Police try to boost traffic safety

By Erika Makes

Jaysen Brown, emcee, was on hand Thursday to introduce the opening of the new Public Safety mini-station located at 40th and Walnut streets.

But the officers weren't handing out fliers. Instead, they were carrying a container of food, which they were about to distribute.

The mini-station is located approximately one block from the spot where College senior Patrick Fry was shot in September. The University Police are making an attempt at 40th and Locust streets as a way to reach the community.

The University Police also carry a brochure that provides safety tips to motorists and bicyclists, including information on how to avoid pedestrian accidents.

The brochure also informed readers that they could contact them by calling 215-573-3990 or by visiting the Public Safety website at www.upenn.edu/police.

But the most important message of the brochure was to “stop and ask questions.”

University President Judith Rodin joined other officials Friday evening at the opening ceremony for the new Public Safety mini-station at 40th and Walnut streets.

The location between Burger King and Smokey's will house the nascent University mini-station until December 1997 or January 1998. When the move to the new headquarters, the Public Safety headquarters will be reduced to a mini-station.

“This is a mini-station, but I think its impact on the community will be tremendous,” said Pederson.

However, the University Police plan to hold a public meeting to allow people the ability to express their opinions. The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 5, in room 101 of the Levitt Tennis Pavilion.

The meeting is open to the public, and the University Police will take comments on the proposal.
Rodin praises Penn Jewish community

By Becca Iverson
University President Judith Rodin praised the Jewish community for its involvement in campus affairs during her annual Shabbat dinner speech at Hillel this week.

Addressing a crowded hall of students, Rodin also discussed the importance of community in a speech sponsored by Hillel and held at the Faculty Club.

"I believe the notion of community is increasing but it’s also being threatened," she said. "Community is a challenging word and a word that is being challenged."

According to Rodin, the "appearance of the present moment" is to act for change and refer to William Taubman’s Talmudic-era sage’s quote, "If not now, when?" She added that "we must not wait until tomorrow, for tomorrow may never come."

Citing many of Hillel’s activities, such as its soup kitchen and Israel outreach programs, Rodin said, "We tend the event specifically to hear Rodin and hearing her speak, Rosenberg enjoyed Rodin’s speech, "We informed her that Penn’s Hillel deserves a much-needed upgrade and Rodin responded that she did not see the need to upgrade Hillel. "It seemed unremarkable," But College freshman Kiana Rosenberg enjoyed Rodin’s speech, noting, "she addressed the issue of the Penn community, which I think is appropriate." However, Kouchegard did not attend the event specifically to hear Rodin. "She was passive during dinner and Rodin and hearing her speak, she was not impressed."

New Sallie Mae loans help students cover college costs

By Shanna Barke

The Daily Pennsylvanian

A new program provides a solution for undergraduate and graduate students requiring private loans to supplement their government loans. "The Signature Student Loan Program" allows students to obtain a loan from a private lender by filling out a simple application.

"With one simple application per borrower, you can receive a maximum loan amount at a fixed or variable rate," said Sallie Mae spokesperson Denise Boswell. "We understand the importance of a convenient monthly payment. The company is willing to accommodate willing and convenient monthly schedule. Students that are not currently attending school can still transfer schools or continue on to graduate school. They can obtain a loan. We designed the program to serve students pursuing graduate study in health-related fields ranging from veterinary medicine to dentistry to military loans."

Any student at a four-year college or university with a "good credit history" or no history at all is eligible to participate in the program, Boswell added.

Sallie Mae is a private company acting as a "secondary market" for student loans which has provided $35 billion in loans to students at more than 1,050 colleges. The company buys student loan portfolios from local banks across the country, giving these banks the capital to lend. "The money to lend is out," Boswell said. "Sallie Mae then becomes responsible for ensuring that the loan is paid. In order for the company to sell it, it receives several benefits during the repayment period."

Students who borrow through the Sallie Mae Student Loan Program are eligible for several of these benefits. The Signature Student Rewards Program offers students a "low interest rate by half a percent" if they do not miss payments. The program also offers several benefits for graduate students. The Signature Health Loan Program, which is designed for students pursuing graduate study in health-related fields ranging from veterinary medicine to dentistry to military loans.

Students seeking information on the new program—which is available through a national network of lenders—should visit the company's Web site at www.salliemae.com.

Eliminating local bookstores

To the Editor:

I do not attend your school, but I can attest to the good that Barnes & Noble does for the Temple University. Barnes & Noble is a family business that will buy back at the end of the semester. The rightful bookstores are only valid if another professor is going to use that book. If the book becomes outdated or another professor is not ordering that book, then you are stuck with that book. Barnes & Noble cares for your student and runs a family business. They offer you the best price and lowest cost in the lowest book cost in the lowest book cost in the lowest book.

I realize that this might not be a popular opinion, but perhaps the answer is to support your local bookstores. If you do not like the pricing, then you may be able to negotiate a better deal. At the end of the day, it is important to support the local economy, especially during tough economic times.

A victim of racism

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my frustration with the recent events that occurred in our university. As a member of the African American student community, I feel that our voices are not being heard and our concerns are being disregarded.

Recently, there was a racial slur made against a group of students. This incident is unacceptable and cannot be tolerated. As students of color, we deserve to be treated with respect and dignity. It is unfortunate that incidents like these still occur on our campus.

I urge the university administration to take immediate action to address this issue. We need to create a safe and inclusive environment for all students. I believe that the university has a responsibility to provide a supportive and welcoming space for everyone.

Sincerely,

To the Editor:

I am writing to encourage students to take advantage of the many opportunities available to them. Many students feel that they are not being challenged enough in their classes or that they are not being given the opportunity to learn new skills.

I believe that the university should provide students with a range of courses that cater to different learning styles. Students should be encouraged to take courses that interest them, even if they are not required for their major. This will help students to explore new areas of study and develop new skills.

In addition, I believe that the university should provide more opportunities for students to get involved on campus. This could include volunteering, participating in clubs or organizations, or even running for office. These experiences can help students to develop leadership skills and become more engaged members of the university community.

Sincerely,

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the university’s handling of the recent incident. As a member of the faculty, I feel that the university administration has not handled this situation appropriately.

It is important for the university to take this issue seriously and to work with students to develop a plan that addresses their concerns. I believe that the university should provide more resources and support for students who are affected by this incident.

In addition, I believe that the university should provide more transparency and communication with students. It is important for the university to keep students informed about the steps that are being taken to address this issue.

China, U.S. reach agreement on textile trade

WASHINGTON — The United States and China announced yesterday that they had reached an agreement on textile trade. The pact signed yesterday extends the current limits on U.S. imports of Chinese textile exports. Its provisions are part of a broader understanding and trust that prevails in their relationship.

"I'm very happy," said Chinese Foreign Trade Minister Wu Yi. "I hope future negotiations will all be as successful as this one." China holds the largest share of the U.S. textile market after Canada, with 43.6 billion in sales in 1996. The last year the figures are available, U.S. textile manufacturers shipped 8.4 billion in garments and fabric to China in 1996, a figure Hayes said could be duplicated in improved market access and operations performance by U.S. exporters.

After almost two years of limitations, both sides agreed on a new set of textile quotas, the successful completion of which may reflect "very difficult" steps taken over a good will.

Washington has agreed to work with Beijing on China's long-standing efforts with the world's main textile trade body, the World Trade Organization, and another U.S. textile delegation was under way last this past week to talk.

Peruvian police refrain from provoking rebels

Meanwhile, Canada is believed to be attempting to broker a deal to allow the rebels to fly to Cuba.

LIMA, Peru - An armored troop carrier pundit on Sunday for an hour, without provoking the leftist rebels inside. Two tanks and three armored personnel carriers, holding 12 hostages, last week responded to a similar patrol, nickel ing 72 hostages, after a day after President Alberto Fujimori promised the police on Saturday they would refrain from launching a large-scale offensive against the rebels outside the residence.

Fujimori, who met Saturday in Canada with Japanese Prime Minster Shintaro Abe, admitted that the police behavior was a mistake and said the officers who made the obscene gestures would be punished. He acknowledged that he did not have full information on the jailed leaders, who were last heard from on November 15, but added that he had no information on how they were treated.

The Peruvians are obviously looking around. Vincent said he was impressed by the Cameron's officials might try to use the talks to allow the rebels to fly to Cuba.

"Until rebel leader Omar Masri compromises that he doesn't have to fly to the jungle and is prepared to go an other country, this is all pretty speculative," Vincent said.

Fujimori flew to Washington after the meeting and was greeted at the Washington International Airport by a warm and friendly president.

President Bill Clinton was favorably impressed by the Cameron's officials might try to use the talks to allow the rebels to fly to Cuba.

Fujimori's visit to the United States was prefaced yesterday by a source at the residence unless rebels harmed the Reedham's leaders.

The decision, to take effect Wednesday, is seen by government officials as a way to protect the security forces from attack and to protect the hostages from harm.

Thugs massacre Algerians

ALGERIA, Algeria - A group of men armed with knives and axes decapitated 11 people who had been forced from their homes in a village near the city of Medea, the EL Watan newspaper reported yesterday.

The attack was the latest in a series of car bombings and attacks on foreign workers in the capital this month.

The EL Watan reported that the victim had been taken to the Moragas Medical Hospital in Medea, where he was said to be dead.

The attack was carried out by a group of men in masks who drove up to the Medea hospital and began shooting.

The driver of the car told the police that the group had been shooting at the hospital from a car nearby.

The driver of the car was shot in the head and died. The driver was then taken to the hospital, where he died.

The police said they were investigating the incident, but no suspects had been arrested.

Serbian riot police flexes its muscles

The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Hardline riot police beat protesters and fired tear gas and water cannons yesterday in the biggest show of force in 75 days of anti-government protests in the capital.

At least 18 protesters were injured, independent media reported.

Tonight, a crime was committed against the people of Belgrade," opposition leader Vuk Draskovic said live on independent station Radio Index, on the 75th straight day of protests in bitter cold.

The police action came after a tense four-hour standoff yesterday morning on a Belgrade bridge, opposition leaders said.

The police assault indicated that President Slobodan Milosevic could be moving to crush the protests that have shaken his government for 1 1/2 months.

Past midnight, police were still beating protesters at the central Republic Square. An Associated Press reporter was chased by the back, and cameramen for Associated Press Television, Reuters Television and CNN were also beaten.

Two seminar halls were lightly damaged and police said they were trying to bring everything they need for their operations.

There is no more Gandhi-style resistance," one Mladic spokesman for the defense said.

Mladic, the head of the Democratic Party, also denied the Associated Press that police had pushed him. He was not harmed.

Draskovic, the third leader of the Zajedno opposition alliance, said he was chased by police and rats were fed at his car as he fled, according to the independent radio station.

He said he was hiding because he feared he would otherwise be killed or arrested.

The police action came after a tense four-hour standoff yesterday morning on a Belgrade bridge, which began when riot police prevented Mladic from leading thousands of his supporters to the daily pro-democracy rally. "Come out, citizens of Belgrade!" Mladic, leader of the Democratic Party, shouted. "Mladic is here!"

The demonstrators are demanding that the government honor opposition setbacks in November 17 municipal elections. Mladic's government refused to accept the opposition victories in Belgrade and 13 other major cities, even though they were confirmed by international observers.

Israel, Palestinians resume talks to resume Mideast peace talks

Prime-minister Benjamin Netanyahu expressed interest in re-starting peace talks with Syria as well.

Israel and the Palestinians resume talk Thursday at the Golan Strip with "a great feeling of hope" toward a wider Mideast settlement that could involve Syria, Israel, the United States and the Palestinian Authority.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, who spoke after Arafat's appearance before a Palestinian-Israeli joint commission, said he would probably go there in two months with "a very large business delegation." He was looking for a way to get Syrian President Hafez Assad to resume talks with it. Talks broke down a year ago over Syria's demand for land.

"We are eye to eye on the need for the expansion of peace and economic relations," Netanyahu said.

Netanyahu and Mubarak, standing side by side and looking relaxed on the long trip, both first face to face meeting in six months — had been "very good." Netanyahu said.

"There were no obstacles and indeed achieve peace," Mubarak said.

The Egyptian president said he was pleased, said their hour long session was done with "a great feeling of hope." He was charged Thursday with kid- napping the four other girls, raping them and the two murders.

"I'm confident as a result of today's meeting that his talks with Arafat and Egypt are going to be successful," Netanyahu said.
