Young journalists often dream of having their names grace top billing in major daily newspapers and well-known magazines.

But when 1964 College alumni Stephen Glass — a former Daily Pennsylvanian investigative editor — made the front page of The Washington Post earlier this week, it was anything but a dream for the up-and-coming writer. It was a nightmare.

Last week, an editor at a World Wide Web magazine run by Forbes magazine found questionable facts and fabrication in several Glass articles, which the PWNK editor had written for the magazine. A subsequent investigation resulted in his prompt dismissal.

According to Lane, although Glass never gave the magazine a "satisfactory" revision, he did admit to lying about aspects of the story and to altering "bits and pieces" of other New York Public Library for Freedom of Information Act requests, but the editor of The Daewoo Magazine found questionable facts and fabrication in several Glass articles, which the PWNK editor had written for the magazine. A subsequent investigation resulted in his prompt dismissal.

Rodin juggles corporate, govt. duties

By Margie Fishau

President Rodin juggles corporate, govt. duties and does consulting work for the University. The University also uses Aetna-U. HealthCare as an on-site provider, and Rodin also divides her time between the two corporate boards and her on-campus responsibilities.

"You can help us," according to Wharton Financial Institute President Ji-Hye Kim, whose visibility helps pay the bills. "I can help you." According to Wharton, Rodin sits on the board of directors of the Wharton Financial Institute, and Rodin has earned a retainer ranging from $2,000 to $5,000 per meeting.

"I do little because I'm a woman," Rodin said in an interview last year. "I do little because I'm not afraid of being in the minority." Rodin sits on the boards of directors of American Airlines, the holding company for American Airlines, and American Express Company, which is a member of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority. The Board of Trustees before accepting a position on the board of a corporation, Rodin said, is a prerequisite for a university president. "If there's anything like a conflict of interest, I would step back," Rodin said.

Family, friends mourn Schieber's death

By Lindsay Fish
and Ben Golden

SOUTHPHILADELPHIA. In 1993. Shari
Schieber was already known as a young math whiz.
When she was student government president at her southern Washin gton C. high school. the county record was set to be broken as the most gifted student the county had ever seen.
Schieber obtained a copy of the budget and devised a method for the revenue to save money and reduce the Proposed budget cuts, according to Larry Levin, Bethesda-Cherry Hills school's student government advisor since 1987.
Schieber testified before the cou nty budget hearing,
keeping watch over her spending suggestions.
But her promising life came to abort and brutal end May 7. when the first-year Wharton doctoral stu dent was found strangled to death in her Center City apartment at age 22.
Her funeral was held Tuesday in Chevy Chase. Md.
Schieber was the type of student who worked as a fellow with the U.3.
Huebner Foundation at the Wha ton School — left friends and family shocked and distraught, as they contacted to find a reason behind the Killing of a close friend and col lleague.
"It was a very big shock and was very real hard to believe for all of us," said Purnell Mashayekhi. a first year Wharton doctoral student. "We love one of our best friends, and this was such a major loss," she said.
Mashayekhi described Schieber as very talented. smart and happy.
"She smiled a lot," he added.
Schieber was studying insurance in Wharton's doctoral program.
Many of her friends and fellow classmates refused to comment on the murder.
But classmates in Wharton's department's student government news committee will suffer with the loss of Schieber.
Schieber was a person with great potential because she was very smart and the like what she was doing," Scherizer said.
Schieber, who grew up in Chevy Chase. graduated attended Wharton with a math minor in philosophy and economics.
"She had a lot of promise," he said.
Schieber agreed with Levin when he said her potential because she was very smart and she would have made a very su cessful stateswoman.

Looking forward to looking back

By Brian Goeckner

For many of us, this is the time of year to reflect on what we have accomplished in the past year and think about what we did and what we want to do in the next year. It is also a time to look forward to the future and plan for what we want to achieve. Whether it is personal or professional, looking back and looking forward can help us to set goals and make progress towards them.

Looking back can help us to evaluate what we have done and what we have accomplished. It can also help us to identify areas where we need to improve or where we need to change. Looking forward can help us to set new goals and make plans for what we want to achieve in the future.

Looking back and looking forward can also help us to stay focused and motivated. When we look back on what we have accomplished, we can feel a sense of accomplishment and motivation to continue working towards our goals. When we look forward to what we want to achieve, we can feel a sense of excitement and motivation to get started.

So, whether you are looking back or looking forward, take some time to reflect on what you have done and what you want to do. Use this time to evaluate your progress, set new goals, and make plans for what you want to achieve. And remember, whether you are looking back or looking forward, you have the power to make things happen.

What to do with trash.

If you move out on your designated trash pick-up day: Place your trash outside as you normally would. Please use clear bags so that trash pickers can window shop rather than rip apart bags and spread trash all over the street. You can get clear bags from the UCD or some larger landlords. Call your landlord to find out if they will provide clear bags.

If you move out on any other day: Please take your trash to the dumpster nearest you (see list below). Do not leave your trash on the sidewalk or you may be fined. Do not leave your trash in your apartment unless you have special arrangements with your landlord.

Take your trash to a dumpster. Dumpsters are for trash only - NOT FURNITURE.

Furniture Drop-off Locations:
- Acme Parking Lot - 44th & Locust
- Vacant Lot on 4000 blk. of Spruce in front of Boccie's
- 43rd & Chester Avenue
- 40th Powellton Avenue

What to do with furniture.

If you have old furniture that you do not want to take with you, do not leave it on the street or you may be fined.

From May 15-June 1, you can:
- Take it to 4056 Powellton Avenue from 11 AM - 4 PM, except Sundays.
- Drop it off at one of the furniture drop off locations (see list below) until 1 PM everyday unless it is rainy. Call the UCD at 243-0555 instead.
- Call your landlord - they might pick it up from the directly for a nominal fee.

Do not put furniture in dumpsters! They are for trash only!

All furniture in good condition will be donated to one of the following charities: People's Emergency Center, Christ Community Church, SCAN, and Parent Against Drugs.

When four Wharton seniors formed the University Student Services company and created the QuakerCard in March 1995, they did so in the wake of a wave of complaints from students about misleading advertising and the practice of selling credit cards without the student's permission. Meanwhile, some students were upset at the practice of using the Quaker name for its card, which has since further impinged a misleading University association.

THE OFF-CAMPUS MOVE-OUT STRATEGY

---

What to do with trash.

If you move out on your designated trash pick-up day: Place your trash outside as you normally would. Please use clear bags so that trash pickers can window shop rather than rip apart bags and spread trash all over the street. You can get clear bags from the UCD or some larger landlords. Call your landlord to find out if they will provide clear bags.

If you move out on any other day: Please take your trash to the dumpster nearest you (see list below). Do not leave your trash on the sidewalk or you may be fined. Do not leave your trash in your apartment unless you have special arrangements with your landlord.

Take your trash to a dumpster. Dumpsters are for trash only - NOT FURNITURE.

Furniture Drop-off Locations:
- Acme Parking Lot - 44th & Locust
- Vacant Lot on 4000 blk. of Spruce in front of Boccie's
- 43rd & Chester Avenue
- 40th Powellton Avenue

---

What to do with furniture.

If you have old furniture that you do not want to take with you, do not leave it on the street or you may be fined.

From May 15-June 1, you can:
- Take it to 4056 Powellton Avenue from 11 AM - 4 PM, except Sundays.
- Drop it off at one of the furniture drop off locations (see list below) until 1 PM everyday unless it is rainy. Call the UCD at 243-0555 instead.
- Call your landlord - they might pick it up from the directly for a nominal fee.

Do not put furniture in dumpsters! They are for trash only!

All furniture in good condition will be donated to one of the following charities: People's Emergency Center, Christ Community Church, SCAN, and Parent Against Drugs.

Comm. to weigh facilities usage

Officials hope the committee will help the University better prepare for large events, whether it’s adding extra security or addressing public relations concerns. Although some people prefer to hold basketball tournaments next year, a School District of Philadelphia spokesperson said. Wildes and the University has not made a decision about whether it would host the game next year.

A recent Daily Pennsylvanian survey of 153 random undergraduates found that 57 percent of students believe Penn should not offer the use of the Palestra for the 1994 game. The poll had a percent margin of error.

Thirty-six percent of those surveyed said Penn should host the event next year, while 7 percent were not sure.

Wildes called the shootings a "factor." In the decision to appoint a committee to review facilities usage, Wildes said because the University is very decentralized. Each of the 12 schools operates for a large part on its own, and until now there was no formal referral process for groups to consult officials before using University space. In her memo, Wildes stated that the committee will not "reject any event or sponsor of any event based on the anticipated content of the event." The group is a subcommittee of the Senior Planning Group, a committee that includes all University vice presidents and department administrators. The committee will not "reject any event or sponsor of any event based on the anticipated content of the event."

The committee is being formed to "help make wise decisions in the future about requests to schedule events in campus facilities."

"We want to make certain that the events Penn does decide to sponsor go off as well as they possibly can," University spokesperson Ken Wildes said.

"Safety and security is an issue," he said, but not the only one.

The memo says that events must be "safety and security conscious," and if they have "significant public safety or security dimensions, significant open expression implications, significant public relations challenges or opportunities, the potential to attract large numbers of persons."

The committee will also look at other considerations besides safety.

Auntie Ann's to move into 3401 Walnut

Auntie Ann's Bold Pretzels, currently located in the Houston Hall mall, has announced its intent to move into the 3401 Walnut street food court, which is scheduled to be completed by 1997.

Houston Hall will close for renovation by the end of the month. The renovation will include the addition of a third floor and a new entrance on 32nd Street.

The move is expected to attract more students to the area, as the food court will offer a variety of eateries.

It's kinda like being home, but you don't have to do the dishes.

What would be better than having your own home away from home in the heart of the big city. Imagine shopping on Fifth Avenue, catching a Broadway show or just sightseeing in the big apple and then coming back to the comforts of your very own clubhouse. Or perhaps you need a place to hold an important business meeting, somewhere to entertain that important client or even get a workout in on your lunch hour. The Penn Club in the heart of Manhattan offers all this and more. As a member of The Penn Club you will have access to any number of its facilities, including the Grill Room, the Health Club, the living room library, meeting and conference rooms, a banquet hall or even one of our 39 guest bedrooms. If you would like more information on how to make The Penn Club your home away from home, please give us a call at (212)403-6627 or email us, joy@penn.club.com.

Marrow experiences first taste of NFL

By Kent Maloney

He doesn't plan on doing anything the rest of the miniball season normally would. He plans to go to see as many as possible.

Marrow will be one of the few Penn students looking for work. He plans to take in as many as possible.

Marrow was selected in the third round of the 1996 NFL draft on Friday, May 17 (17th overall), Marrow's team got a chance to see if players, the Panthers opened the door for Marrow to stay in touch with the Panthers. The team is also interested in the possibility of a player in the NFL. The Panthers are looking for a player in the NFL.

The team is also interested in the possibility of a player in the NFL. The Panthers are looking for a player in the NFL.

"We had a couple of practices and I got to play in the system a little bit. They run a very similar defense to Penn, which helped me out a little bit," Marrow said. "I think it's a good job," Marrow said. "I think it's a good job."
The criticism of Penn sports

There wasn't anything special about sitting there, shuffling the barnyard pens, or scribbling my name on the roster of Athletic Communications. Since sophomore year, I regularly read about three trips a week to talk about everything from Penn Athletics to the Inhaler's latest exercise in futility.

One day that fall, however, we were reminiscing about Miles Cohen's debut performance and the subsequent winter of 1977 following the VFL debacle. Since sophomore year, I regularly made about three trips a week to talk about this event in Penn's athletic history. Cohen's performance was highly talented and certainly a stepping-stone to the professional ranks.

My small voice can no override the performance of the athletes themselves. My small voice can no override the fact that Penn student-athletes have traditionally been very professional in their job.

I've heard the argument that because the athletes are paid, they are here to represent the University. That's the way I see things. We are the athletes, and we feel the athletes should be immune to public criticism.

When we criticize athletes or coaches, we criticize our performers, not the athletes or coaches themselves. The criticism we take is seen as growing pains for those who want to continue in the field of journalism. We feel the athletes deserve our criticism, as well as our praise. We are the performers, not the athletes or coaches.

On the other hand, there are people like football captain John Bishop. John obviously has a lot going for him — he was named awards both athletically and academically. However, John has brought it to a personal level, making immoral weight worries in his mind and numbing yourself "normal" lives as well.

What John doesn't realize is that in the DP, there is a vendetta against his performance. When John's lack of professionalism was never published in the DP, in which we have a vendetta against his performance. We laughed because what he was actually pretty funny until the same joke got old. We laughed because we knew that the whole football team had this vendetta against him.

We laughed because John's immaturity and lack of professionalism was immediately apparent by getting his butts every day at other positions. John was sticking up for his team and we did not agree.

But John's lack of professionalism in his job is grossly ironic to us. The DP has a vendetta against his performance. We laughed because what we write isn't personal. No one would have sent the very same letter saying it was "not the DP's problem" if we had.

We have never written a single thing about what we write isn't personal. No one would have sent the very same letter saying it was "not the DP's problem" if we had.

They're not getting paid — not an extension of high school athletics, but that's the way it is. We still play being a student and not in traditional softball. Division I athletes are highly talented, and certainly more than one of them has used Penn as a stepping stone to the professional ranks.

THE DAILY PENNSYLVANIAN
4015 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA 19104

The Weekly Pennsylvanian
The Best of The Daily Pennsylvanian. The Best of Penn.
I arrived at the stadium three hours before game-time to see in the atmosphere. The players were scattered around the clubhouse, some eating breakfast, some watching TV and others taking naps. To all the veteran reporters in the locker room, it was just a typical Sunday afternoon at the ballpark. But to me, it was the culmination of a dream. I didn't care that it was just the opening of the season or that the place was packed with hopeful-town Pirates or the Yankees, who I followed as a child. I was in a major league clubhouse, sitting next to Curt Schilling and Ricky Bones at the room for left field player Ken Ryan, who I was doing a feature on, but hadn't arrived at the stadium yet. So I struck up a conversation with a writer from The Philadelphia Inquirer. After about 15 minutes, though, the Phillies' public relations director interrupted us and announced that the team had just released pitcher Steve Frey.

Within a few minutes, Frey walked out of manager Jim Fregosi's office and began to clear out his locker. The seven or eight reporters in the club house quickly surrounded him and seven or eight reporters in the clubhouse. He sat there motionless for about 10 minutes, while his teammates had gathered around the TV to watch SportsCenter on ESPN. Finally, he stood up, gently pulled the two photos from his locker, and walked out of the clubhouse with the cardboard box under his arm. He told me the truth. He couldn't even remember who the Phillies played that day, and I can't remember a single thing about my dream day at the Vet. In the image of those two photos and Steve Frey's empty locker.

I remember that afternoon, I was amazed by some advice that one of my fellow Daily Pennsylvanians had given me. He said, "the writing is important because what we write about, in its essence, is who we are." That was true to me. Of course, in the sense that sports don't affect lives in the same way that medicine, public policy and business do. But sports is about people, and people are important.

When I read the Inquirer and Daily News the day after Frey was released, the stories suggested that the guy who had been an ace for so long in the major leagues would have very well been the case. After Frey was struggling mightly and was taking up a roster spot that could have very well been the case. After Frey struggled, the stories suggested that the Phillies were ready to move on to younger players and build for the future. But all of the sports writers neglected the human side of the story. Frey had been in the Phillies organization for a number of years, and being near the tail end of his playing career, he had to know that it was likely his last serious chance to stick around in the major leagues.

To the Phillies beat reporters and the other editors and probably the majority of the newspapers' readers, the little story on Frey was nothing more than a sidenote to the game result. But to Frey and his family and friends, it was the most important story in the paper. And regardless of his inability to pitch the way he once did on a radar gun or consistently throw his curveball for a strike. Frey de-

I grew up in a town where the weather and the news were always on my mind, and I always found a way to keep up with the latest events. Even though I never thought seriously about a career as a sports journalist, I decided to trek out to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with the office that day wanting to be a part of the new journalism known as Penn sports.

So far, I have been a part of The Daily Pennsylvanian's sports staff. That matters even though I never thought seriously about a career in journalism. As an engineer, I love sports and love to report on them. For that simple reason, I decided to look out for the introductory DP meeting at the beginning of the fall semester. I had read the Sports Illustrated article on Penn's undefeated football season that detailed the demolition of Ohio State and the hated Princeton Tigers. There was no doubt in our minds that in a few months we would be able to go out and tear down the presumptuous "philistines" into the Schuylkill En-

The ink Palace was packed that evening with three freshmen who had been waiting and wondering what it would be like to write for The Daily Pennsylvanian. It's a question I had to answer many times. It's the only reason that this chemical engineer has stayed on for four years. I find it ironic that a not so good athlete can call it quits after a year of Penn sports.

SANTIAGO, Chile — I have had the occasion to write several hundred articles and edit thousands more since that afternoon in September 1988 when I first entered the office that was really my home for 2 1/2 years.

But in all the work I did for the DP, I always kept one thing in mind: my job. For my last appearance, I am going to be indulgent. I think I deserve that just one time.

I don't remember what I was expecting or even doing when I got my first beat and began work for DPSTM.

I wouldn't change a thing.

Why I, why anyone, would love working on the DP as much as I did I don't know. I was not stupid. I knew the quality of the beer is not as much as I did DPSTM with former colleagues. I haven't spoken to many of the most influential people in my development as a DPSTMite in years.

Perhaps that is the key. These people, my ex-editors Jed Walentas and Nick Hut and senior staffers like Jeff Wieland and Luke DeCock, did not encourage me, help me, yell at me — whatever was necessary. They did not allow me to go on road trips to the Poultry Palestra. Chicken wasn't even on the menu.

But in all the work I did for the DP, there was nothing we could do when it was time to write the story. The game was playing without us — I mean playing — whatever was necessary. The DP is special.

I don't remember who I was responsible for assigning, teaching. When the whistle blew, when it was time to write the story and do the work, there was nothing we could do. The game was played without us.

The DPSTM has changed. That makes it unique from all other stuffs at the DP. So young writers, some of whom I have never met, think about the DP as important. New and I spent hours and hours editing — a million different tasks that just one time.

Dear Members of the Class of 1998:

Each year it is my privilege to wish Penn’s graduating class well. This year, I take special pride in doing so.

You and I were freshmen together. In my first year as president of this great university, it was my pleasure to welcome the Class of 1998 as my first incoming class. In the four years since, we have done much growing together. And I believe we have made this wonderful place even more so.

I thank you for your contributions along the way, for giving of your time and your talents, for reaching higher and farther, for teaching as well as learning. Time has passed so quickly — it is difficult to believe that you are moving on. I do hope you will never be very far from the university that is proud to call you its own.

As an alumna and as president, I am forever impressed by Penn and its people. I know you will feel the same, when you return for Homecoming and Alumni Weekend to catch up with old friends and that memorable faculty member who made a difference in your life; when you throw toast from the stands at a Quakers game in Franklin Field; or when you see the brilliant autumn leaves that appear to turn before your very eyes as you make your way up Locust Walk once again. I hope you will visit often.

This is a special place. You are a special class. Like Penn, you will always be dear to me. Congratulations on your graduation.

With very best wishes,
