More than 350 high school students from six states came to Philadelphia over the weekend for the Liberty Bell Classic, the University of Pennsylvania's Team's annual speech and debate tournament, and many came from as far as Florida to compete in 13 different debate categories ranging from After Dinner Speaking—an original humorous speech on an important topic—to Dramatic Duo, a two-person category that required interpreting a section of a play.

By the end of the year, we have who’s directing the tournament, and by January 19, we were scheduled to host 600 schools.

Trustees hear plan for undergraduate education

By Andrea Ahles

University Trustees met last Friday to discuss research opportunities for undergraduates, the tenure process and the planning across the University at the Board of Trustees' Academic Policy Committee meeting.

The meeting began with a presentation of the Student Council on Undergraduate Education's 1995 White Paper, which included the plan to discuss research opportunities for undergraduates, the tenure process and the planning across the University.

The meeting continued with a discussion of the Undergraduate Education's 1995 White Paper, which included the plan to discuss research opportunities for undergraduates, the tenure process and the planning across the University.

Satisfaction was mentioned as the key word to improve undergraduate skills among undergraduates, the tenure process and the planning across the University. According to SCUE Vice Chairperson Shania Goldsucker, a College senior, she was hesitant to fully support the program because the amount of time it would take to implement the University community.

But our chairperson, Chairman Daniel Langenberg, a trustee, said the committee strongly supported the idea of better collaboration between academic programs and undergraduate programs. The way in which the foreign language should be included in the College of Arts and Sciences was discussed, with the idea of increasing the breadth of the University.

Back in March, Provost Lawrence S. Bacow asked the trustees to be patient about teaching the tutors to become more involved in the tenure process. Starting in March, the Provost will provide the trustees with information about the tenure applicants, including their curriculum vitae.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Chodorow asked the trustees to become more involved in the tenure process. This is not a means to improve the awareness of the process, but a way to get the trustees to know the faculty.

The idea is that what the student learns in class and in seminars is not as important as the skills that he or she learns in lectures and seminars.

The meeting continued with a presentation of the Academic Policy Committee's findings about teaching. The way we think, according to the Chodorow, is that it is an issue that will not be ignored. The way we think, according to Chodorow, is that it is an issue that will not be ignored.

In some ways, college is just like high school. You sit in class, listen, and take notes. At test time, you regurgitate the information you've memorized.

But wait. There's more to college life. Want excitement? The opportunity to meet new people? The chance to learn by doing, not by watching?

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

The Daily Pennsylvanian, the 112-year-old daily newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, is consistently rated one of the top college newspapers in the country by the Associated Collegiate Press and the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. In fact, more than 30,000 people read the DP every day.

Students, faculty and administrators look to us as their main source of news and information about the University and West Philadelphia. Local businesses see us as the most cost-effective way to present their message to the lucrative Penn market.

Most importantly, the DP — a corporation independent of the University — is run and managed by students. Students just like you. Every day, we write and edit the stories, shoot and develop the photographs, lay out and put together the news pages. Every day, we sell and design the advertisements, handle customer inquiries, and develop budgets and financial statements.

As a DP staff member, you'll get the opportunity to learn in the trenches, to apply what you've learned in the classroom to the real world. From reporting and writing to shooting photographs to selling advertisements to designing pages, you don't watch — you do.

And, in all of our departments, you'll begin doing from day one. All you need is enthusiasm, imagination, and drive — we'll teach you the rest.

EDITORIAL

REPORTING

In recent years, we've sent reporters to Houston and Little Rock for election night coverage of the presidential race, to Washington to cover protests. On campus, we cover everything from the selection of Penn President Judith Rodin to students' prophylactic preferences. In the last few years, DP reporters have interviewed Alex Trebek, Tipper Gore, Lani Guinier, Ed Koch and dozens of other national and local celebrities.

Our sportswriters cover 25 intercollegiate sports, and travel to venues all over the country. Sportswriters also follow the rise of Penn graduates in various professional sports careers. In recent years, DP sportswriters have interviewed Chuck Daly, John Illgner, John Chaney and Dan O'Brien.

The DP's editorial page sparks campus debate every day. Our award winning weekly arts and entertainment magazine, 24th Street, offers readers an offbeat perspective on life, in-depth feature stories on the city, and reviews of movies, records, theaters and books. Finally, the Weekly Pennsylvania offers parents and alumni a look into the goings on at the University.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Staff members have photographed famous figures ranging from President Bill Clinton and Nelson Mandela to Bill Cosby. If you are looking for action shots, our photographers have covered the 1992 Presidential election and Good Morning America on campus. Our sports photographers cover all of theiev's football, basketball, lacrosse, etc. We'll help you develop the skills needed to shoot, develop and print your photographs. Whether you are interested in photography as an art or as a journalistic skill, the DP has what you are looking for.

ART / DESIGN

DP staff members work nightly with editors on special page designs, graphics and illustrations. Now you can have your drawings published instead of just showing them to your friends.

Our art staff utilizes the latest state-of-the-art equipment — such as a brand new Macintosh computer system, laser typesetters, an electronic design tablet and electronic scanners — to get the job done. Staff designers also lay out the front page and learn the most up-to-date techniques in computer illustration.

Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

BUSINESS

The DP means business too. We're not just a campus newspaper — we're an independent corporation in which students call the shots.

At the DP, you won't learn about the business world by reading a textbook — you'll visit customers, develop budgets, plan marketing strategies, work with computers, formulate financial statements, and design advertisements.

And you'll gain the kind of real-world business experience employers love.

SALES / MARKETING

After undergoing an in-depth training program, DP sales representatives hit the streets running. Businesses depend on their sales rep. to help them succeed in the competitive marketplace. Besides gratitude, DP representatives also receive generous monetary rewards, up to several hundred dollars per month.

Our marketing department brainstorm new ways to promote the paper to attract readers and advertisers. To increase community awareness, staffers conduct market research, design promotional materials, write advertising copy and cultivate new clients.

CREDIT / FINANCE

How does $1,000,000 sound? The DP is big business — our advertising revenues top the three-quarters of a million dollars mark each year. You can study the theory of finance at Wharton, but the DP gives you an ideal business laboratory — and the money is real. Finance and credit staff members control the funds by preparing budgets and financial statements and by handling customer service, billing and collections. Few other activities on campus offer as much independence with such real stakes.

AD DESIGN / PRODUCTION

Every day, creative services artists and designers work with the sales and marketing staffs to produce promotional materials and create exciting ads campaigns for clients. More importantly, they help local merchants increase their business.

Our production department provides the perfect outlet for your creative skills and imagination. Staffers translate creative layouts and text into finished ads, from design to typesetting to assembly in each day's paper. And they design the blueprint for the paper each day.

Snow closing decisions fall on U. officials

By Josh Sherman
The Daily Pennsylvanian

When snow begins to accumulate and road conditions worsen, Executive Vice President John Fry faces an important decision.

Fry and several other University officials are charged with the task of deciding when to close the University in emergency conditions. The decision to close the University depends on input from various sources within the University community, and from city and state offices.

According to Chief of Police George Clisby, the University solicits advice from the state police, the National Weather Service and Philadelphia’s Office of Emergency Management for information in an emergency.

Executive Director of Physical Plant James Wargo said his department “monitors the situation, reserves the snow and prepares the campus for occupancy.” Wargo added that he surveys the situation on campus and relies on information from the University’s Facilities Management Office. Grayson Greenberg, who works with the EVP and the University’s Office of Capital Projects and Life, Valerie Stevo-Cole McCullough, who together decide whether or not to close the University, Clisby said. “We keep in touch with the city,” Fry said. “But the decision is completely ours.”

“The closing only impacts intercollegiate personnel,” Clisby explained. “The Public safety division is responsible for maintaining public safety throughout the metropolitan area.” Clisby said. “We are primarily concerned for the safety of the University community and their ability to commute to campus.”

“THe governor’s declaration of emergency conditions indicates that the emergency services (fire, police, and public safety) will go out on the roadways in the metropolitan area,” Clisby said. “If the roadways aren’t there for emergency services, then they can’t get to the University.”

“The decision to close the University depends on input from sources within the University community, and from city and state offices.”

A job well done

The lifetime endowment of a chair for an African-American professor at the Wharton School is an exceptional achievement.

This weekend, the African American MBA Association announced it had raised $1.25 million to endow a lifetime Wharton professorship for exceptional achievement.

The Association's next project—a center within Wharton dedicated to studying business issues that affect African Americans—is in $20,000 richer after this weekend's fundraiser. This is a sign of good things to come, and a trend of student activism and involvement that we hope will continue.

Equal rights in the bedroom

Vanessa Eisemann says the female orgasm is far from unusual, as some students would have us believe.

A scenario of a biology textbook I used as a student, "The female orgasm is not known to science."

This statement is preceded by three pages about the real orgasm: Epigynes one in which I think there are a good many women who think their orgasm is done in this way.

Female sexuality, and the female orgasm specifically, is a subject that is understudied in physiology courses.

Guest Column

Everyone means something different to me, but I think I have an idea of what everyone means. Everyone who has ever become a woman knows it is not a standard and predictable experience. No one is the same, no one is like everyone else, and we all have our own unique way of doing it. It's all about being different and being comfortable with yourself.

The science of sexuality is no different, and now we have a center within Wharton dedicated to studying business issues that affect African Americans. This is a sign of good things to come, and a trend of student activism and involvement that we hope will continue.

PARIS - An impoverished island may not be the best place to live, but Club Med, the world's top vacation resort chain Club Med, will be keeping tourists in Cuba, according to its chief executive, who said his company will attract tourists from Europe and South America.

"It's not the best place to live, but it's the best place to visit," said Leighton Smith, the American commanding officer of Club Med, when he announced his company's plans to extend its operations in Cuba.

Leighton Smith, who is preparing for his next job as the head of Club Med's European operations, said the company had decided to invest in Cuba because it is a potential market for Club Med's high-end vacation packages.

"We see Cuba as a strategic location for our business," he said. "We believe it has the potential to be a major source of revenue for us in the future."

President Howard Paul Reinmack said and the team’s coach Tom Casserly that scoring 10 points in his short stint “is the kind of day people hope to come true, but it didn’t happen this time.”

Of course if that happens, he going to have to live with them because that’s the only way they can win. "There are just some mistakes being made, but were just got to find a way to turn things around," Casserly said.

M. Track unhappy despite first place

By Greg Kalnit

Despite placing first overall in a field of four at Franklin Field in Philadelphia Saturday afternoon, the Penn men's track team left the meet disappointed, knowing they had a lot more hard work to do.

"It was, but a lot of people weren't satisfied with the performances," said sophomore Mike Stiffler, who finished first in the pentathlon competition with a leap of 22 feet, 7 3/4 inches. "We're back at the level we were at in November because a lot of people didn't train hard enough over break. It'll take a while to get back to our desired level."

The Quakers were an extremely close competition, edging Cornell by 1/2 point in the 110 meter dash, ending Cornell with a tally of 81 5/9, St Joseph's was third with 81 2/3, and Penn State was fourth with 80 3/5.

Eric Hyde, who finished first in the pentathlon competition, three of whom were wearing the Red and Blue.

"There wasn't a lot of competition," Hyde said. "A lot of people couldn't make it because of the weather."

"We should have dominated," he added.

Only Anderson felt differently about the opposition. "I thought the triple jump and high jump competition was pretty good," he said. Anderson's career high was only good enough for a tie for second in the high jump.

Sophomore Aaron McCommons finished third in the mile run with a time of 4 minutes, 21 seconds. "It's not going to be a breeze this year," McCommons said. "I don't have a good training season during the break, and I'm still pretty out of shape."

Sakae's addition

The Penn women got off to a strong start against Duke. The Blue Devils jumped out to a 2-1 lead, but when Penn sophomore Cindy Kuan ousted her opponent in the second round of foil competition, she knitted the overall score up at 1. "Kuan's victory in the second round was the real turning point in the Duke loss," Miebach said. "And not just because we won that round."

Sophomore Aaron McCommons started against Duke, but could not overcome his overconfidence. "There wasn't a lot of competition," McCommons said. "I didn't want to lose, but I was pretty happy with my performance in the high jump."

Junior sprinter Roger Heck participated in the mile run with a time of 4 minutes, 23 seconds. "I wanted, but I was pretty happy with my performance in the high jump," he said. "It was the first time I've run the mile in competition this season."

Not taking any chances, Micahnik called on Sakae to compete in the final two rounds of foil competition.

Sophomore Cindy Kuan ousted her opponent in the second round of foil competition, the final score of 115. "We won, but a lot of people weren't satisfied with their performances," said sophomore Eric Hyde, who finished first in the pentathlon competition with a score of 218. "We won, but a lot of people couldn't make it because of the weather."

This past weekend freshman field specialist Luke De Cock dominated the Penn track team with a record-setting effort in his first trip to the Cornell Blue Invitational.

Nicknamed "the streak of junk," the struggling Cornell track team needed De Cock's dominance on the track to bolster the start of their 2007 season.

At the meet, De Cock took first place in the 200-meter hurdles race and second place in the 400-meter hurdles race.

"Well, it's over," said Dunphy according to O'Hanlon, "and it seems unlikely that the two could fit their thoughts into a short conversation, having played against each other in high school and college and coached together for the last 20 years.

De Cock's record-breaking effort included breaking the meet record in both events, setting new personal bests in both events.

"It's the first time that I've felt like I've been able to put together a strong performance in both events," De Cock said.

The win in the 200-meter hurdles was the first of De Cock's career and the second of his season, and it helped set the stage for his success in the 400-meter hurdles.

De Cock's performance in the hurdles race was particularly impressive, as he lowered his personal record by nearly four seconds.
