Academic controversy rocks Athletic Dept.

After a star football player was found ineligible, the Athletic Dept. tried to arrange a last-minute independent study.

By Scott Leaman and Tammy Reiss

The Daily Pennsylvania

In the aftermath of what professors called a failed attempt by the Athletic Department to cover up a star football player’s academic insubordinability, the University must form a panel to investigate what had it been forced to do in its history.

The University will investigate whether Athletic Department officials tried to arrange what one History professor described as an "obviously inappropriate" independent study course for fifth-year College senior Mitch Marrow, a two-time all-Ivy League defensive tackle and pro prospect after they realized his five victories.

The controversy began about two weeks ago, when Associate Director Donnie Coxen Fuckem Puts, who is responsible for the History Department, informed University President and Chief Executive Officer John Ball that Marrow was new to the course he had dropped.

The office rejected the request because the deadline to add courses had passed September 6.

The course was accordingly dropped.

Campus observes AIDS Day

Speakers cautioned students "not to mix sex and alcohol."

By David Glasner

The Daily Pennsylvania

Combining comedy with substance, AIDS educators T.J. Sullivan and Joel Goldman drive home the dangers of mixing alcohol and sex in a lecture commemorating World AIDS Day last night in a lecture centering worldwide AIDS education.

Sullivan and Goldman — both comics and co-founders of Sexual Health to draw attention to the deadly disease — have been meeting with Quern to relate to their presentation.

They have been meeting with Quern to relate to their presentation.

Since making their first presentation five years ago, Sullivan and Goldman originally met on Sullivan’s first day as a freshman at Indiana University. Although Goldman was a senior and Revolution Allies Alpha Hit is the time, they became friends and kept in touch even after leaving the school.

A few years later, Sullivan — who was working as an alcohol and health educator — was preparing to leave his office on a Friday afternoon. Sullivan asked him to rejoin his presentation.

Goldman told said: "I had to go live the High Rise North, and to be honest, it comes with a few headaches. This week, it seems to have gotten worse.

The issue calls into question the balance of academics and athletics.

By Tammy Reiss

An investigation into the Athletic Department’s attempt to maintain a star football player’s eligibility has not yet begun, but the controversy is already starting to stir up strong feelings among the student body.

"It’s obvious that the Athletic Department is trying to protect its own interests," said one History professor.

Two top History professors have complained to the Athletic Department about efforts to arrange an independent study course for fifth-year College senior Mitch Marrow last week. The request came just before the team’s final game of the season against Cornell.

The controversy began about two weeks ago, when Associate Director Donnie Coxen Fuckem Puts, who is responsible for the History Department, informed University President and Chief Executive Officer John Ball that Marrow was new to the course he had dropped.

The office rejected the request because the deadline to add courses had passed September 6.

After 33 years on a daily deadline as a reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer, CU's Richard Shister has returned to the newspaper business.

"I'm thinking about starting a support group for parents of breatheless children," Shister said with a playful grin.

"I'm a mother and a sexologist. I define sexuality not by the defining aspect of one's gender, but by the defining aspect of one's vantage point on sexuality," he said, adding that if you are gay does not have to be a big secret, "you can have a successful career, a family and be out, and the republic will not fall." He said that he would give up his backpack and start carrying his briefcase again, "because that's a very upsetting to me," she said.

But Shister won't leave campus altogether — the new center would pay him a stipend for operating costs.

David Rittenhouse Laboratory

The Department of Physics and Astronomy invites the community to a series of open observatory nights. The Observatory on the roof of the David Rittenhouse Laboratory (corner of 33rd and Walnut) will be open from 7:00 to 9:30 PM on Tuesday, December 2, weather permitting. Witness with your own eyes the rings of Saturn, the moons of Jupiter, Uranus, and photons that have traveled for 2 million years from the Andromeda Galaxy to hit your eye.

The observatory is equipped with both historic and modern telescopes. All ages are welcome and encouraged; reservations are not required. Call 215-898-5995 during observatory hours to check weather conditions, or see: http://dept.physics.upenn.edu/pubobserving.html.

But Sullivan also reminded stu-

know who have HIV or AIDS.

"We're going to start losing our friends if we don't start caring in a very active way," he said.

Many audience members said they left the program laughing at the speakers' comments but understanding the seriousness of the issue.

The humor "truly opened people up to what they were saying," College junior Jason Christopher said.

And College freshman Krista Saunders praised the pair for their efforts, noting that the presentation brought
the issue "close to home."

World AIDS Day also marked the demonstrations occurred nationwide, as artistic communities sought to draw attention to AIDS' devastating impact.

Pennsylvania Hospital and HUP were academically affiliated until 1993, when Pennsylvania became affiliated with the Jefferson University Health System. Last year however, Pollack clarified that the two institutions were not removing the strong relationship between the two entities.

And in choosing to join Penn's
Health System last year, Pennsylvania Hospital turned down a similar offer from the Jefferson Health System at the time.

With the addition of Pennsylvania tem employees will rise to more than 18,000 employees.

"Our separate heritage is to be proactive, and that will be our combined future," KeUey said.

Internet companies say they'll clean up their act

WASHINGTON - The on-line in- dustry, hoping to keep regulators at bay, has given the green light to keep cyberpimps from their kids.

Building on pledges made to Presi- dent Clinton in July, industry groups at a three-day meeting discussed how to educate parents about antispam software and how to highlight Internet sites that are clean enough for kids.

"Technology is plc medical replace- ment for good parenting," said Amer- ican Online Chairman Steve Case. "It's up to parents and parents to make the choice they think they're appropriate.

Father kills his kids after losing custody battle

SHEPHERDSVILLE, Ky. - A man shot and killed his three sons and his ex-wife's daughter because he was afraid he would never get custody of them, police said yesterday.

The man, identified as William Streeter, swallowed Sunday night, roughly two hours after the children, ages 4 to 12, were shot from behind with a semi-automatic assault rifle inside the auto shop where he lived and worked.

"He told them to close their eyes, not to look and then he shot them," said Det. Troy Collins.

Palestinian officials reject Israeli troop plan

JERUSALEM - Israel plans to send 5,000 troops from its West Bank land - an offer with several strings attached - that Palestinian officials said on Sunday they rejected as they prepared for a meeting.

The 15-member Security Council that governs Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, is expected to meet today.

"It is a very dangerous offer," said Ayman Shamas, the Palestinian official who was making the offer, which has been denied by the Palestinians.

Congress is considering a request from the Palestinians for an independent counsel to investigate charges against former President Bill Clinton.

Reno pressed for an independent counsel. Republicans on Capitol Hill have been seeking a special prosecutor to investigate alleged illegalities.

RENO

Reno unlikely to appoint independent counsel

Reno is expected to reach a decision on independent counsel for Clinton, Gore and Hazel O'Leary today.

Reno is interested in setting up a task force to look into the allegations, sources familiar with the situation said.

Reno is under pressure from both parties to make a decision on independent counsel. Republicans want an independent lawyer to investigate the charges.

The security council is expected to take up the issue of UN weapons inspections in Iraq.

Cleveland — The Cleveland Indians celebrated last night being home to Arizona, marking the franchise's first game since acquiring Wade Boggs from the Boston Red Sox.

Arizona's owner, Jerry Colangelo, divorced from his wife of eight years, wanted to be close to his children so he could watch them grow up. He felt it was a better fit for him to be in Arizona.

"This is the most important decision of the rest of my life," the retired owner said. "I knew they couldn't be caught holding us."

The Indians played a great team with tremendous intensity and great fun. "This is the best baseball team I've ever seen," Colangelo said. "I don't want to see any of them in this season."

Playing on a court which was in shambles, the Quakers went 1-2 over the break and finished sixth in the eight-team field.

CAUSA, Puerto Rico — The Penn men's basketball team headed to Puerto Rico to play a three-game mini-series last weekend after dropping two games in the San Juan Shootout. It lasted about five more games.

The Quakers were seeded sixth heading into the eight-team tournament and left as the sixth-place team, as coping with a lack of height proved too difficult a task.

Not only did Penn drop two of three games, they also lost point guard Michael Jordan to an injury. In the first half of Penn's 60- 47 win over second-seeded Washington State on Friday, Jordan remembered being on a sprained ankle and did not find it day-to-day with a sprain.

Penn's worst game was its first. The Quakers were simply dominated by the Evansville Aces. 96-48, in the consolation championship Sunday. Just four players accounted for 86 Aces points, most of them from layups and short-range jumpers, but Evansville's strength came from its four触摸es, who easily outplayed Penn's offense and defense.

"They have must have scouted the first two games of this tournament, and did a great job at executing," Penn forward Paul Raimondi said.

When we were setting our final seven, the whole entire Evansville bench was yelling out exactly what the play was," Evansville also pulled the ball off offense, taking advantage of its quick transition game. "We know they pushed it and find it in line," Penn coach John Tschida said. "We made a couple foolish mistakes and lost it. We gave up a four-point play in transition.

There were Penn's offensive problems. Guard Matt LaPorte stepped up in the closing minutes, but it was too late for the Quakers to stage a comeback. Evansville limited Penn to 28.8 percent shooting, missed 17 of 37 shots, and was 14 of 29 from the foul line. Evansville "we had a good taste of paradise, but after dropping two DAYTON 1-2 over the break and finished sixth in the eight-team field. "We have had no luck with our luck," said the coach of the Quakers for a fifth season — one that has been plagued at times by injuries to key players. However, "Penn's off-season "was one of the best off-seasons in a long time, according to senior point guard Matt LaPorte, who had 11 points and five assists against the Aces.

What would be the best possible result for the Penn women's fencing team for a tough season-opening meet? How about bringing back part of their 1999 NICAC championship team for a little friendly competition? No problem.

The Fencing program will host its annual Meet at 1 p.m. on Thursday. This event brings together at least five former fencing champions of the NICAC. May be the closest the Quakers got. Following a Mai- terial championship不会 start to take third place in Friday's game and finish behind host Unc-Wilmingt- on and Ball State. The Quakers finished third in the consolation game against Unc-Wilmington, but freshman Diana Amanzom and captain Michelle Sa- do and Colleen Kelly kept the Quakers in the first half. Kelly led the team with 12 points, followed by senior Colleen Kelly with 10 points.

Freshman Diana Caramanico led the Quakers with 32 points.

Put one in the victory column for the Penn women's basketball team. The Quakers defeated East Tennessee State for their consolation game against East Tennessee State Sunday to take third place in Friday's consolation game. The Quakers were seeded sixth heading into the eight-team field and set the matchup with the Cougars for a fifth season — one that has been plagued at times by injuries to key players. However, the off-season "was one of the best off-seasons in a long time, according to senior point guard Matt LaPorte, who had 11 points and five assists against the Aces.
