, we'll simply do our weekly tour around the League, just to provide our faithful readers the inherent knowledge in this fine feature.

Before we immerse ourselves in the world of Roundup, we'd like to provide a public service announcement.

A young woman was walking by the Palestra this weekend, waving to the press. We'd like to remind everyone that Phila. laws prohibit this kind of thing. And we'd like to remind our backers that our last weekend's gross profit was $25.

Furthermore, we at Roundup don't care whether you're Russian or Dunphy, but no one shows King anything — he's just too good. At least that's what he thinks.

As for the rest of those on Comments, we'd like to remind everyone that comments were a quality basketball team. And they sucked at that.

Unfortunately for the Commies, the hits just kept on coming. Another Good Ref #1 stepped up to our beloved Russian star and announced that he was a quality basketball team. And they sucked at that.

Thom Ruskins weren't Zeftfully clean

This time, however, the high school outshone his Ivy League knowledge it seemed that Thom was wearing orange and black. Exact-ly.

Unfortunately, we at Roundup nore your help. We were unable to track down those refs, or even get their names. If you are a Good Ref, or have seen one around your house, please call the Roundup hotline at 1-888-RUNDYOP.

The Daily Ilbonan Saunter of the Week

Think back. It was the Thursday before the Cornell-Penn football game. We at Roundup were outlining just what to round up. Suddenly, the phone rang.

"This is the Cornell Daily Sun. Can you give us directions to the Schaeffer Rink?" "Okay, still on campus, read — we're gonna throw your goal posts into the river!" "Chuck, you're going to need a Russian interpreter from the depths of Russia. The Daily Schmucks declared that a last-ditch effort to save their pride they would try to track the Quakers. Well, needless to say, after an enam- orating and devastating loss at our hands, Roundup afficionados needed to pay the Daily Sun a little visit via phone. Of course, the Daily Sun's telemarketers had to be round up. They were unable to reach the Cornell Scorpions and were forced to call the Russian Community Center for help. We were unable to reach the Russian Community Center for help. Thanks to our friends at the Russian Community Center, the Daily Schmucks declared that a last-ditch effort to save their pride they would try to track the Quakers.

The Corky of the Week

As we watched with great anticipation as our football squad was dressing the Big "chew 'em up and spit 'em out" Red Crew, we were glad to see a young peacenik clip- ple, with just enough intelligence to go to Drexel. Apparently on a quest to find a freshman here at Penn, he got up and proudly an-

"I'm a freshman at Drexel, do you know my friend?"

Surely to say we didn't, but he asked a cheerleader just in case he would know.

Meanwhile, we at Roundup received with glee news that University of Pennsylvania Hard Core was now made up of loaded champs aimed at Corky's direc-

Drexel boy was a bit messed up

"Can you call me?" yelled, his two-in-

Dressed in a Drexel hat and Drexel shorts, his phone was on speaker mode. He kept his popularity alive by getting us to chat. "Pennsylvania sucks!" he said screaming with excitement. The previous night, he had visited the future of Drexel in his "chew 'em up and spit 'em out" Raw crew.

It's back to being a Drexel grad.

Thank God we'll never have to see him again.

Cheerful, we're taking drt.

The problems caused by Dining Services Director Bill Casey was recognized as an issue in the management of The World Fast for Hunger overshadowed the benefits of the program.

Dining Services Director Bill Casey said that Monday that the University is concerned because there are too many students, both those that participate and those that do not, that are not using Dining Services for the program. These students have every right to eat elsewhere.

As part of the program, students who agreed to participate were offered a meal for 25 cents. These meals were paid for on the spot by international hunger relief organization. But this Monday, a student was heard to say that a hunger meal or dinner on campus was not entirely given to charity. The charity organization only received a fraction of that food.

Casey explained that "there's still electricity being paid and labor that's still being paid. It's based on the cost of the food that an average student contributes to this program. This discrepancy was never clearly explained, he said. Many students thought that the entire cost of a meal which ranges from $5.57 to $8.23, would be given to charity. The charity actually received only $2.15 for a meal.

Here's the problem: Students were offered a meal coupon at no cost, but to get a meal they would have to go to the university, and they would have to pay for the meal.

Balkan leaders end 3 1/2 years of fighting

The agreement provides for Bosnia's division into two entities, a Muslim-Croat federation that will control 51 percent of the land with a five-member presidency lead by a Muslim, a Catholic and a Bosniak Muslim. The other entity would control 49 percent of the land and be run by a Bosnian Serb led presidency. The agreement also includes a provision for the international community to provide a peacekeeping force.

We've reached a day many believed would never come," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher, providing his evening announcement as America's chief diplomat.

The agreement was signed at the State Department by Bosnian leaders and representatives of the international community. The council consists of three main components: the Serbs, the Croats, and the Muslims. The council is composed of five members, with each group representing two of the constituent councils.

"We've reached a day many believed would never come," said Warren Christopher, Secretary of State.

Specter to abandon campaign for pres.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Arlen Specter, languishing with most other Republican presidential candidates in the campaign race for the primary, decided yesterday that he would abandon the struggle for the Republican nomination for president of the United States.

The day before a crucial primary in Pennsylvania, the candidate for several years offered a strong chance in the state was out of the race.

"I have decided not to campaign in any additional primaries in this campaign," Specter said in a brief statement. "We have reached a point where the prospects for success in the remaining primaries are nil.

Specter's decision came two days after he finished fourth in fellow Republican Bob Dole's native Kansas in the state's primary. Specter also finished in a disappointing fifth place in a special election in New Jersey on May 14.

Specter's campaign has been run with an eye toward the primary campaign but with an eye toward the general election as well.

"The people of the United States finally have a viable candidate," Specter said.

could have done a lot better. Although Princeton lost most of the matches, the Swimmers and Divers "had a great meet." Several swimmers showed they could be competitive against some of the best swimmers in the nation. Junior Art Frieson was the only Princeton swimmer to win both events, taking first place in both the 200 individual medley and the 200 butterfly. Senior Greg Manger had a great meet against the All-American Trackers and also placed in the first place in the 100 breast stroke and 400 free relay. "We had some really good swimmers against some of the top swimmers from the Ivy League," said art. "It was a great performance for our team."

Keller finished second in that event. Together, Manger, Frieson, and Brown placed second to the 400 freestyle relay for the second best time of the weekend.

Flyers knock off Kings at the Spectrum

John LaClair, Bird Broaden Amick and Mike Ramsey scored in a two-minute span of the third period last night to give the Philadelphia Flyers the last-place Los Angeles Kings 3-2.

Philadelphia won its fourth straight game and is in first place in the Pacific Division. Los Angeles, which has lost two straight, dropped to third place.

Pat Verbeek scored an empty-net goal with less than a minute left to give the New York Rangers a 6-4 win over the New York Islanders last night.

The Rangers, playing perhaps their best game of the season, scored two power-play goals in each period against the North American-leading Islanders.

They also drew a standing ovation after giving up only six goals in the last 15 games, and they outscored the Islanders 6-1 while playing short-handed.

Verbeek completed the hat trick with the game-tying goal with 1:03 left in the game, but 2-0 with a third power-play goal.

The Islanders, 0-2-1 in their past three games, led 2-0 after one period but couldn't hold on.

LaClair scored 2:30 later and tied the score at 2-2 late in the game. With 28 seconds left, Broaden-Amick scored to give Philadelphia its first win in six games.

Graduation rates are a total disgrace

Legendarary coach John Chaney’s career record as the head coach of the men’s basketball team at Temple is 523-186. That’s an 80 percent winning rate over a period of 35 years. The last six years. That’s good for some people, but not for me, the 7-foot-4-inch Tall, who adores the game of basketball. I think that his record is good for the Big East, but it has nothing to do with me.

The most recent NCAA survey of graduation rates at Howard shows that 100 percent of Howard’s men’s basketball players have graduated. Pennsylvania State University was the only other school to have a graduating rate of 100 percent. Temple’s graduating rate was 48 percent.

The Quakers in Action

Turkey, USC await Men’s Basketball

When the Penn men’s basketball team returns to the Palestra tomorrow evening, one such encounter will be with the University of Southern California. Thanks for that in the season opener is scheduled for 7:30 at the Palestra.

"We’re happy to get right into it and play a good team," senior forward Cedric I.aster said. "Practice is getting movier. There have been some pretty nice goals already set on the goal, but we’re not a little disappointed that we were.

"The same is expected when the Quakers meet the USC on Tuesday night. This year’s game is scheduled for 7:30 at the Palestra. The Quakers will have prepared for the Trojans in the form of practice Friday following a tasty home-meet with the Owls.

"We’re coming out to win all our games," Krug said. "We’ve got our own game, we’ll show them ours. No one is going to get us Friday night. Honestly, we’ll show them how we can play.

The Quakers would gladly trade their victory for a chance to show the world that they can play.

Ivy stars acknowledged

All-Ivy Football Team

Almost every Ivy League school has a football team, but not all of them are as successful as the Penn football team. The Quakers have won 11 of the last 12 Ivy League games, and they have a chance to win the championship this year.

The Penn football team may not have taped the Ivy League this season, but it did lead the league in representatives in the Ivy League first team all-squad.

The All Ivy first team and second teams were selected for the Ivy League, and the Year awards were announced yesterday and were based on a vote of the eight league head coaches.

When Natasha Baca announced her decision to transfer from Penn to the University of Minnesota, she was coming off a breakthrough season as the women’s basketball player of the year. Baca had started in 11 of 15 games and was the nation’s 10th leading scorer.

Baca, who had three years of eligibility left, was also the Ivy League player of the year. The Ivy League player of the year is chosen by the coaches, and Baca was chosen by the coaches.

The successor to the Quakers’ leading scorer, sophomore Carl Spivey, will also be one of the starters on the first team.

The Owls have won two of their last three games, and they are looking to build on their success.

The Owls will have to overcome the impressive defense of the Quakers, who are currently ranked 25th in the nation.

"It’s going to be a tough game," said McHale. "But we’re ready for it. We’ve been practicing hard and we’re excited about playing against a top team."
