EVALUATION OF A NURSING HOME

By M. B. Smith

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Docent: 898-6585  Business: 898-6581

In the nursing home, the nurse who is responsible for the patient's care should be able to speak with authority about the patient's condition. This is especially true in the case of patients who are in the terminal stage of illness.

The nurse should be able to communicate effectively with the patient and their family. The nurse should also be able to provide emotional support to the patient and their family.

The nurse should be able to provide accurate information to the patient and their family about the patient's condition. This includes information about the patient's diagnosis, treatment options, and prognosis.

The nurse should be able to provide education to the patient and their family about the patient's condition and treatment options. This includes information about the patient's medications, nutrition, and self-care.

The nurse should be able to provide emotional support to the patient and their family. This includes providing comfort to the patient and their family, and helping them to cope with the patient's illness.

The nurse should be able to provide physical care to the patient. This includes providing personal care, such as bathing and grooming, and providing comfort measures, such as pain management.

The nurse should be able to provide ongoing evaluation of the patient's condition. This includes monitoring the patient's vital signs, assessing the patient's response to treatment, and communicating with the patient and their family about the patient's condition.
Students use Christmas lights to start rivalry in Superblock

By Jamie Phillips

In keeping with the holiday season, Alpha Chi Omega's officers showed their competitive spirit by lighting up three lights in their High Rise North window. The sorority's message spelled out "Who's Number One?" — a clever way to show their spirit while showcasing their talents. The Alpha Chi Omega sisters were able to light up the windows due to the generosity of the dorm's electricity. The illumination of the windows is in keeping with their efforts to stay on top of the competition and to show their spirit to the other residents of the dorm.

The show will be on exhibit until the first week of January.

Residents find foxes in Quadrangle again

By Dina Bass

Just when you thought it was safe to walk the floors of Quadrangle without stepping in a poop, another toilet incident has once again been left in the dormitory.

"The Mad Shitter" by residents, last time surfaced in the spring, terrorizing the two rooms in Butcher found eviscerated in broad daylight, between 2:13 p.m. and 9:50 a.m., according to residents. The second happening is the second time that students actually went on an investigation from Fox to Quadrangle, which occurred two years ago, with 1,800 trees and bushes, the arboretum serves as the official arboretum of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The Morris Arboretum, which is located at 100 Ridge Avenue, was founded in 1897. It is an excellent place to gain an inside look at the science of plants and how they grow. Over 1,800 trees and bushes are maintained at the arboretum for the use and benefit of the public.

The arboretum is also an important part of the University.

Two of its staff members teach courses at the University, and the arboretum has sponsored numerous workshops and seminars for the public.

The facility also hosts many educational programs throughout the year, as well as guided tours for both members and non-members. Membership costs $25 per year.

For more information, visit the arboretum's new World Wide Web site at http://www.upenn.edu/morarboretum/index.html. Admittance is free to University students with identification. The arboretum is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Additional information may be obtained by calling 215-287-7722 or by visiting the arboretum's new World Wide Web site at http://www.upenn.edu/morarboretum/index.html.

The explosive growth of the Internet. The "Information Revolution" is both a misleading term and an overrated term.

Information is a valuable asset. But the information explosion is not creating a new society. It is creating a new economy. The information society is emerging online as an e-commerce society. Already, the Internet is a valuable tool for individuals to create a new identity. And as part of this new identity, the Internet is a valuable tool for individuals to create a new identity. J ust when you thought it was safe to go back in the water, the dying shark of political correctness is making a final lung to the surface. The shark had been contained in the beam of the spotlight by the fall of the speech code. Like hungry minions waiting to lap up the moronic charges, secretaries of justice and color blindness were on the verge of ending race based quotas and satisties.

The end was near. But not for long. Political correctness is back, at the University and elsewhere.

In recent years, speech codes have been the rage on college campuses. Rodin has been praised for adding to the code some of the measures that had been advocated by the fall of the speech code. Like hungry minions waiting to lap up the moronic charges, secretaries of justice and color blindness were on the verge of ending race based quotas and satisties.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Response to IAA Controversy

To the Editor:

The series of OP articles dated 11/29/95, covering alleged misuses of SAC funds by the IAA was factually inaccurate and quite misleading. If the OP, committed SAC accounting, it would know that any coverage is covered by revenue misused. The OP has intentionally mishandled its own articles, which began with an utterly specious and deceitful assertion that the IAA had been "abusing" SAC funds. SAC doesn't know what it's doing with its funds, and by its own admission, its entire budget is composed of student fees. If the OP means to suggest that the IAA is a fraud, it should present evidence to that effect. The OP has never shown any cause to believe that the IAA is a fraud.

In the same issue, IAA editorially irreverently mistook for news the fluff serving to "substantiate" its rumor of fraud. This brings me to my other point the IAA has intentionally mishandled its own articles, schizophrenic, accusations with contradictory assertions especially in the same issue.

Mission will bring 20,000 American soldiers into Balkan states

WASHINGTON — Billary Rodham Clinton opened Wednesday what she called a peace mission that will bring 20,000 American soldiers into Bosnia and Herzegovina, setting up communications with the Serbs who are refusing to join the Dayton peace accord that ended the 3 1/2-year-old war.

"We will be in a position to continue the [peace] process," said James D. Smith, the U.S. ambassador to the region.

Smith will continue as president and chief executive.

The company also said Harry H. Pearce, a GM executive vice president, will be replaced as chairman and chief executive of the GM board.

"We're not in a position to make any further comment," said Anthony A. Spadone, a Spadone.

In his new role, Smith will replace Harry G. Seeley, who had led the company since May 1995.

Bomb explodes near govt seat in Grozny

Explosion deemed work of 'handful of extremists'; 11 killed and more than 60 injured in blast

GROZNY, Russia - In the latest bloodshed in Chechnya, a car bomb exploded outside the Russian administration headquarters yesterday, killing at least 11 people and injuring more than 60.

The bomb went off shortly after noon in downtown Grozny, the Chechen capital, blowing out the side of the Russian administration headquarters. At least 11 people died and more than 60 were injured.

The Russian administration building was shattered, and the blast left a pit 6 feet across and 2 feet deep.

The Moscow invited Chechen government issued a statement accusing "a handful of extremists" for the attack and pledging to find those responsible.

It was not immediately clear whether the Rusian troops were responsible for the blast.

The bombing is the latest in a series of attacks on Russian targets in Chechnya.

The Chechen government said it was prepared to seek the release of four hostages held in the capital.

The administration building was hit by a car bomb, killing at least 11 people.

Problem: How can you find the best way to make the most profit?

Solution:

1. Identify the best investment opportunities:
   - Look for stocks, bonds, or real estate with high returns and low risk.
   - Consider diversifying your portfolio to reduce risk.

2. Analyze the financial statements:
   - Review the balance sheet, income statement, and cash flow statement.
   - Understand the company's profitability, liquidity, and solvency.

3. Conduct thorough research:
   - Read financial news, articles, and reports.
   - Talk to industry experts and analysts.

4. Consider the market trends:
   - Pay attention to economic indicators, such as GDP, inflation, and interest rates.
   - Stay informed about political events and international news.

5. Make informed decisions:
   - Choose investments that align with your financial goals and risk tolerance.
   - Rebalance your portfolio regularly to maintain your desired asset allocation.

By following these steps, you can increase your chances of making a profit and achieving your financial objectives. Remember, investing always carries some level of risk, so it's important to have a diversified portfolio and to stay disciplined in your decision-making process.

Losses don't matter now

Well, here it is. The final regular installment of the weekly newsletter. It appears every two weeks on this page. This is a reflection of the stage left, the Penn basketball at 13.

After three years of agonizing labor, I still haven't found the magic recipe to make a great basketball game out of the experience. However, I can still offer some tips on how to make the game enjoyable.

1. Bring a friend: Nothing beats sharing the experience with someone else. It makes the game more enjoyable and adds to the overall atmosphere.

2. Stay positive: Even if the game is losing, try to stay positive and support your team. It will make the experience more enjoyable for everyone.

3. Watch the game from the sidelines: If you're not feeling the game, take a step back and enjoy the surroundings. The atmosphere is usually more enjoyable from the sidelines.

4. Be patient: Don't expect to see your favorite team win every game. There will be losses, and it's important to stay patient and supportive.

5. Be a supporter: Show your support for the team by cheering loudly and enthusiastically. It will make the experience more enjoyable for everyone.

The season is over, but the memories are still fresh. Until next time, enjoy the rest of your season!
