U. moves to improve off-campus lighting

By Dina Bass

The Daily Pennsylvanian

All students—parents as well—should take steps to ensure the safety of the student body while away from campus. In the past, the university has not been proactive enough in providing good lighting on campus. It is now time for the university to take action.

The Daily Pennsylvanian is a student-run newspaper. The university does not necessarily endorse its views.

The suspect fled and the officer followed until the suspect was arrested Monday night for robbery. However, the suspect was later released without charge.

University Police has been placed under scrutiny for its handling of campus security issues. The university has been criticized for its response to recent robberies and other crimes. University President Rodin and Public Safety Managing Director Maureen Rush have expressed concern about the situation and have taken steps to improve campus safety.

Conference covers Asian business

By Stacy Greenhouse

At its second annual Asia Business Conference last Friday, the Wharton Asian Association focused on the emerging economic frontiers of Southeast Asia and global economic issues concerning the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

The day-long conference, held at Shenberg Dinich Hall, included a keynote address by former U.S. Envoy W. E. Johnson and several seminars led by孔子 William Bode and five other guest speakers.

Founded in 1987, ASIA presently includes the countries of Brunei, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, and Vietnam.

The economic center of gravity is shifting from Europe to the 16th century, to the Pacific and Asia in the 21st century, Bode said.

The conference covered topics such as the rise of China and its influence on global trade, the impact of the Chinese economy on the world market, and the need for policymakers to address the challenges posed by China's growing economic power.

Chowder and Vice Provost for University Life Vaaler Swen-Cade McCullum will make appearances during the forum, where students can ask questions in a non-confrontational atmosphere.

Council meeting today will focus on safety

By Andrea Ahles
The Daily Pennsylvanian

After taking criticism for not adequately addressing student safety concerns at its meeting last month, University Council organizers plan to devote almost half of today's meeting to security issues.

University President Judith Rodin will give a 15 minute presentation on security to the audience. Those in attendance will be allowed to ask questions.

"They weren't getting their questions answered," Beverly said. "There was too many generalities."

Scheman explained that the lighting problems have been especially difficult to resolve because tree-trimming responsibilities have been shifted to a different city agency over the past few years and, beyond that, any action to trim trees and improve lighting is costly and time consuming for landlords.

Scheman explained that landlords put outside lighting on a timer so that they are not home, adding that many families in the area have begun to use motion detector lights as well. Scheiman added that she was unable to determine which landlords were guilty of lighting violations, although she plans to report one landlord to the University Security and Inspection Committee.

Scheman added that she felt another student was too many generalities. She recommended landlords put motion detector lights on a timer so that they are not home, adding that many families in the area have begun to use motion detector lights as well. Scheiman added that she was unable to determine which landlords were guilty of lighting violations, although she plans to report one landlord to the University Security and Inspection Committee.

Scheman has asked PECO specifically to increase lighting near campus.

"It is a questions of how much more rent a student is willing to pay for better living," she explained. "Scheman said she would welcome any action if it improves the quality and plausibility of lighting rather than simply increasing the amount of light near campus."
Firm cooks up plan for Dining

By Andrea Ables

Food-service consultant John Cornyn has never seen so many food trucks on campus as he did to Penn. "The food trucks are everywhere," Cornyn said.

Cornyn and his partner, Joyce Fasano, have been hired by the University to conduct a comprehensive study of all food services across campus, including restaurants and food trucks that service the area — and Dining Services. The Cornyn Fasano Group is an independent food-service consulting group.

After just one week on campus, Cornyn and Fasano have already met with several administrators and student leaders to discuss food service information. They said their main goal right now is to deliver a program that is successful and meets the needs of the campus community.

"Our challenge has been to learn kind of negotiated all the other possibilities, I think," Witt said. "We really want to find out what's the best direction for Penn to go.

Cornyn and Fasano have met with Dining Services managers and hope to meet with other employees at the study continues.

The best service will be split into two phases.

OK, you don't have to twist my arm. Every time I walk into a place like the Tab, I cannot help but notice the throngs of people waiting for a table to become available in front of that small space in the basement where something like a buffet might have been set up. I'm not sure how long I've been doing this, but I do remember it was the time of the year when the weather started to get a little cooler and the air started to feel crisp. Perhaps the smell of autumn in the air also contributed to my desire to spend more time indoors, away from the hustle and bustle of the outside world.

Anyway, back to the point. The fact is that there are so many tables and chairs available in the Tab that it's almost impossible to find a place to sit down and enjoy a drink or a meal. But then again, I'm not sure if this is the best place to do so. Perhaps it's better to find a quieter spot, one where you can have a more personal conversation with your friends or family. And if you're still not satisfied, you could always try another restaurant in town, or even order takeout and eat at home. After all, there are plenty of options available to you. In the end, it's up to you to decide what's best for you.
The many images of the Wharton School

Herring added that Wharton's link to the University is best reflected in its Management, Information and Technology and International Studies and Business. Approximately 40 students are accepted to each of these two interdisciplinary programs each year.

"These students choose Penn because of those wonderful synergies," Herring said. "The dual degree programs enable students to obtain an education that simply is not business-oriented.

According to the Wharton senior, the majority of Wharton students — those who do not fit into either dual degree program — choose to focus simply on business, thereby preparing themselves only for the "business world.""Open 24 hours. Because sleep is for wimps.

Bechtold打出了非常独特的一球。它是第四节还剩三分钟的时候，他从三分线外起跳，投出了一个三分球。他的投篮非常准，球进了。

Speaking of blocked kicks, Penn defensive and Roger Bechtold is becoming a threat in the kicking game. It often pays to play to one's strengths, and in the aforementioned game against Bucknell, it was not only the offense that was on target, but the placekicker as well. In fact, he was so good that a field goal attempt would be worth an entire touchdown in the game.

The Quakers' nine-point overtime triumph was a pretty special accomplishment. The teams were tied at 14-14 after two regulation quarters, and then the game went into overtime. In overtime, the Quakers scored a touchdown and a field goal, and the game ended with a final score of 22-17 in favor of Penn.

Lastly, we would like to congratulate the Quakers on their victory. It was a well-deserved win, and we hope they can continue to build on this momentum in future games.

the hoon in the first half at Bucknell. Still, the reasons Scott has emerged are his averages — 124 yards per game and 5.2 per carry. Also, he will have to find new shots in the offense, perhaps using more time at wide receiver where he has played in the past. However, in Granata’s absence, he may see more carries against Columbia.

The Quakers knew the pass coverage could be a problem this season, and, if the early returns are any indication, they were right. Dartmouth quarterback Jon Aljancic threw for 227 yards on opening day and, last weekend, Bucknell’s Jim Fox came out of a slump with a 22-for-36, 235-yard performance. The obvious explanation is the extreme youth of the team’s defensive backs.

"They’re not just inexperienced—there are three sophomores," Bagnoli said. "You try to minimize it, you try to show them a million things. You’ve got two of those kids (James Finn and Bruce Bossignol) who weren’t even on defense last year."

The only returning starter in the secondary is Larrin Robertson, a junior cornerback.

"I think the inexperience gets out of the way after the first quarter of the first game," senior free safety John Bishop said. "Take last Saturday for example. We had some mental breakdowns, just a lack of concentration. I think that is something that can get fixed and will get fixed in coming weeks."

The Quakers have several injuries of note heading into Saturday afternoon’s clash with undefeated Columbia at Franklin Field. In addition to Granata, senior defensive end Mitch Marrow is fully recovered from the twisted ankle he suffered against Dartmouth. Senior wide receiver/returnman Mark Fabish was about 75 percent last weekend, according to Bagnoli. He should be fully healed by his high routes, also a remnant of the Red Raiders.

Senior defensive tackle Mitch Marrow is fully recovered from the twisted ankle he suffered against Dartmouth, while backup linebacker Scott Glassel is out.

Phillies get permission to talk to former K.C. manager Hal McRae

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds have given the Philadelphia Phillies permission to talk with Reds hitting coach Hal McRae about the vacant Phillies manager job. McRae’s contact with the Phillies expires Oct. 31.

"Hal has tremendous leadership qualities. I highly recommended him," Bowden said.

McRae said he received a telephone message Monday from Thomas, but had not talked with him. The Phillies reportedly plan to interview McRae on Friday.

McRae, 51, said he got the urge to manage after the 1986 season when Jim Fregosi was fired. McRae had been with the A’s since 1976 and is a candidate for that stretch.

"I really want to stay in baseball," McRae said on Friday.

"We have some guys with oids, "he said. "It will give them an opportunity to play regularly.

Whalers 7, Penguins 3

Hartford Whalers beat Pittsburgh Penguins 7-3 yesterday, taking the first two games in the first round of the playoffs, and 9-3 this season. Geoff Sanderson and Jeff O’Neill each scored two goals as the Hartford Whalers beat the Pitts- borough Penguins, 7-3, in the second consecutive game. Kevin Hatcher and Chris Tamer each scored two goals as the Hartford Whalers beat the Pittsburgh Penguins, 7-3, in the second consecutive game.

Hartford Whalers coach Terry Meier dropped back to Game 3 on instead of possibly bringing Pettitte back on three days’ rest. The game was called off at 3:30 p.m., 4 1/2 hours before its scheduled start. Baltimore remained at the hotel in midtown Manhattan.

With the rainout, the teams will lose tomorrow’s travel day. Not exactly as exciting as pitching in front of 57,000 people.

Winning pitcher Mike Mussina drops back to Game 3 on Friday and will pitch against Jimmy Key.

You waited in line an hour to see this movie. Incredible opening! Heart-stopping action! Unbelievable tension! This is going to be... a great... a great...
oh no. Seated directly behind you. A talker. You can withstand many things. People who drive 55 in the left lane. People with 10 items in the 8-items-only checkout. But here you draw the line. Talking in movie theaters is sacrilege!

You paid seven bucks for this ticket. Seven bucks!

To the voice you say, "Could you please keep it down?"

A... a... silencer? Geez! This is a side of her you've never seen before. You think, momentarily, that should this case go to a jury, it will be important to have movie lovers on the panel. She lifts the weapon from her lap. What's it going to be? A Colt .45? A derringer?

You force yours if to look.

It's sleek. It's smooth. It's small. It's a... FDA? She's going to threaten the voice with a personal digital assistant? She quickly touches some keys, leans forward. "Computer," she says tersely to the little machine. Great. Now your girlfriend talks to inanimate objects. What's next? Lunch with aliens?

She whispers something else to the machine. Wonderful. She's decided to catch up on work during your date. Suddenly, miraculously, the voice behind you stops. Weird-like, in mid-sentence. You glance back. What the...? It's long. Round. Pointy. A... cone... of... silence? "FDA with a silencer," your girlfriend mutters. Damn, that's good software.

What will the next generation of software be? Come to Microsoft and shape it.
