Gay community criticizes ROTC status quo decision

ROTC members argue the experience is 'invaluable'

When President Stanley Chodorow announced that the University was removing ROTC from campus, he pledged to keep open equal opportunities in all schools, to students who were or were not enrolled in ROTC. But many members of the University community are questions about the decision of allowing ROTC to retain its current status, noting it directly violates the University's anti-discrimination policy.

Bob Schoenberg, director of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Center on Penn, said he was deeply disappointed by the decision to allow ROTC to remain on campus, since all ROTC students were not trying to serve in the military. "We have a lot of concerns about ROTC, and the administration has not addressed them," Schoenberg said. "We are very concerned about the University's decision to allow ROTC to remain on campus, especially concerning the anti-discrimination policy." Schoenberg also asked the military to reconsider its decision to allow ROTC to retain its current status, which he said was not acceptable. Council recommended an "arms-length" agreement, which would require the University to charge ROTC for its office space and withdraw its funding for office supplies and secretarial staff.

Schoenberg said the military had no reason to be in the University campus and was simply disappointed by the decision to allow ROTC to remain on campus. He also noted that the agreement would require the University to withdraw its funding for office supplies and secretarial staff.

But, he also said the administration decided not to withdraw its funding for office supplies and secretarial staff.

Civil Liberties Union questions photo of nude Aphrodite statue

By Dina Bass
The University Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology could be in violation of federal law by posting a photo of a nude Aphrodite statue on its World Wide Web home page.

The controversial picture is a view of the statue, which is on loan from the American Civil Liberties Union's testing project. The museum is in violation of the Communications Decency Act (CDA) governing internet standards. President Clinton signed the act into law in March, and the university policy is "to abide by all laws and regulations that govern the use of electronic networks." The museum is in violation of the CDA, which states that "no person who is 18 years of age or older shall use or access a protected computer network...for the purpose of transmitting any material constituting... obscenity... or any other material that is for a sexual purpose..." The University of Pennsylvania Health System is now three years old and although it has had its problems, it is likely to experience extensive growth in the near future. The Health System is comprised of the medical center's physicians, Clinical Care Associates — a primary care networking that managed care networking would continue and would be a definite need for a primary care networking for the future. The new system offers a large site of closely attilai ted care and the practices. That was one of our main goals." Foley explained. "We had to convert them all to the same soi* of system to keep everything straight and equal." Foley said that doctors would not feel the changes have hurt any of the individual practices. "We've been very careful to not anything tramatise the practices. That was one of our main goals," he said. "Usually, we've just had challenges in com- minization."

Problems at CPUP

Last December, the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania agreed to pay the United States Depart- ment of Health and Human Services $30 million in order to settle claims filed against HUP that alleged that certain Medical Center physicians overbilled Medicare for patient treatment.

The settlement came as part of a nationwide audit of the University's billing system and the CPUP that spanned the years 1995 to 1997. In addition to the $30 million payment, the University agreed to implement a new, voluntary corrective action plan designed to prevent the recurrence of such incidents. CPUP physicians allegedly violated the Medicare billing code in a number of ways. The audit discovered that doctors not only overbilled Medicare, but also provided inadequate documents of true service.

Rogers explained the networking of the system is one of "vertical integration." The senior care unit is comprised of general prac- titioners, followed by the secondary and ter- tiary care units. Tertiary care also takes place at HUP, but involves a network of specialists and more sophisticated health care, such as open heart surgery and other complex procedures.

Procedural Difficulties

Senior Vice President for Hospital Operations Bill Foley said that the hospital has had some problems with the integration of its various sections, but added that "these are problems any organization that is growing and integrating would have."

"When it grows as big as fast as it has, there is always a chal- lenge with management," he explained. "We have had to work out new plans for the system that is one of the reasons the new system is so large. We had to rethink those choices that affect the entire system can sometimes create difficulties as well. And since many of us were not affiliated with the sys- tem, a great deal of discipline is involved in deciding "who our counterparts are," Foley explained.

Athletic Dep’t office raises cash

By Mark Fiore

University of Pennsylvania

Athletic Director Steve Bilko has overturned much of the Athletic Department since taking the helm in July 1994—and development has been a large piece of that restructuring. The Department’s development office oversees all of the revenue generating aspects of the University’s Athletic program, including annual giving, corporate sponsorship and capital projects. Due in large part to the restructuring of the development office, the Athletic Department has had great success in raising money.

According to Director of Athletic Development Mary Ann Decker-Uhlhorn, the University has annual fund giving of $859,760, a 112 percent increase from last year’s total of $405,700. The annual fund—known as the Weightman Fund—grew 86 percent in the last fiscal year, from July 1 to June 30. "We’re raising money every day and we’re doing well," Bilko said. "You hope everybody you open up a letter to will give. Of course, you win some, you lose some. But that’s the way the business works. The way it really works is that you have to get out and meet people and sell them on what you’re trying to do. As part of the restructuring, Bilko has encouraged individual coaches to get involved with fund raising.

The Weightman Fund is divided into 25 categories—23 for the athletic teams and 2 additional special funds. Each of the 25 teams has a fund raising goal based on the team’s extracurricular activities. For example, the 1995-96 goal for football is $35,000, while the goal for women’s fencing is $1,900. "If you go beyond those goals you get to keep that extra money for your program," Uhlhorn explained, adding that involving coaches more in fund raising gives them an incentive to encourage donations. "Every sport is人人 responsible for fund raising," Uhlhorn said. "The athletic department’s fund raising team works in conjunction with the Ivy League schools. "I think this year will end very strong. The mood about is very bright," Uhlhorn said. "It’s definitely a trend that we’re finding. As the coaches to the president to the development office to all missions. You shouldn’t do it otherwise." Capital projects are also an important part of the department’s budget. Several capital projects on campus include the renovation of the Palestra and the Rime Courts.

To ensure that the Rime Courts not change squash regulations, the courts’ sites needed to be modified. Uhlhorn and others hope that many events could no longer be held there. The Athletic Department also plans to renovate the Palestra, which will provide much better facilities while at the same time, the Ivy League schools have been very enthusiastic about the renovation, Uhlhorn said. "It’s an unbelievable amount of money," Uhlhorn said. "It’s the largest single request that the University has ever made of any of its reorganizations. We probably raised over $4 million in this last year. That’s a tremendous number of sponsors—and we’re hoping to do more.

Corporate sponsorship is another important source of revenue for the department. "It’s an unbelievable amount of work," Uhlhorn said. "But for us to align ourselves to the greatest, we have to have success in development."
New radio program focuses on gay issues

By Alana Kaselitz

WPKN FM, the University's professionally run public radio station, launched a new gay broadcasting program on May 3. Following the first program, Q'zine, "the talk show with a twist," will air on five weekly radio magazines for the local and gay communities every Monday from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

"The name of the program is simply an abbreviation for "queer magazine." Our goal is to deal with issues as they are vital to society's survival, Brand said. "It's possible to be queer and what a queer community means to the queer community."

The radio interaction will allow for distance to evolve around topics that are vital to society's survival, Brand said. "We shouldn't be considered odd. It's normal and we should be a queer community."

The first program, and last week featured Julie Bards, a founding member of Grass Roots Queers, and University graduate Mark Stun, who authored a look on lesbians and gays that will be published soon. They discussed Q'zine's theme for the current show, "What makes us queer and what a queer community means." A 20-minute "cultural sweep" followed the talk radio portion of the show. It included reviews on area films, theater, television, books and any other media that relates to the queer community, Drake said.

block to be safe? Is that part of your scheme?" Sloviter asked.

"You don't have to be gay to be part of Q'zine's crew," Drake said. "Our program has a broad scope of talents and gays from ages 18 to 40. Q'zine's creators hope the show will unify sexual minorities by incorporating intelligent discussion of serious issues of concern to the community."

"We consider such material art and we consider it history," Kosty said. "We would be amazed if anyone considered it indecent."

Although the statue itself was not mentioned specifically as indecent, Kosty said the possibility of it being removed from view for minors under the law brings up the question of the law's breadth and the possibility of it being marked for obscenity. The statue currently resides on the third floor of the museum and is seen by 40,000 schoolchildren a year, according to museum estimations.

Joseph Farrell, undergraduate chairman of the Council Studios Department, said he feels the possibility of the being considered pornographic is ridiculous. "The fact that the Council put it on its cover without raising an eyebrow shows that it is suitable for display," Farrell said.

Farrell also explained that from an artistic point of view the statue actually has a rather crude expression to it.

New UMC chair aims for ‘mutual respect’

By Karen Pasternack

Lee, a junior in the political science department, was recently appointed as the new chairperson of the University Minority Committee (UMC) — a student-run organization that promotes diversity and inclusion on campus.

Lee is one of the few minority students on campus who is involved in student government. He said that being a part of the UMC has been his way of giving back to the University.

"I want the community of students of color to understand that I am here to support them," Lee said. "I believe that it is important for them to have a voice in the University, and I want to make sure that they have one.

Lee's experience as a member of the UMC has been positive, he said. "I have learned a lot through my work with the committee, and I feel that I have been able to make a difference.

Lee's vision is primarily focused on mutual respect. He believes that all students, regardless of their background, should be treated with respect.

Lee also emphasized the importance of diversity. He said that he wants to make sure that all students feel welcome on campus.

Denise Scott Brown, Architect, Venturi Scott Brown Associates

University of Pennsylvania Provost Stanley Chodorow and architects Robert Venturi and Denise Scott Brown will discuss the design and plans for the Perelman Quadrangle, Penn's new campus center. This world-class center is unique because it involves restoration of the University's most historic and architecturally significant buildings while integrating them with each other and the surrounding outdoor space. Provost Chodorow will discuss how the Perelman Quadrangle fits into Penn's plans for the future.

Attempting to turn his vision into reality, 32-year-old University graduate Bill Ford Jr. has announced his candidacy for the U.S. House of Representatives from the ninth district.

Ford’s father, Bill Ford Sr., a Democrat, is the current congressional representative for the district. Ford Sr. is a member of the House of Representatives from the district.

Ford, who graduated from the University of Michigan Law School this May, explained that he wanted to attempt to make a difference to address some of the concerns he heard from his district’s voters.

The elder Ford said he is extremely impressed with the success of his son’s campaign.

“As a father I am proud but even more importantly, I am, I think, very pleased,” he added. “He is a very thoughtful and can do the job quite well for the district and some strength in the campaign and what people are saying about it.”

The Democratic primary in Michigan will be held in early August. Ford is currently running unopposed.

But his father said Michigan’s top W. K. Hermes is spending publicly against the younger Ford’s campaign and encouraging everyone against his candidacy.

“Bill’s running on the traditional Democratic platform with an emphasis on decreasing crime, improving education and stimulating job development along with some of the social programs that they support,” Evans said.

Ford, who will graduate from the University of Michigan Law School this May, explained that he wanted to attempt to make a difference to address some of the concerns he heard from his district’s voters.

The elder Ford said he is extremely impressed with the success of his son’s campaign.

“As a father I am proud but even more importantly, I am, I think, very pleased,” he added. “He is a very thoughtful and can do the job quite well for the district and some strength in the campaign and what people are saying about it.”

The Democratic primary in Michigan will be held in early August. Ford is currently running unopposed.

‘Monty’ honored for 40-yr. career

By Shannon Burke

Bruce Montgomery is a Renaissance man, according to his sister Elizabeth, who toasted her brother during a gala celebration earlier this month. Elizabeth Montgomery Thomas said the University performing arts group honored Montgomery’s 40th anniversary as its director with a gala celebration.

“Nobody has had a positive effect on more students at the University of Pennsylvania than Montgomery has in his time,” Constan said. “He has been very fulfilling.”

Graduation Goodbyes 1996

Senior Baby Pictures, Pages 2-30
Student Group Goodbyes, Pages 30-32
May 17, 1996

Dear Members of the Class of 1996:

As your graduation draws near, I am honored to join your families and friends in congratulating you on your momentous achievement.

As the 240th graduating class of the University of Pennsylvania, you have, like more than two centuries of students before you, carried on the traditions of the Red and Blue, but in a unique way. You have made Penn your own.

You brought unrivalled intelligence and creative thought to our classrooms. You brought energy and talent to our stages. You brought substantive issues to our meeting tables. You brought altruism and skill to our community. You brought team spirit and discipline to our athletic venues.

Even as you prepare for the next phase of your lives, good-bye may not be the most appropriate word for this occasion. A phrase drawn from the French perhaps says it best: Au revoir. Until we see each other again.

And we will see each other again. Cheering on the Red and Blue at Franklin Field and the Palestra. Enjoying a play or concert on campus. Admiring an art exhibit at Meyerson or Arthur Ross. Sharing a laugh with a classmate at an Alumni Weekend barbecue. And for those of you who are moving on to graduate school at Penn, studying in the library or on College Green.

Until we do see each other again, I wish you every success and much happiness and I thank you for all of your contributions to our beloved Pennsylvania.

With best wishes,

Judith Rodin

PRINCETON WINS IVY CHAMPIONSHIP

PRINCE-STUNG

After winning Gehrig playoff vs. Princeton, Penn beats Crimson for crown
By Jane Harvey
The Daily Pennsylvanian

The Gehrig Division playoff series was cut at four when Princeton centerkeeper Michael Hansen stepped up in the fifth. Penn reliver Sean McDonald checked the loaded bases behind him, went into his motion and delivered the pitch.

Hansen lifted the ball into center field. Tiger centerfielder Tom Garrow, who walked, went into second, ducking behind Hansen. The ball dropped into Penn centerkeeper Drew Corradini's glove.

Baseball tagged up and headed for home. And the Tigers celebrated a season-ending upset.

But Princeton went on to win the Ivy League championship series by sweeping the Red and Blue, 5-1, 5-2, 3-2.

PRINCETON WINS IVY CHAMPIONSHIP

With co-captain Mike Shannon injured, Penn softball "Aren't Simonson (32) played first baseman for the Quakers this season."
By Marc Edelman
The Daily Pennsylvanian

Three years ago, when the Penn softball team was having one of its best seasons in recent memory, the Quakers were counting on its main third baseman, Shannon Hage, to perform well in the Ivy League championships. Shannon was a junior at the time and a strong leader on the team.

But this year, with Shannon out with an injury, the Quakers have had to rely on other players to step up and fill in the void. One of those players is third baseman Amy Shannon, who has been one of the team's top performers this season.

In the last game of the season, Shannon went 2-for-3 with a double and two RBIs.

Shannon has been a consistent performer for the Quakers throughout the season, leading the team in batting average at .313 in conference play. She has also been a key player in the team's success, helping to keep the offense on track.

The Quakers finished the season with a record of 26-24, good enough for fourth place in the Ivy League.

Softball

For the Quakers, the season was a success. Despite struggling at times, the team managed to finish in a respectable position and show improvement over the course of the season.

But there are still questions about the team's future. With Shannon out, who will step up to fill her role? And how will the team handle the loss of such a key player?

Brown wins third outdoor Heps crown in past four years

The Penn track team finished the season on a high note, finishing fourth in the Ivy League championships.

The team was led by a strong performance from freshman Shannon Hage, who won the Ivy League championships in the javelin.

Words of wisdom from DPOSTM’s old timers

To the young members of the DP sports staff:

There may not be an institution as revered within the hallowed halls of DPOSTM — The Daily Pennsylvanian’s Staff That Matters that is — as my former section. The section — those who still remain, anyway — are often given too few chances to make their voices heard on these pages. For some, they will put their experiences on anything they write appears in print. For others, like me, it may be the last time they are not paid.

Some veteran columns become part of the lore and legend that goes with being a writer and perhaps the most important one of my first editors, like me, may be the last time they write anything they write appears in print. Finishing line, that is — as the revered within the hallowed halls of DPOSTM — Only Staff That Matters, that is — as the revered within the hallowed halls of DPOSTM — That column hangs on the wall with the initiative that was the catalyst for recently got involved in sports. I always wanted to be part of a team. I went to a sports camp in Massachusetts for several years. Then I tried to make the local team. I just didn’t have the skills, so I didn’t catch a baseball, though I did play basketball and soccer reasonably well. Once back home, I joined a number of tryouts, and the pressure of making the team was too much to bear. I opened up this summer, discovered a new passion for running, and joined clubs instead of my high school sports teams. I had the team spirit. I only lacked the track.

I tried out for the women's basketball team in my first year. I tried three times that were written "I will hold out" due to a lack of official space.

I quit again. My dying dream of front page glory and de- sign to be in part of something was re-engaged by Lee Goldsmith, a freshman talkie who was inserted to a reporter. I was interviewed three times on that day, and before long, I had enough of the whole thing. I quit.

When you join the sports staff, you are already part of a group. There are few people that have never heard of DP/ST. You are part of a community, a group that is a part of sports, and justly. You are part of a community, a group that is a part of sports, and justly.

I have always been a part of sports. I've seen the sport go through its share of changes. Some were better, and some worse. I've seen some of the worst. I've seen some of the best. I've experienced every experience there is.

When I first climbed up the four flights of stairs to my hot Quadrangle room a few years ago, I had no idea who Jet was. I was not aware that the Penn football team had just won the Ivy League, but had a sense that neat, confident new head coach from Union College by the name of Al Bagnoli had won the Ivy League. Al Walker, Cornell’s head basketball coach since 1987, has stepped down from his position that he held for 17 years. Walker’s record was 27-51.

According to Walker, the Big Red’s difficult Athletic at the time of the season. "Right now, I need to step away from basketball for a period of time," Walker said in a statement.

During Walker’s tenure, Cornell went 27-51 overall and 12-50 in the Ivy League. "It’s been a difficult personal year," Walker said in a statement.

Walker’s departure, the Big Red’s Athletic Director, will be looking for the “right” person for the job.

Penn tops Lions, clinches second place in Ivies
By Jon Singer
The Daily Pennsylvania
Going into its April 17 match against Columbia, the men's Quakers tennis team needed a victory over the Lions to keep any hope of finishing in second place alive. Even with a win, the Quakers still needed a Harvard loss in order to catch the Crimson in the standings.
The Quakers (16-4, 7-1 Ivy) did get the win against the Lions by a score of 8-2, but were not helped by Barnes, Yale or Dartmouth.
Quakers head coach Cissie Leary noted that defending conference champion Harvard.

Tigers exploitation Greenfield's widening in the final inning, adding three more runs. Hoye led the inning with a double to the right field wall. First baseman Michael Keck's single to right in the next at bat gave the Tigers their third run of the inning, but the worries began. The next batter, the Penn baseball season came to an end. We were ready," Turner said. "They just came through."

And like the men's basketball team before them, the Quakers will have a long break to think about what might have happened if only they could have gotten one more victory over Princeton.

Tigers win on ninth inning sacrifice fly second baseman Daniel Edebult, scoring Deloss. From there, the Tigers sat mute. But pinch hitter Dave Deloss stepped up swinging and was not to be denied. He hit a sacrifice fly to right field, ending the inning.

Joe McDonald replaced him and got Penn designated hitter Mark Nagata to pop up to first baseman Armen Simonian. In a righty lefty situation, Princeton's ace closer Chris Yarbrough took the mound.

"We knew what I was doing wrong," Greenwood said. "I knew what I had to do. I knew if I held them there we'd come back and make a run at it and we did." The Quakers started the eighth with three straight singles, driving a run across the plate and finally from the game. Lefty starter Joseph Madia replaced him and got Penn designated hitter Mark Nagata to pop up to catcher Peter Sklitski. In a lefty lefty switch, Princeton's ace closer Chris Yarbrough took the mound. The Quakers caught a second second chance. We blew it that last weekend when we let them sweep us. We felt it was ours to win here anyway," Penn right fielder Sean Turner said. "We knew we had that second chance. We went up. We let it win win in the seventh inning, but we had another chance. We came in very upbeat.

As Princeton right fielder David Mitchell took the mound to start the top of the seventh inning, the Quakers were standing and cheering in the dugout, Princeton was quiet. They would not stay that way for long. In the bottom of the second inning, Penn lefty Mike Greenwood walked the lead off batter later, Greenwood walked on.

In the bottom of the second inning, Penn lefty Mike Greenwood walked the lead off batter. Greenwood let Hage get on base with one out. Seddon would not stay that way for long. The worries began.

Three two out singles, driving in another run. "I knew if I held them there we'd come back and make a run at it and we did," the next batter, loading the bases with only one out, the worries began.

One pitch later, the Penn baseball season came to an end. "We were ready," Turner said. "They just came through."

And like the men's basketball team before them, the Quakers will have a long break to think about what might have happened if only they could have gotten one more victory over Princeton.

"I knew what I was doing wrong," Greenwood said. "I knew what I had to do. I knew if I held them there we'd come back and make a run at it and we did." The Quakers started the eighth inning with three straight singles, driving a run across the plate and finally from the game. Lefty starter Joseph Madia replaced him and got Penn designated hitter Mark Nagata to pop up to catcher Peter Sklitski. In a lefty lefty switch, Princeton's ace closer Chris Yarbrough took the mound. The Quakers caught a second second chance. We blew it that last weekend when we let them sweep us. We felt it was ours to win here anyway," Penn right fielder Sean Turner said. "We knew we had that second chance. We went up. We let it win win in the seventh inning, but we had another chance. We came in very upbeat.

At Boyd's we offer one of the world's finest selections of men's clothing from such noted designers as Giorgio Armani, Ermenegildo Zegna, Canali, Barbanera, Brioni and Hickey-Freeman to name just a few.

And, in our Rittenhouse Shop you'll find an entire department of moderately priced designer suits from $295, none higher than $595. European and traditional styles, 3-button suits, including Chaps by Ralph Lauren.

Aprox. $75,000 for tuition,
$12,000 for housing,
$3,000 for books,
suddenly the price of a new interview suit seems like a modest investment.

When you graduate, you can’t take it with you...

...but you can have it delivered.

No matter how far you go, you can always keep Penn nearby. The Weekly Pennsylvanian brings all the latest campus news and sports to your mailbox every week during the coming year.

Experience The Weekly Pennsylvanian, a weekly publication specifically for Penn alumni, parents, and friends — straight from the pages of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

See who’s been signed for Fling next year... follow the basketball team’s march to the top of the Ivies. Relive the best moments of college.

Subscribe now to The Weekly Pennsylvanian. We’ll send you twenty-six weeks of the best of the ‘DP’ that will keep Penn a part of your life.

Simply mail in the coupon or give us a call to order The Weekly Pennsylvanian at the low price of only $35. That’s less than the cost of a few long distance calls to an old friend.

Don't know your fall address? Don’t worry. Now is the time to subscribe! We can get your subscription at last year’s price. Just fill in your parents’ or “permanent” home address on the coupon — then, let us know as soon as you get your new address. The subscription won’t begin until September anyway, and you’ll lock in the $35 subscription rate right now for the 1996-97 school year.

Yes! Sign me up for a one-year subscription to The Weekly Pennsylvanian for only $35.
