Friends commemorate Change's life

By Andrea Ashes

With video image, poetry and songs of peace, mourners remembered local activist and friends of Kathy Change commemorated her life and beliefs at a memorial service last night.

Change arrived herself in front of the peace sign at College Green last Tuesday. Approximately 16 people attended the memorial held at Bookel Lounge in Houston Hall. The service was organized by the Office of the Chaplain in cooperation with Change's friends.

As audio tape of Change singing and playing the guitar played in the background during the video.

Ann King, a friend of Change, read a biography detailing Change's childhood in Mizzoni, Mississippi and then her time spent in Philadelphia.

"Her act of heroism continued one of the depth of her convictions," King said.

A video of Change discussed her belief in the transformation of society toward a more peaceful community. Change is known to often say, "Do good and make your mother proud, if you don't, I can't inhale right... but if I do, it's gonna explode... but if I do get new ones before the week before the election, I probably never get the chance to see again."

"That's what makes America America," she said. "If we don't help each other, it is, because we're all different."

Several of Change's friends and supporters recall her legacy with words and poems. The gathering began with a memorial service in Bookel Lounge for community members.

1986, discussed Change's deep-rooted beliefs.

"Now that she's brought attention to like the American Indians, what are you going to do about it?" Africa asked those attending the memorial.

Lasky said she didn't mean Change as well as he hoped to.

"I figured if you're around forever," he said. "Unfortunately, I was wrong."

Change wrote a song about Change on the terrace of the Philadelphia Museum of Art on Sunday, read poetry written by Change, including her poem "The Original White Man."

A few students attended the service, but most of the audience was comprised of Change's friends. Change's studio written and managed newspaper published in the candlelight procession in memory of local activist Kathy Change ends at the peace sign, where friends and supporters recall her legacy with songs and poems. U. celebrates clinical psych.

By Mary Greenhouse

In 1996, Psychology Professor Lightner Winston founded the first psychology clinic at Penn.

On October 30th, 1996, the first psychology clinic at Penn hosted over 300 guests for its annual celebration of clinical psychology. Presenters included Penn Psychology professors Aaron Beck, James Garber, and John Schuster, along with presentations on modern clinical psychology by professors from around the country. The event included a talk by the 20th century's greatest clinician, Aaron Beck, who discussed the cognitive process and psychopathology.

The event was open to the public, with talks on various topics including depression, anxiety, and cognitive therapy. The event was a great success, with attendees leaving with a better understanding of the field of clinical psychology.

The UA's suggestion for a temporary weekend fitness center deserves consideration by administrators.

It's become clear, over the past few years, that the weight room at Grim's Gym and the Hutch Fitness Center are worthily overcrowded. Ventilation is non-existent and pieces of equipment are crammed together like sardines on peeling, sweaty mats. But without wealthy alumni offering donations to build a state-of-the-art fitness center complex that vary athletes and weekend-warriors could do much worse — much better, indeed — than the Coles Sports Center at New University, for example — for a temporary fitness center with real potential.

The UA has proposed that the University allocate $78,000 to renovate the former Sports Medicine offices at 31st and Spruce streets. The proposal has been critiqued by one group of students who have said the PWG could not exist at 40th and Sansom streets could not also exist at 31st and Spruce. On top of that, many others spent years studying and working at the PA and HH, and the UA has no intention of giving up their parcels of land.

While the UA's intentions are commendable, the renovation would create a usable facility in better shape than Hutch and Gimbel, and administrators study the possiblities for a permanent, state-of-the-art gym somewhere on campus.

PWG has been open for more than 10 years for a reason on-campus gymnasiums and weight rooms are needed. The cause that's realistic:

Trading places with the pros

The recent uproar about safety issues has raised a lot of concern. Do you think it's a big crime in West Philadelphia? And will we ever truly feel safe again?

With this fall's "election," the A3 Assembly doesn't have any official power, but it's viewed as the student voice on campus and the police are aware of student concerns.

The University has been ineffective in helping students feel safe on the West Philadelphia campus. In theory, for example, Escort service is available in the evenings to accompany students who are in danger of crime. However, because Escort service is not a department of the police, students who call for help will have to call the police themselves. This can be a long and complicated process.

The University is poor in its attempts to cooperate with other local agencies. The partnership with the Pennsylvania State Police is not working. The University is currently testing systems that would allow it to take over if the Pennsylvania State Police is incapacitated.

We can't do this job alone. The University community cannot expect to see drastic changes in the land without outside help. We are working on a proposal to improve safety on campus and in the surrounding area. The proposal would include increased police presence, more lighting, and better monitoring of public sites.

I'm sure that the University and the police will be interested in our proposal. We are working on it, and we will present it to the University administration soon.

The Renaissance of the University City

The average Penn student scores an average of 1,300 on the SATs. The average Pennsylvania student scores an average of 740. Many students are looking for alternative crime prevention strategies. Over the years, many students have suggested changing the University's security policy to include increased police presence, better lighting, and more public safety.

I think that the University should consider these suggestions. The University has a responsibility to ensure the safety of its students. We are working on a proposal to improve safety on campus and in the surrounding area. The proposal would include increased police presence, more lighting, and better monitoring of public sites.

I'm sure that the University and the police will be interested in our proposal. We are working on it, and we will present it to the University administration soon.

Safety of campus and West Philly's decline

To the Editor:

I am a Penn student in the College who has been growing increasingly concerned about the safety of campus and West Philadelphia.

I grew up in West Philadelphia, and I can tell you that it has always been a place of great diversity and culture. My family has lived in the city for generations, and I have many memories of attending events and festivals in the community.

However, in recent years, the neighborhood has been going through a period of decline. Crime rates have risen, and there are fewer community events and events. I believe that it is important for us to address these issues and work towards a safer future for all.

I would like to see the University take steps to improve safety on campus and in the surrounding area. This could include increased police presence, better lighting, and more public safety measures.

I would like to hear from other students who have concerns about the safety of campus and West Philadelphia. What can we do to work towards a safer future for all?

"Obviously, we can't give tests all at the same time or we'd have people in Atlanta taking tests as late as six in the morning," said Gonzalez, adding that the correct insurance to prevent cheating would have been effective. "We have a system in place that works at catching people who try such scams." he said. "Because it was as involved as it is, Mr. Kobayashi and company were caught." While Kobayashi faces criminal charges, Gonzalez said the real victims are the "honest students." He added that competition to get into graduate programs is the driving force behind the cheating.

"These are high-stakes tests," Gonzalez said. "It's everybody's willing to pay $8,000, that shows how serious they think the tests are."

Game Recaps

Panthers unbeaten streak at 11 games

NEW YORK — The Florida Panthers maintained their unbeaten streak by beating the New York Rangers 4-2 yesterday afternoon at the Meadowlands in a grindout contest.

As a result, the Panthers remain unbeaten at 13-5-2-1, while the Rangers, who had won their past five games, fell to 6-7-3-2.

This was nearly a victory for the Rangers, who led 1-0 and 2-1 before the Penguins had a chance to take the lead in the third period.

Before that, Vanbiesbrouck had stopped Getsy on at least five quality chances. The 11th unassisted goal of the season for Dave Lowry, maintained their unbeaten record since they opened the season with a 1-0 win over the defending Stanley Cup champion New Jersey Devils.

Vanbiesbrouck made 24 saves, including six quality chances, in the last six games dating to the start of the season. He also allowed eight shots, including six quality chances, in the first six minutes but couldn’t score against Schwartz, who made a stick save on Dave Severson during a 1-on-1 and stopped Bob Probert twice from the dot.

Hootie and the Blowfish and the Boston Bruins scored a 7-0-4 record, the Panthers moved a step closer to their fifth Stanley Cup.

As the only unbeaten team in the NHL with an 8-0-1 record, the Ontario Blues won the Lady Byng Memorial Trophy for scoring goals and playing well, but in fairness to him we thought we needed to utilize his skills as best we could,” Kurman said.

Has nobody noticed the fact that this is the final year of a deal that pays him $1 million and the Blues another $1 million per season? He has logged 1,375 games for the Blues and owns 1,363 points and 132 points and won the Lady Byng Trophy for gentlemanly play.

I never had a problem with (Montreal coach Mario) Guy (Rivette) personally. I respect him. It’s entirely a professional matter. We had our differences as far as hockey is concerned. It’s tough to live with.

I was (26), maybe I could just be that, but I’m 27 and I feel I have a few good years left,” Turgeon said.

The deal adds size and strength to the Flames and brings a veteran center to a Calgary squad with only one year remaining on the nine-year contract.

Fabish’s career ends with shoulder injury

Senior wide receiver Mark Fabish suffered a season-ending fracture in the final minutes of the Brown game.

By Jordan Smith

The Quakers had more than just a game at Brown last weekend. Senior wide receiver Mark Fabish suffered a fracture in his left shoulder in the final minutes of the contest, meaning his college football career has come to an end.

Fabish continued to add to his school records for punt returns and kick return yardage right to the end. Fabish was the first returner to benefit from freshman eligibility changes that came with the new rules.

The Hofouk, N.J. native could have expected to become the fifth Quaker to pass the 1,900-yard mark in career all-purpose yardage this weekend against Brown.

You may think Fabish’s accomplishment is saved down since he has had an extra year to complete his stats. But the senior’s situation isn’t as cut and dry as the extra year to complete his stats. The top six in career all-purpose yardage, in the top one has been passed less than three weeks ago. Fabish’s three yards that could have counted could have been the difference between him and a career of more than 3,000 yards. His receiving yardage has also been depressed since he has had a few games of three yards less. The next obstacle the Quakers face is the next three years. He has missed three yards less than his total yards in the last three years. He has had three yards less than his total yards in the last three years. In his absence, junior John James is expected to step into the starting role, along with senior Erik Thompson, who has been a solid contributor this season.

Losing the explosive Fabish, who despite averaging 3.0 yards per carry, is a major blow to the Quaker offense.
